HOMELAND SECURITY AND GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS
WASHINGTON, DC 20510-8250

September 5, 2014

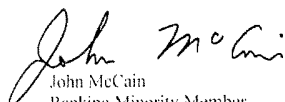

The Honorable Thomas R. Carper
The Honorable Tom Coburn
Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Chairman and Ranking Member:

Today, after more than a year of work, the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations is releasing this report summarizing the Subcommittee's bipartisan investigation into problems with how the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has processed applications for tax exempt status under Section 501(c)(4) of the tax code. The Subcommittee Majority staff report is entitled, "IRS and TIGTA Management Failures Related to 501(c)(4) Applicants Engaged in Campaign Activity." The Subcommittee Minority staff, which did not join the Majority staff report, has filed dissenting views entitled, "IRS Targeting Tea Party Groups." In connection with the report, the Subcommittee is also releasing over 1,700 pages of documents from the IRS and Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA), including emails, correspondence, memoranda, charts, handwritten notes, reports, and analyses.

We hope this report and the accompanying documents provide useful information. Although the Majority and Minority were unable to reach agreement on an analysis of the issues, the Subcommittee maintained its tradition of bipartisan fact-finding throughout the investigation, conducting joint interviews, performing detailed document reviews, and engaging in productive consultations to advance the Subcommittee's oversight work.

Sincerely,

John McCain
Ranking Minority Member
Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations

Carl Levin
Chairman
Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations

IRS AND TIGTA MANAGEMENT FAILURES RELATED TO 501(C)(4) APPLICANTS ENGAGED IN CAMPAIGN ACTIVITY

I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

On May 10, 2013, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) apologized for having used the phrase, “Tea Party,” to identify 501(c)(4) applications filed by organizations involved with campaign activities and then subjecting those applications to heightened scrutiny. That apology triggered a firestorm of criticism of the IRS centered on a concern that the IRS might have shown political bias in selecting groups for review. An audit report released by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) a few days later intensified that criticism by reporting that the IRS had used “inappropriate criteria” in selecting applications for review and otherwise mismanaged the 501(c)(4) program. In response, President Obama required the Acting IRS Commissioner to resign, and replaced the leadership of the IRS division handling Exempt Organizations.

For over a year, the U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations has conducted an investigation into the facts that led to widespread condemnation of how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications. That work came on top of a Subcommittee review, already underway, into how the IRS was generally enforcing the law pertaining to groups claiming tax exempt status under Section 501(c)(4) of the tax code.

The Subcommittee investigation has reached many of the same conclusions as the TIGTA audit of the 501(c)(4) application process. The Subcommittee investigation found that the IRS used inappropriate screening criteria when it flagged for increased scrutiny applications based upon the applicants’ names or political views rather than direct evidence of their involvement with campaign activities. The Subcommittee investigation also found significant program mismanagement, including years-long delays in processing 501(c)(4) applications; inappropriate, intrusive, and burdensome questioning of groups; and poor communication and coordination between IRS officials in Washington and Cincinnati. At the same time, like TIGTA, the Subcommittee investigation found no evidence of IRS political bias in selecting 501(c)(4) applications for heightened review, as distinguished from using poor judgment in crafting the selection criteria. Based on investigative work that went beyond what TIGTA examined, the Subcommittee investigation also determined that the same problems affected IRS review of 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups.

In addition, the Subcommittee investigation found that, by focusing exclusively on how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by conservative groups and excluding any comparative data on applications filed by liberal groups, the TIGTA audit produced distorted audit results that continue to be misinterpreted. The TIGTA audit engagement letter stated that the audit's "overall objective" was to examine the "consistency" of IRS actions in identifying and reviewing 501(c)(4) applications, including whether "conservative groups" experienced "inconsistent treatment." Instead, the audit focused solely on IRS treatment of conservative groups, and omitted any mention of other groups. For example, while the TIGTA report criticized the IRS for using "Tea Party," "9/12," and "Patriot" to identify applications filed by conservative groups, it left out that the IRS also used "Progressive," "ACORN," "Emerge," and "Occupy" to identify applications filed by liberal groups. While the TIGTA report criticized the IRS for subjecting conservative groups to delays, burdensome questions, and mismanagement, it failed to disclose that the IRS subjected liberal groups to the same treatment. The result was that when the TIGTA audit report presented data showing conservative groups were treated inappropriately, it was interpreted to mean conservative groups were handled differently and less favorably than liberal groups, when in fact, both groups experienced the same mistreatment. By excluding any analysis of how liberal groups were handled and failing to provide critical context for its findings, the TIGTA audit inaccurately and unfairly damaged public confidence in the impartiality of the IRS.

The Subcommittee investigation also determined that, by using a "facts and circumstances" test to evaluate 501(c)(4) applications for excessive campaign involvement, the IRS relied upon a time-consuming, case-by-case, non-transparent, subjective, and unpredictable method of evaluation that not only confused and delayed IRS processing of individual applications, but also invited public suspicion that IRS decisionmaking may have been influenced by politics. An overarching problem was the IRS' ongoing failure to enforce the law's requirement that tax-exempt 501(c)(4) groups be operated "exclusively for the promotion of social welfare." To restore compliance with the law as well as public confidence in the impartial resolution of requests for tax exempt status, the IRS needs to establish a more objective and transparent set of standards for evaluating 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups engaged in campaign activities.

A. Subcommittee Investigation

In accordance with its longstanding rules and traditions, the Subcommittee conducted a bipartisan investigation into the 501(c)(4) application process, with joint interviews and document analysis. The Subcommittee collected and reviewed over 800,000 pages of documents produced by the IRS and TIGTA, including emails, correspondence, memoranda, and analyses. It also reviewed relevant IRS regulations, revenue rulings, private letter rulings, court proceedings, and a number of publicly available Form 1024 applications and Form 990 tax returns filed by 501(c) organizations involved with campaign activities. The Subcommittee also obtained information from the IRS in response to a series of detailed letter requests by Senator Levin, the Subcommittee chairman, and through multiple briefings. In addition, the Subcommittee received a detailed briefing from the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and reviewed FEC regulations and filings, including some independent expenditure and electioneering communication reports filed by 501(c) groups.

During the course of the investigation, the Subcommittee conducted 22 interviews of current and former IRS and TIGTA personnel. The Subcommittee also spoke with and reviewed materials provided by representatives of the FEC and a range of nonprofit groups, as well as academics and other experts in campaign finance, election law, and nonprofit tax requirements. IRS, TIGTA, and FEC personnel, as well as other parties contacted during the course of the investigation, generally cooperated with Subcommittee requests for information.

The Subcommittee investigation proceeded under one key restriction. Unlike the Senate Finance Committee, the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation does not have statutory authority to view tax return information related to specific taxpayers. For that reason, both the IRS and TIGTA removed from the documents they produced to the Subcommittee all taxpayer-specific return information, requiring the Subcommittee to review documents that included redactions. In addition, the Subcommittee was not permitted to review the actual 501(c)(4) applications selected by the IRS for heightened scrutiny and was also, at times, unable to determine how certain applications were finally resolved. The Subcommittee's inability to get actual taxpayer submissions to the IRS did not, however, preclude the Subcommittee from reviewing hundreds of thousands of IRS documents, including emails, correspondence, memoranda, and analyses; identifying and evaluating the criteria used by the IRS to select applications for heightened review; and examining and evaluating the steps taken by the IRS to manage its review of the 501(c)(4) applications.

On April 30, 2013, as part of its investigation, the Subcommittee conducted a bipartisan, wide-ranging, six-hour inquiry into various aspects of the 501(c) application process with a team of eight IRS employees specializing in issues related to groups seeking tax exempt status. The IRS team was led by Exempt Organizations head Lois Lerner. During that briefing, Ms. Lerner did not mention the audit then underway by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) or the upcoming TIGTA audit report that would be released two weeks later. Ms. Lerner also failed to disclose or downplayed the many substantive and administrative problems plaguing the 501(c)(4) application process. After the TIGTA report was released in May 2013, Subcommittee Chairman Levin and Ranking Member McCain sent a letter to the IRS calling for Ms. Lerner's immediate suspension from office due to her failure to disclose "crucial information ... leading to an incomplete account of the full operations of her unit."¹ When the Subcommittee later requested an interview to examine her role in the 501(c)(4) review process, Ms. Lerner asserted her rights under the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution not to answer questions. The requested interview did not take place. For that reason, the Subcommittee's investigation was unable to obtain Ms. Lerner's testimony about key events, and its investigative results do not reflect any information she might have provided through interviews.

In June 2014, the IRS disclosed that, in the course of producing emails sent to or by Ms. Lerner from 2009 to 2014, the agency discovered that an unknown additional number of Lerner emails over a two-year period from June 2009 to June 2011 – including the period from February 2010 to May 2011 when Tea Party applications were being flagged for review – may have been lost due to a failure of Ms. Lerner's computer hard drive.² Since then, an intensive effort has been undertaken by multiple parties to understand how Ms. Lerner's hard drive failed in June 2011, what efforts were made by the IRS at the time to recover emails from her failed hard drive, how the IRS disposed of the hard drive, whether the agency's backup tapes had been recycled and erased the emails, and whether the emails could be recovered in some other manner.³ In July 2014, TIGTA informed the Subcommittee that it had located several backup tapes that may contain the emails, and that a forensic analysis of those tapes was underway.⁴ In addition, the IRS was able to recover many of the Lerner emails from other IRS personnel who had sent or received them.

Because resolution of the issues related to Ms. Lerner's emails is likely to require additional months to resolve, the Subcommittee has already reviewed over 67,000 Lerner emails, and the Subcommittee investigation provides information relevant to an ongoing IRS effort to issue revised regulations for evaluating 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups engaged in campaign activities, Senators Levin and McCain have jointly determined to release this Report, together with the Minority Staff's Dissenting Views, at this time.

B. Investigation Overview

Using documents and interviews, the Subcommittee has conducted an extensive examination of the actions taken by the IRS to review and resolve 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups engaged in political campaign activities. The IRS flagged the first Tea Party application in February 2010. For the next three years, the IRS used a series of screening criteria to identify similar applications from both conservative and liberal groups, subjected those applications to individualized reviews, and determined whether the groups should be granted tax exempt status despite their involvement with campaign activities.

During the first half of that three-year period, the screening criteria used to select applications for heightened review used key phrases taken from the names of some of those organizations or from materials indicating their political views, rather than direct indicators of the groups' involvement with campaign activities. From February 2010 to May 2011, the cases selected for heightened review were referred to as "Tea Party" cases; beginning in June 2011, at the direction of IRS officials in Washington, the name of the category of cases was changed to "advocacy" cases. During both phases, the IRS subjected not only conservative groups with "Tea Party," "9/12," or "Patriot" in their names to heightened scrutiny, but also liberal groups with "Progressive," "Progress," "ACORN," "Emerge," or "Occupy" in their names. The evidence also shows that, from 2010 to mid-2013, more conservative groups than liberal groups applied for tax exempt status, underwent IRS scrutiny, and ultimately won tax exempt status.

All of the cases were handled by the IRS Exempt Organizations Determinations (EOD) Unit in Cincinnati, where IRS agents reviewed the applications to determine whether they should be approved, denied, or suspended pending receipt of more information. Work to resolve the applications was often interrupted, delayed, or halted, while senior IRS Determinations personnel sought guidance from the Exempt Organizations Technical (EOT) Unit in Washington, D.C. about how to handle the cases. Guidance was sought, because EOD personnel were uncertain about how to apply the required "facts and circumstances" test, which mandated consideration of all relevant, material factors to determine whether an applicant was engaged primarily in social welfare activities. Despite constant pressure for additional guidance, EOT personnel took more than three years to resolve two test cases and drafted, but never finalized, additional guidance on how to screen, develop, and evaluate the applications.

While awaiting the promised EOT guidance, the backlog of 501(c)(4) cases awaiting IRS action grew to about 320 cases. The affected groups could and generally did continue to operate while awaiting disposition of their applications, but they were forced to act without certainty over their tax exempt status, sometimes for years. While waiting for an IRS decision on their tax exempt status, some of the groups had difficulty obtaining contributions from donors or lost funding opportunities, many spent funds on legal representation, and all were unable to exercise appeal rights to advance their cases. When in December 2011, almost two years after the first case was flagged, a newly appointed advocacy case coordinator approved sending out “development letters” to obtain additional information needed to apply the facts and circumstances test, some of the recipients objected to some of the questions as inappropriate, burdensome, or intrusive. Some critics also complained that the letters singled out Tea Party groups for heightened scrutiny. Negative media reports and Congressional inquiries followed. In response, in the first quarter of 2012, the IRS established a special “bucketing” process intended to reduce the backlog of cases, but a year later hundreds of cases remained unresolved.

TIGTA Audit. The audit conducted by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) was initiated in March 2012, in the midst of the negative media reports about IRS treatment of 501(c)(4) applications filed by organizations engaged in campaign activity, in particular groups aligned with the Tea Party. TIGTA’s Office of Audit undertook the audit at the request of the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. The work was conducted over the following year, and a final audit report was issued in May 2013.

The official TIGTA audit engagement letter stated that the audit’s “overall objective” was to “assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function’s identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues.” It also stated: “Several accusations of inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups have been made.” Despite being charged with examining the “consistency” of the IRS’ actions, TIGTA auditors examined how the IRS handled applications filed by conservative groups, but did not perform any comparative analysis of how the IRS handled applications filed by liberal groups. In response to later media inquiries about why information about liberal groups was excluded, a TIGTA spokeswoman initially said, “we were asked to narrowly focus on Tea Party organizations,” but later indicated she had been given incorrect information.

During the audit, TIGTA auditors focused on actions taken by IRS screeners to identify applications filed by groups whose names or application materials contained the phrases, “Tea Party,” “9-12,” or “Patriot,” noting that the selection criteria focused on the groups’ names or political views, rather than on their participation in campaign activities. The TIGTA auditors also focused on a single entry in a broader “Be-on-the-Lookout” (BOLO) list whose wording changed over time, moving from language which urged IRS personnel to identify applications filed by groups affiliated with the “Tea Party movement,” to language urging them to identify applications containing “indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention.” While the IRS admitted the earlier selection criteria were inappropriate, IRS personnel also attempted to demonstrate the criteria were not the result of political bias, by showing TIGTA that the IRS used similar BOLO listings for liberal groups, with screening criteria using the phrases “Progressive,” “ACORN,” and “Occupy” to identify applications of interest. Despite the IRS’ repeatedly drawing attention to those BOLO entries, the TIGTA auditors failed to examine either how the IRS used those BOLO entries or how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups in comparison to applications filed by conservative groups.

In February 2013, after receiving an allegation that an IRS email had directed IRS employees to “target” Tea Party groups, the Assistant Inspector General responsible for exempt organization issues, Gregory Kutz, asked the TIGTA Office of Investigations to conduct an email search of certain IRS employees. The Office of Investigations then searched over 2,200 emails and other documents from the email accounts of five IRS employees involved with processing 501(c)(4) applications. The Office of Investigations concluded that the 2,200 IRS emails and other documents contained “no indication” that the pulling of Tea Party applications for additional scrutiny by IRS personnel was “politically motivated,” advising that the IRS actions were instead the result of inadequate guidance on how to process the applications. Even though that finding by the TIGTA Office of Investigations analysis directly addressed the central issue TIGTA was auditing, whether there was political bias at the IRS, the documentary analysis performed by the Office of Investigations was not included in TIGTA’s audit report.

In February 2013, the audit team submitted a draft audit report to the TIGTA Chief Counsel and Office of Audit head. The Chief Counsel suggested removing the word “targeted” from the report, because “targeted has a connotation of improper motivation that does not seem to be supported by the information presented in the audit report.” The audit team removed the word from the report except when describing the allegations that led to the audit. Later that month, TIGTA provided a draft of the report to the IRS.

As the release date for the TIGTA audit report neared, Acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller decided to try to preempt news coverage of the negative audit results by having the head of the Exempt Organizations division, Lois Lerner, disclose the audit before it was released and apologize for the agency's conduct during a conference she was scheduled to address. On May 10, 2013, at the Acting IRS Commissioner's direction and in response to a planted question, Ms. Lerner apologized for the IRS' having used "Tea Party" to identify 501(c)(4) applications subjected to heightened review. Her apology triggered a public firestorm centered on the allegation that the IRS had shown political bias against conservative groups seeking tax exempt status. The Acting IRS Commissioner and other senior IRS officials were required to resign.

The apology generated intense interest in the TIGTA audit report which was released the following week, on May 14, 2013. The audit report found that the IRS had used "inappropriate criteria" to flag 501(c)(4) applications for heightened review, and "ineffective management" had caused delays and subjected applicants to burdensome information requests. TIGTA Inspector General George was asked to testify at multiple Congressional hearings about the audit findings. When pressed about whether the IRS had unfairly targeted conservative groups, Mr. George testified that TIGTA had found no sign of political bias at the IRS, but offered as evidence only the denials of the IRS officials involved. He made no mention of the email review conducted by the TIGTA Office of Investigations or its conclusion that the documents contained "no indication" that the IRS' actions were "politically motivated," even though that investigative finding directly addressed the issue of political bias at the IRS. Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he did not mention the Office of Investigations' finding, because no one on his staff had told him about it. On June 6, 2014, Mr. George confirmed in a letter to the Subcommittee that the TIGTA audit had "found no evidence of political bias," also stating "it is important to note that the matter is being further reviewed."

On May 21, 2013, the night before the third Congressional hearing at which the Inspector General testified about the audit, the TIGTA Chief Counsel decided to review the IRS BOLOs before providing copies to Congress. During his review, he saw, for the first time, BOLO entries naming two liberal groups, ACORN and Occupy. He promptly informed Inspector General George and Assistant Inspector General Kutz, both of whom told the Subcommittee they had previously been unaware of any BOLO listings for liberal groups, even though the IRS had provided copies and repeatedly informed the TIGTA audit team about them. Even after learning about them, the senior TIGTA officials remained silent for weeks about the BOLO entries for liberal groups, and provided incomplete and inaccurate testimony about them at Congressional hearings. When the BOLO listings for liberal groups were finally disclosed by Members of Congress and the media, senior TIGTA officials insisted that the IRS had not disclosed those listings during the TIGTA audit, despite ample evidence to the contrary.

During their Subcommittee interviews, Mr. George and Mr. Kutz indicated they had since reconsidered how the TIGTA audit report treated 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups. Mr. George told the Subcommittee that the audit report should have acknowledged the existence of the BOLO entries that named liberal groups and that TIGTA auditors should have looked into those other groups. Mr. Kutz indicated TIGTA potentially should have included the BOLO listings for progressive, ACORN, and Occupy groups in its analysis, although he thought it might have delayed completion of the audit for another year. TIGTA has since initiated an audit into how those and other BOLO entries were used, but has put that audit on hold pending other law enforcement investigative efforts related to Lois Lerner and IRS.

C. Findings and Recommendations

Findings. The Subcommittee investigation makes the following findings of fact.

- (1) IRS Management Failures. From 2010 through 2013, the IRS mismanaged the 501(c)(4) applications process for both conservative and liberal groups engaged in campaign activities, using inappropriate selection criteria based on the applicants' names or policy views to flag applications for heightened review, subjecting some applicants to burdensome questions, and delaying disposition of some applications for years.
- (2) Inadequate Guidance. The IRS provided insufficient guidance and training to IRS personnel on how to process 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups engaged in campaign activities, and failed to finalize a proposed set of guidesheets with additional guidance for IRS personnel despite nearly one year of work on the project.
- (3) Flawed Test. The facts and circumstances test used by the IRS was criticized as difficult to administer by every IRS official interviewed, from most to least senior; it required IRS agents to ask wide ranging and intrusive questions, slowed the processing of 501(c)(4) applications, and produced subjective and inconsistent decisions on applications.

- (4) No Political Bias. A review of nearly 800,000 pages of documents and the conduct of nearly two dozen IRS and TIGTA employee interviews produced no evidence of political bias by the IRS against conservative groups that filed 501(c)(4) applications, a finding which is consistent with TIGTA's June 2014 letter stating that the TIGTA audit "found no evidence of political bias."
- (5) Flawed Audit Report. The TIGTA audit report presented a distorted description of how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications, by omitting TIGTA's determination that the audit had "found no evidence of political bias"; by restricting its analysis to conservative groups and omitting comparative data for nonconservative groups; by failing to disclose the BOLO listings for liberal groups; and by omitting mention of the email review by the TIGTA Office of Investigations which, after conducting a thorough review of over 2,200 emails and other documents, found "no indication" that IRS actions in pulling Tea Party applications for heightened scrutiny were politically motivated.
- (6) TIGTA Management Failures. TIGTA management failed to adequately supervise and ensure a balanced audit process, excluded key information from the audit report, omitted the key determination that the audit had "found no evidence of political bias," and inaccurately and unfairly damaged public confidence in the impartiality of the IRS.
- (7) TIGTA Failure to Disclose. After TIGTA senior officials learned that the audit report omitted important information about IRS BOLO listings for liberal as well as conservative groups, TIGTA failed to disclose the new information for weeks, even though it was directly relevant to TIGTA's audit objective and could have helped alleviate public concern about potential IRS political bias.

Recommendations. Based upon the Subcommittee's investigation, the Report makes the following recommendations.

- (1) Restore Statutory Standard. The IRS should revise its rules to comply with the statutory requirement that 501(c)(4) organizations engage "exclusively" in social welfare activities, including by applying an "insubstantial" test to limit other activities, similar to the one already applied to 501(c)(3) charities, and by applying a percentage test to ensure campaign activities comprise no more than an insubstantial portion of a tax-exempt social welfare organization's activities.

- (2) Replace Facts and Circumstances Test. The IRS should replace the “facts and circumstances test” with objective standards and bright line rules that would produce more consistent, timely, transparent, and predictable treatment of 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups that engage in campaign activities.
- (3) Use FEC Data. The IRS should require 501(c)(4) groups to provide a copy of any FEC filing within a few days of submitting it to the FEC, and use the FEC data to help identify 501(c)(4) groups warranting heightened review for campaign activity, since the FEC data provides direct evidence of campaign involvement.
- (4) Improve FEC Forms. The FEC should amend its forms to include the filer's 501(c) status, including whether it has been approved by the IRS for tax exemption under a specific 501(c) subsection or has a pending application.
- (5) Amend TIGTA Report. To provide a more complete and balanced analysis of how the IRS identified and reviewed 501(c)(4) applications for groups engaged in campaign activities, TIGTA should amend its audit report to include its determination that the audit “found no evidence of political bias” and add information about IRS BOLO entries and IRS processing of applications filed by groups with “Progressive,” “Progress,” “ACORN,” “Occupy,” or “Emerge” in their names.

II. BACKGROUND

Section 501(c) of the U.S. tax code exempts from taxation over two dozen types of nonprofit organizations, including charities, social welfare groups, business associations, and labor unions.⁵ The tax code also exempts from taxation “political organizations,” such as campaign committees, under Section 527.⁶ Today, within the United States, about 1.6 million tax exempt organizations report about $2.4 trillion in assets.⁷

A. IRS Organizational Responsibilities

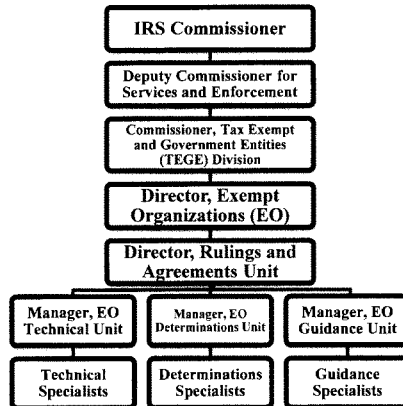

Tax-exempt organizations, under both Section 501(c) and Section 527, are overseen by a number of offices and organizations within the IRS. The following chart depicts the key IRS offices involved with overseeing 501(c) applications and organizations.⁸

⁵ Charities are exempt from taxation under Section 501(c)(3), social welfare organizations under Section 501(c)(4), labor unions under Section 501(c)(5), and business groups under Section 501(c)(6). More specifically, Section 501(c)(3) exempts “[c]orporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes.” 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(3) (2012). Section 501(c)(4) exempts “[c]ivic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.” Id. at 501(c)(4)(A). Section 501(c)(5)(a)(2) exempts labor, agricultural, and horticultural organizations that “have as their objects the betterment of the conditions of those engaged in such pursuits, the improvement of the grade of their products, and the development of a higher degree of efficiency in their respective occupations.” 26 C.F.R. § 1.501(c)(5)-1(a)(2) (2012). Section 501(c)(6) exempts “[b]usiness leagues, chambers of commerce, real-estate boards, boards of trade, or professional football leagues (whether or not administering a pension fund for football players), not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.” 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(6) (2012).

⁶ Section 527(e)(1) defines a political organization as a “a party, committee, association, fund, or other organization (whether or not incorporated) organized and operated primarily for the purpose of directly or indirectly accepting contributions or making expenditures, or both, for an exempt function.” Section 527(e)(2) defines an “exempt function” as “influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any Federal, State, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of Presidential or Vice-Presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed.” Unlike 501(c) organizations, Section 527 organizations must disclose “[t]he name and address ... of all contributors which contributed an aggregate amount of $200 or more to the organization during the calendar year and the amount and date of the contribution.” Section 527(j)(3)(B).

Prepared by U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, August 2014

The lead organization is the IRS Tax Exempt and Government Entities (TEGE) Division, which oversees all “Exempt Organizations.”⁹ The head of the TEGE Division reports to the Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement who, in turn, reports to the IRS Commissioner. From 2004 to 2009, the TEGE Division head was Steven T. Miller. When he was promoted in 2009, he was replaced by Sarah Hall Ingram.¹⁰ In December 2010, after Ms. Ingram was also promoted, she was replaced by her deputy Joseph Grant who served as the Acting and then full TEGE Commissioner until May 2013, when he retired. Mr. Grant was replaced by Acting Commissioner Michael Julianelle, who was, in turn, replaced in December 2013, by the current TEGE Commissioner Sunita Lough.

Within the TEGE Division, a subdivision called Exempt Organizations (EO) is charged with handling all entities claiming tax exempt status.¹¹ The EO mission statement requires it to help exempt organizations “to understand and comply with applicable tax laws, and to protect the public interest by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.”¹² Its responsibilities include overseeing the disposition of applications for tax exempt status, and overseeing existing tax-exempt organizations to ensure ongoing compliance with the legal requirements for tax exemption. From 1999 to 2004, the EO Director was Steven Miller, who served in that position until he was promoted to TEGE Commissioner. In 2006, Lois Lerner was appointed EO Director and served in that post until May 2013, when she was replaced by Acting Director Ken Corbin.¹³ In December 2013, Mr. Corbin was replaced by Tamera Ripperda, the current EO Director.

The TEGE Division was established in late 1999, as part of an IRS modernization effort, replacing a group headed by an Assistant Commissioner for Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations, established in 1974. Id. It also oversees “Employee Plans” and “Government Entities.” Id.

¹⁰ In April 2009, Mr. Miller was promoted to Commissioner of the Large and Mid-Sized Business Division; in September 2009, he was promoted to Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement, where he remained until appointed Acting IRS Commissioner in November 2012.

Within the EO, the Rulings and Agreements Unit has “jurisdiction over processing determination letters and ruling letters on applications for recognition of tax exempt status under sections 501(a) and 521.”¹⁴ From 2006 to December 2010, the Acting and then full Director of the Rulings and Agreements Unit was Robert Choi. In January 2011, he was promoted and replaced by Holly Paz.¹⁵ Ms. Paz held that position until June 2013, when she was placed on administrative leave,¹⁶ and Karen Schiller became the Acting Director. In December 2013, Ms. Schiller was replaced by Stephen Martin who is the current Acting Director of the Rulings and Agreements Unit.¹⁷

Within the Rulings and Agreements Unit, the EO Determinations Unit is responsible for the initial handling of tax exempt applications.¹⁸ Each year, the IRS receives approximately 70,000 applications from groups seeking tax exempt status under Section 501(c), most of which are filed by Section 501(c)(3) applicants.¹⁹ From 2005 until 2013, the ¹⁵ Prior to becoming Rulings and Agreements Director, Ms. Paz worked in the EO Technical Unit. At the request of Mr. Choi, she became Acting Director in charge of EO Technical in September 2009, and then, a year later in September 2010, she had become the full Director. In January 2011, she was promoted to Acting Director of Rulings and Agreements, taking over from Mr. Choi. In May 2012, she became the permanent Director of Rulings and Agreements. In June 2013, she was placed on administrative leave pending an investigation into the matters covered by this Report. Subcommittee interview of Holly Paz, IRS (10/30/2013).

head of the EO Determinations Unit was Program Manager Lucinda (Cindy) Thomas. Ms. Thomas was located at an IRS office in Cincinnati which housed the EO Determinations Unit, and reported to the Director of Rulings and Agreements who was located in Washington, D.C. In August 2013, Ms. Thomas became a senior technical adviser to the EO Director. The position of EO Determinations head is currently vacant.

From 2008 to November 2012, the IRS Commissioner was Douglas H. Shulman. After he completed his five-year term, Mr. Shulman was replaced by Steven Miller who served as the Acting IRS Commissioner until his resignation in May 2013. Mr. Miller was replaced by Acting IRS Commissioner Daniel Werfel until, on December 20, 2013, John Koskinen was confirmed by the Senate as the new IRS Commissioner and sworn into office a few days later.

B. Social Welfare Groups

Within Section 501(c), which grants tax exempt status to a variety of organizations and entities, Section 501(c)(4) focuses on civic groups dedicated to the “promotion of social welfare.” Since the law permits but does not require social welfare groups to obtain prior IRS approval before holding themselves out as tax exempt, the IRS does not have a comprehensive list of all 501(c)(4) organizations.²⁰ As of 2013, the total number of tax-exempt social welfare groups was estimated to exceed 82,000 organizations.²¹ income tax system.²² The 1913 provision granted tax exempt status to “civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.”²³ Those same words remain in the law today. In 1986, Section 231(8) was re-designated Section 501(c)(4) as part of a comprehensive tax reform bill enacted that year.²⁴ In 1996, the statutory provision was amended by adding a clarification that a social welfare organization’s net earnings may not inure to the benefit of private shareholders or individuals.²⁵

Promoting Social Welfare. The initial implementing regulations did not explain the meaning of the phrase “promotion of social welfare.”²⁶ In 1924, revised regulations explained that organizations seeking exemption under Section 501(c)(4)’s predecessor section were required to operate “exclusively for purposes beneficial to the community as a whole,” and included “organizations engaged in promoting the welfare of mankind.”²⁷ Those regulations remained substantially unchanged until 1959, when they were revised again. The 1959 regulations stated for the first time that an organization “is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community,” including organizations operated “primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements.”²⁸ A 1973 IRS Revenue Ruling explained that an organization which is “operated essentially for the benefit of its members” does not promote social welfare.²⁹

Over time, a small group of court cases have applied the statutory and regulatory provisions to specific organizations and further addressed their meaning. One case held that “the organization must be a community movement designed to accomplish community ends.”³⁰ Others explained that organizations do not qualify for tax exemption under Section 501(c)(4) if they provide primarily a private benefit, even in instances where such private benefits contribute substantial benefits to the public.³¹

Exclusively v. Primarily. A second key issue is the extent to which a social welfare organization may engage in unrelated activities and still retain its tax exempt status. Section 501(c)(4) states: “Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare” are exempt from taxation.³² However, the 1959 implementing regulation states: “An organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community.”³³ The 1959 regulation essentially substituted the word “primarily” for the word “exclusively,” contrary to the plain wording of the statute and the plain meaning of the word “exclusively.” This mismatch between the statute and regulation has been the subject of debate within the IRS for decades.³⁴ Despite the clear contradiction, the IRS regulation has been upheld in court.³⁵

An internal IRS analysis also highlights a difference between the implementing regulations for 501(c)(4) and 501(c)(3) organizations.³⁶ Although both statutory provisions require covered organizations to be engaged “exclusively” in a specified activity, and both regulations then replace “exclusively” with “primarily,” the 501(c)(3) regulation goes on to impose a restriction that the 501(c)(4) regulation does not. It states that a 501(c)(3) organization “will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose.”³⁷ The courts have interpreted this regulatory provision to bar 501(c)(3) charities from engaging in a “substantial non-exempt purpose.”³⁸ In contrast, the IRS has determined that 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations “may engage in more non-exempt activity than (c)(3) organizations ... reasoning that the §501(c)(4) regulations lack the ‘insubstantial part’ language that is present in the §501(c)(3) regulations.”³⁹ It concludes that a “§501(c)(4) exempt organization may engage in substantial non-exempt activities,”⁴⁰ and may engage in “as much non-exempt activity as it wants so long as it is ‘short of being the organization’s primary activity.’”⁴¹

The 1959 regulation did not define either “exclusively” or “primarily,” and neither term has been defined by the IRS since then, despite debate on the topic within the IRS over the years.⁴² Instead, the IRS engages in a “facts and circumstances test” in order to determine whether an organization is engaged primarily in social welfare activities.⁴³ Under that test, the IRS considers multiple factors in assessing an organization’s activities, and “no one factor is determinative.”⁴⁴ Factors considered by the IRS include the “manner in which the organization’s activities are conducted; resources used in conducting such activities, such as buildings and equipment; the time devoted to such activities (by volunteers and employees); the purposes furthered by various activities; and the amount of funds received from and devoted to particular activities.”⁴⁵

Percentage Test. One recurrent issue is whether the IRS uses a “percentage test” to determine whether an organization is engaged primarily in social welfare activities. Under this approach, the IRS would determine the percentage of an organization’s funds or resources spent on social welfare activities and, if that percentage were to exceed a specified level, would then find the organization to be engaged primarily in social welfare activities.

The IRS informed the Subcommittee that it does not use a percentage test: “The IRS has taken no position on a fixed percentage or any one factor in precedential guidance.”⁴⁶ At the same time, the investigation uncovered several internal documents suggesting that the IRS has, at least at times, used a 50% or 51% test.⁴⁷ In addition, several senior IRS officials told the Subcommittee that the IRS uses a percentage test.⁴⁸ Many in the tax exempt community have also indicated that they view “primarily” to mean the organization’s social

Over the years, some courts have interpreted the terms “exclusively” and “primarily,” but those cases have not been dispositive with respect to social welfare organizations.⁵⁰ Most of the court decisions have interpreted the law with respect to 501(c)(3) charities as opposed to social welfare organizations, or examined the term “exclusively” in other contexts.⁵¹

Social Welfare v. Campaign Activities. A third key issue, which has gained urgency in recent years, is distinguishing between social welfare activities and campaign activities which do not qualify an organization for tax exempt status under Section 501(c)(4). The law’s 1959 implementing regulations state: “[T]he promotion of social welfare does not include direct or indirect participation or intervention in political campaigns on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office.”⁵² The provision makes it clear that participating in political campaigns on behalf of or against a candidate is not considered a social welfare activity.

The wording of Section 501(c)(4)’s regulatory restriction on campaign activities is similar to the wording of a statutory restriction on Section 501(c)(3) charitable organizations, which states that a tax exempt charity may “not participate in, or intervene in (including the ⁵¹ See, e.g., Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283 (1945) (the Supreme Court, when asked to determine whether an organization was operating “exclusively” as required by a provision in the Social Security Act, wrote that the exclusivity requirement “plainly means that the presence of a single [non-exempt] purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly [exempt] purpose”). Several courts have analyzed the meaning of the word “substantial” and “insubstantial” in the context of Section 501(c)(3) charities which may lose their tax exempt status “if a substantial part of [their] activities is attempting to influence legislation (commonly known as lobbying).” IRS document entitled, “Lobbying,” on IRS website, <http://www.irs.gov/Charities-%26-Non-Profits/Lobbying>. Case law has determined that lobbying activities may be treated as “insubstantial” if they use no more than 5 to 15% of the charitable organization’s expenditures. See, e.g., Haswell v. United States, 500 F.2d 1133 (Ct. Cl. 1974) (spending between 16.6% and 20.5% of an organization’s time on lobbying is substantial); Seasongood v. Commissioner, 227 F.2d 907 (6th Cir. 1955) (devoting less than 5% of activities to lobbying is not substantial). publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office.”⁵³ Section 501(c)(3) imposes a complete statutory ban on charities participating in campaign activities. Section 501(c)(4)’s regulation appeared to have attempted to impose the same ban on social welfare groups by stating that campaign activities do not qualify as social welfare activities. But because of the regulation’s substitution of the word “primarily” for “exclusively,” the end result has been that the IRS has allowed social welfare organizations to engage in campaign activities while retaining their tax exempt status, so long as the organization remained engaged “primarily” in social welfare activities.⁵⁴

Determining when an organization is engaged in social welfare versus campaign activity can be difficult, since some educational and issue advocacy activities that might qualify as promoting social welfare could also be seen as advocating for a particular candidate or party.⁵⁵ The IRS has issued several revenue rulings that provide limited guidance on identifying campaign activities.⁵⁶ A June 2013 report by the IRS after a review of 501(c)(4) tax-exempt applications concluded: “One of the significant challenges with 501(c)(4) review process has been the lack of clear and concise definition of ‘political campaign intervention.’”⁵⁷

In the past, the IRS has denied tax exempt status to organizations that have an explicit partisan purpose and engage in openly partisan activities, holding that their activities seek to benefit a private group – the favored political party – rather than the broader community. A 1997 letter denying tax exempt status under Section 501(c)(4) for the National Policy Forum explained: “partisan political activity does not promote social welfare as defined in section 501(c)(4),” because it “benefit[s] select individuals or groups, instead of the community as a whole.”⁵⁸ In reaching its decision, the denial letter noted that the National Policy Forum’s Articles of Incorporation stated that the organization intended to encourage the development of ideas through forums and exchanges with the public, and to develop a “national Republican policy agenda.”⁵⁹ The letter also noted partisanship elements in the composition of the organization’s board members; the organization’s participants and speakers at forums; publications that the organization disseminated or distributed; and the financial support it received; concluding that the National Policy Forum was a “partisan issues-oriented organization.”⁶⁰ In 2011, the IRS made a similar decision, discussed in more detail below, to deny tax exempt status to organizations associated with Emerge America, a group dedicated to training Democratic women candidates to run for elective office.⁶¹ Today, however, many 501(c)(4) applicants do not engage in openly partisan activities, making it more difficult for the IRS to determine when organizations are seeking to intervene on behalf or in opposition to particular candidates.

Facts and Circumstances Test. To resolve questions about whether a particular activity qualified as a social welfare versus campaign activity, and whether an organization was engaged primarily in social welfare activities, the IRS elected to use a “facts and circumstances” test. That test required IRS personnel to consider all relevant material facts when making a determination and to refrain from treating any one factor as determinative.⁶² Due to its fact-specific nature, the facts and circumstances test required IRS personnel to gather detailed information about each 501(c)(4) applicant, so that all relevant material factors could be identified and evaluated.⁶³

At the same time, the IRS provided few objective standards or bright line rules, and little written guidance to its agents to address common fact patterns.⁶⁴ For example, the IRS did not instruct its agents to treat all candidate contributions as campaign activity; instead, agents were required to make an individualized analysis of each contribution.⁶⁵ While federal campaign law treated television advertisements that mentioned a candidate and were broadcast to the candidate's electorate within 30 days of a primary or 60 days of a general election as electioneering communications, IRS agents were not allowed to use those same objective criteria to reach a decision about whether a television advertisement constituted campaign activity; instead, each agent was required to develop the facts and then evaluate the timing, audience, wording, and context of each televised advertisement on a case-by-case basis.⁶⁶ The IRS also provided little training to agents handling 501(c)(4) applications on how to apply the facts and circumstances test.⁶⁷

The result was that IRS personnel were required to ask detailed questions about many aspects of a group's organization and activities, and spend long hours analyzing the information. Critics complained that the IRS inquiries were inappropriate, burdensome, and intrusive. In addition, the IRS analysis took place in a nontransparent setting, leading to complaints about how particular facts were treated. In addition, because the analysis was so fact specific and required consideration of all relevant material facts, it produced case-by-case determinations with limited precedential effect. Moreover, because the IRS provided few objective standards, bright line rules, or detailed guidance, IRS agents were put in the position of having to make essentially subjective determinations about how individual applications should be viewed. Hesitancy about making those determinations led to inaction on many

Proposed Rulemaking. In an attempt to address these and related problems, in November 2013, in response to a recommendation in the audit report by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, the Treasury Department and IRS issued a Notice of Proposed Rule Making with proposals for clarifying what activities qualified as “candidate-related campaign activities” under Section 501(c)(4).⁶⁹ One of the goals of the proposed rule was to reduce IRS reliance on the inherently time-consuming, non-transparent, and subjective facts and circumstances test and instead move towards more objective standards and bright line rules. As IRS Commissioner John Koskinen put it, the proposed rule would benefit the agency by taking it out of any “political judgment position.”⁷⁰ The IRS Commissioner also stated:

“[E]veryone would gain and we would avoid issues that we’ve had in the past if it were clearer what the definition of political activity is and how much of it [organizations] are allowed to engage in with as much clarity as possible and if it was clearer to whom those rules apply.”⁷¹

The proposed IRS rule generated over 150,000 comments and is now under review.⁷² The IRS has indicated that it is likely to revise the proposed rule and will hold a public hearing on it.⁷³

C. IRS Oversight of Section 501(c)(4) Organizations

IRS oversight of the 501(c)(4) tax exempt community relies principally upon two sets of documents, applications filed by organizations seeking IRS approval of their tax exempt status and tax returns filed annually by existing 501(c)(4) organizations. While organizations are not required to do so, many choose to file applications with the IRS to obtain official recognition of their tax exempt status. To maintain their tax exemption, all 501(c)(4) organizations must also file an annual tax return. The IRS reviews all submitted applications to determine whether an applicant meets the legal requirements for social welfare organizations. It also reviews some annual tax returns and uses other means to monitor existing 501(c)(4) organizations' ongoing compliance with the tax code.

Self-Declared Tax Exempt Organizations. Neither the tax code nor the IRS requires 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations to file a formal application or obtain prior IRS approval before holding themselves out as tax exempt.⁷⁴ Any group may simply declare its tax exempt status and initiate operations. In instances where an organization does not file an application prior to claiming tax exempt status, the IRS categorizes these entities as "non-declaring" or "self-declaring" social welfare organizations.⁷⁵

1024 Applications. Despite the absence of any statutory or regulatory requirement, many organizations choose to file a Form 1024 application with the IRS to obtain official recognition as a tax exempt 501(c)(4) social welfare organization.⁷⁶ The IRS notes several reasons why organizations may decide to file an application: to obtain public recognition of its tax exempt status, assure donors of the group's tax exempt status, and gain "exemption from certain state taxes."⁷⁷

To apply for formal tax-exempt recognition under section 501(c)(4), an organization must request a federal Tax Identification Number and fill out an application on IRS Form 1024.⁷⁸ Form 1024 requests basic identification information as well as specific information designed to help IRS personnel determine whether the group qualifies for tax exemption. For example, the form asks the organization to list its activities, the percentage of time devoted to each activity, its sources of income, and other financial information.⁷⁹ With respect to campaign activity, Form 1024 asks:

“Has the organization spent or does it plan to spend any money attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any person to any Federal, state, or local public office or to an office in a political organization?”⁸⁰

When filed, 1024 applications are sent to a centralized IRS Submission Processing Center, entered into an IRS database for exempt organizations, and then forwarded to the IRS Exempt Organizations Determinations Unit in Cincinnati, Ohio, for further processing.⁸¹ The review process is detailed below. At the conclusion of the review process, the application is either approved or denied.

An organization whose application is denied is given an “adverse determination” letter. According to the IRS, “[a]n adverse determination is a written ruling denying tax-exempt status to an organization that has applied for tax exemption, but has failed to meet the applicable requirements.”⁸² The IRS also told the Subcommittee that, in many cases, if an organization perceives that its application may be denied, it will withdraw the application prior to denial and determine later whether to resubmit a modified version.⁸³

If an application is actually denied, the applicant can seek review from the IRS Office of Appeals, an independent office within the IRS which will review the administrative record associated with the organization, and make an independent determination on whether the organization meets the requirements for tax exempt status.⁸⁴ If the Appeals Office approves the application, the organization is officially designated as tax exempt. If the Appeals Office agrees that the application should be denied, the applicant can challenge that determination in court.⁸⁵

According to the IRS, from 2007 to 2012, it issued ten adverse determination letters to 501(c)(4) applicants which denied them tax exempt status due to involvement with campaign activities.⁸⁶ Since September 2012, the IRS has indicated that it has issued nine additional adverse determinations to organizations applying for 501(c)(4) status, but some of those denials may not have involved campaign activities.⁸⁷ Organizations that receive an adverse determination letter can voluntarily surrender their tax exempt status, dissolve, invoke another type of tax exemption, reorganize, or take other action.

990 Tax Returns. Whether or not a tax exempt social welfare organization files a Form 1024 application, it is required to file an annual tax return using IRS Form 990, “Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax.”⁸⁸ This tax return must be filed by all organizations claiming tax exemption under Section 501(c). It is the key mechanism used by the IRS to monitor tax exempt organizations and determine whether they continue to comply with the legal requirements for tax exemption, including in the case of 501(c)(4) organizations that they continue to be engaged primarily in social welfare activities.⁸⁹

Form 990 requires organizations to provide basic identification and financial information about their operations during the covered period. It requires, for example, information about the number of individuals employed by the group, the number of volunteers employed, and any contributions or grants. With respect to campaign activity, Form 990 asks the following question: “Did the organization engage in direct or indirect political campaign activities on behalf of or in opposition to candidates for public office?”⁹⁰ If an organization provides an affirmative response, it is required to provide additional information on “Schedule C.”

Form 990 has several Schedules that may need to be completed, depending on the applicant’s finances and activities. For any donation of $5,000 or more, Schedule B requires the recipient organization to disclose the donor’s name, address, and the type and amount of the contributions.⁹¹ While tax exempt organizations are required to provide copies of their 990 tax returns to the public upon request, the release of Schedule B donor information is optional and is generally not made publicly available.⁹² Schedule C requires the organization, if it has provided an affirmative response to the question about political campaign activities, to provide additional information about those activities. The IRS established Schedule C in 2008, as a part of a significant revision of Form 990 to ensure better “tax compliance, accountability, and transparency.”⁹³ It requires organizations to answer questions about the direct and indirect campaign activities of the group, any campaign expenditures made by the group, and the number of volunteer hours related to carrying out campaign activities.⁹⁴

A major concern related to the 990 tax returns involves the long period of time before they have to be filed and the difficulty of using the returns to obtain timely information about an organization’s activities. Organizations are required to file the return by the 15th day of the fifth month following the close of an organization’s taxable year.⁹⁵ An organization may obtain an automatic three-month extension from the initial due date by filing Form 8868, “Application for Extension of Time to File an Exempt Organization Return.” The organization may request a second extension for another three months by filing a second Form 8868 and explaining why more time is needed.⁹⁶ If a newly formed organization uses the full time permitted to file the 990 return, its first tax return may be filed 22.5 months after its creation.⁹⁷ An organization may time its formation to enable it to engage in campaign activities prior to an election, and not file a 990 return disclosing its activities until after the election has concluded.⁹⁸

Ongoing IRS Oversight and Enforcement. To conduct ongoing oversight of tax exempt groups’ compliance with the tax code, the IRS has instituted several methods to monitor existing tax exempt organizations, including social welfare groups.

One option is for an EO unit called Review of Operations (ROO) to conduct a review of an existing tax exempt organization to determine whether it is in compliance with the law.⁹⁹ A so-called “ROO review” is not an audit, and the tax exempt entity is not contacted when the IRS conducts the evaluation.¹⁰⁰ Applications are either randomly selected or referred by other IRS offices to determine if an organization has complied with its stated exempt purpose, and the ROO specialist typically assesses the organization’s latest Form 990, website, and publicly available information.¹⁰¹ When a ROO review determines that an organization may be out of compliance with the tax code, it typically refers the organization to examinations personnel for an audit.¹⁰²

A second option involves “Compliance Checks.” A compliance check is an IRS review of an entity’s filing information and tax returns, which the filer permits on a voluntary basis.¹⁰³ An IRS specialist initiates a compliance check by issuing a letter to the tax exempt entity, typically after IRS personnel discover an error in a tax return, or determine the IRS needs to obtain clarification with respect to an issue of importance.¹⁰⁴ Compliance checks provide a more limited review than an audit, and are typically restricted to verifying the timely, complete, and accurate filing of tax return documents and deposits.¹⁰⁵ After reviewing the tax information, cases are either closed or recommended for further examination, which requires approval from a Field Manager.¹⁰⁶

The third option is a traditional examination or audit. Section 7602 of the tax code authorizes the IRS to conduct an audit to determine whether an organization still qualifies for tax exempt status.¹⁰⁷ The IRS conducts two types of audits of tax exempt entities. In a “Field Examination,” an EO revenue agent will “perform the work at the organization's place of business."¹⁰⁸ In a "Correspondence Examination," the revenue agent asks the organization to send documents to the agent's location, where they are reviewed.¹⁰⁹

If, after an examination, the IRS determines that a tax exempt organization is out of compliance with the law, the agency can issue the organization a "revocation notice," revoking its tax exempt status. According to the IRS, "[a] revocation notice is a written notice that tax exempt status is being revoked, as a result of an examination."¹¹⁰ In a letter to the Subcommittee, the IRS reported that, from 2007 to 2014, it issued 42 revocation notices to 501(c)(4) organizations for involvement with campaign activities, five of which were not sustained on appeal.¹¹¹ The IRS also told the Subcommittee that, from 2007 to 2012, it sent 18 written advisories to 501(c)(4)s citing "irregularities."¹¹²

When the IRS revokes an organization's 501(c)(4) tax exempt status, the organization can voluntarily surrender its tax exempt status, dissolve, invoke another type of tax exemption, reorganize, or take other action.

D. Federal Election Law and Increased 501(c)(4) Campaign Involvement

Over the last decade, 501(c)(4) organizations have become increasingly involved with campaign activities, and some have incurred filing obligations under the Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA).

The FECA, first enacted in 1971, and subsequently amended in 1974, 1976, and 1979, "remains the foundation of the nation's campaign finance law."¹¹³ Among other provisions, it created the Federal Election Commission (FEC), and imposed a set of detailed disclosure requirements for candidates, parties, and others involved with federal elections. The FEC is an independent federal regulatory agency tasked with administering and enforcing the FECA. It maintains the law's campaign finance disclosure systems, accepts and reviews all FECA filings, and enforces compliance with the law's disclosure obligations.

The FEC requires persons involved with campaign activities to file periodic reports. Candidate political committees, political action committees, and political parties must disclose their campaign contributions and expenditures on Form 3, while non-candidate organizations – including 501(c)(4) groups – are required to disclose any independent expenditures on Form 5, and any electioneering communications expenditures on Form 9.¹¹⁴

Although the FEC filings provide direct evidence of the involvement of a 501(c)(4) group in campaign activity, contain information supplied directly by the filing group under penalty for submitting false information, and do not require any intrusive inquiries by the IRS, the FEC told the Subcommittee that it was unaware of the IRS making routine use of the filings to screen or evaluate 501(c)(4) applications.¹¹⁵ The FEC also told the Subcommittee that the IRS had not asked the FEC to include Taxpayer Identification Numbers or 501(c) status information on the FECA filing forms, even though that information would increase the forms' usefulness to the IRS and the IRS had a statutory role in developing those FEC forms.¹¹⁶

The IRS told the Subcommittee that, while it used FEC filings in its 501(c)(4) oversight work, including when evaluating 501(c)(4) applications, it did not have a system that formally tracked FEC filings made by 501(c)(4) organizations.¹¹⁷ In addition, the IRS indicated that it did not make routine use of FEC filings to identify 501(c) applications of groups involved with campaign activities.¹¹⁸ The IRS explained that its rules require it to use the facts and circumstances test to evaluate each electioneering communication or independent expenditure made by a 501(c)(4) organization, which meant that the organization's FEC filings were not dispositive evidence of its involvement with campaign intervention activities.¹¹⁹

2010 Citizens United Decision. In January 2010, in the landmark Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission case, the U.S. Supreme Court authorized political action committees (PACs) for the first time to accept unlimited contributions from donors, including businesses, unions, and individuals, as long as they made independent campaign

¹¹⁴ An independent expenditure is "an expenditure by a person – (A) expressly advocating the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate; and (B) that is not made in concert or cooperation with or at the request or suggestion of such candidate, the candidate's authorized political committee, or their agents, or a political party committee or its agents." 2 U.S.C. § 431(17) (2012). "Electioneering communications" are communications which are broadcast within 30 days of a primary or 60 days of a general election and mention a clearly identified candidate to the electorate. 2 U.S.C. § 434(f)(3) (2012).

expenditures that were not coordinated with any candidate.¹²⁰ PACs which determined to make such independent expenditures became known as “Super PACs,” due to their ability to accept unlimited donations and engage in massive campaign spending.¹²¹ At the same time Super PACs began to operate, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, the number of tax-exempt groups engaged in campaign spending also increased, including Section 501(c)(4) social welfare groups.¹²²

Senior officials at the IRS were aware that the Citizens United case could affect tax-exempt groups, including 501(c)(4) organizations, some of which had already increased their campaign activities.¹²³ On January 22, 2010, soon after the Citizens United decision, Lois Lerner, head of Exempt Organizations, sent an email to senior IRS officials, including then TEGE Commissioner Steven Miller, with the following observation:

“I’m sure you’ve heard about the S. Ct.’s decision in Citizen’s United that corporations have first amendment rights and the prohibitions on corporate spending in elections are unconstitutional. While I don’t think that changes our legal position—that tax-exemption is a privilege and if you want the privilege you have to play by the rules, I do think we need to be prepared to respond to inquiries about c3 and c4 spending in elections.”¹²⁴

Ms. Lerner also stated: “I know this is a very sensitive issue.”¹²⁵ Despite this acknowledgement of the likely impact of the Citizens United decision in 2010, the IRS did not put any new procedures or safeguards in place at the time to identify, evaluate, or resolve questions about 501(c) applicants planning to engage or engaged in campaign spending.

Increased 501(c)(4) Campaign Involvement. Since the 2010 Citizens United decision, it has become common for a Super PAC to have an affiliated 501(c)(4) organization which, under the tax code, can accept unlimited contributions from all types of donors, including businesses, unions, and individuals, and can engage in campaign activity as long as it is not the organization's primary activity.¹²⁶ In addition, unlike Super PACs, 501(c)(4) organizations are not legally obligated to publicly disclose the names of their donors or the amounts of the donations, although all donations over $5,000 must be reported confidentially to the IRS on Schedule B of their annual 990 tax returns.¹²⁷ The ability of 501(c)(4) groups to keep donor information confidential has, in some cases, made those groups attractive to donors interested in financing campaign activities without publicly disclosing their identities. Some 501(c)(4) organizations have used confidential donations to directly fund campaign activities.¹²⁸ Others have contributed donated funds to other 501(c)(4) organizations, Super PACs, or other political organizations involved with campaign activities, without disclosing the names of the donors who originated the funds.¹²⁹

Campaign spending data corroborates increased campaign involvement by 501(c)(4) groups. According to the Center for Responsive Politics, in 2010, a federal election year, 501(c) organizations, including social welfare, business, and labor groups, spent about $170 million on independent campaign expenditures and electioneering communications that required filings with the FEC; in 2012, the next federal election year, that number nearly doubled to $336 million.¹³⁰ The growth in campaign spending by social welfare groups alone has reportedly been even more explosive, rising 80 fold over the last decade.¹³¹

According to the IRS, from 2010 to 2012, the number of applications filed to obtain 501(c)(4) status nearly doubled, from about 1,700 in 2010, to more than 3,300 in 2012.¹³² In addition, from 2008 to 2010, the same year the Citizens United decision was issued, the number of 501(c)(4) groups reporting campaign activities to the IRS doubled, while the amount of campaign-related expenditures during that period almost tripled.¹³³ The IRS also reported that while all 990 tax returns for 2012 were not yet in, “large 501(c)(4)s with political campaign activities expenditures in TY 2010 reported a large increase in spending to the FEC between 2010 and 2012.”¹³⁴ At the same time, the IRS reported receiving “numerous referrals from the public, media, watchdog groups, and members of Congress alleging that specific section 501(c)(4) organizations were engaged in political campaign activity to an impermissible extent.”¹³⁵ Former IRS Commissioner Steven Miller, in handwritten notes, commented on the increased levels of campaign spending as follows: “Then along came a wave of cash – unleashed by Citizens’ United and that cash chose a favorable port due to disclosure and underenforced gift tax rules.”¹³⁶

More Conservative Groups. The evidence also indicates that, from 2010 to mid-2013, more conservative groups than liberal groups filed applications for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status, underwent scrutiny by the IRS during the application process, and won tax exempt status. For example, when the House Committee on Ways and Means reviewed 298 501(c)(4) cases that had been provided to TIGTA, it determined that, as of September 2013, 111 “right-leaning” groups had received tax exempt status, while only 20 “left-leaning” groups did, meaning more than five times as many conservative as liberal groups had gained tax exemption.¹³⁷ Rather than demonstrate IRS favoritism of conservative groups, however, those disparate numbers likely reflect the fact that many more conservative than liberal groups had requested tax exempt status.

Similarly, when the IRS released a list of 176 501(c)(4) organizations that had been approved for tax exempt status from 2010 through May 2013,¹³⁸ an analysis of those organizations by Tax Analysts, a publication specializing in tax issues, found that just over two-thirds were associated with conservative groups, while nearly one-third were not.¹³⁹ The analysis determined that, of the 176 groups approved for tax exempt status from 2010 to 2013, 46 had Tea Party, Patriot, or 9/12 in their names; 76 were associated with other conservative organizations; 48 were non-conservative organizations; and 6 were organizations about which no determination could be made.¹⁴⁰ In addition, the analysis showed that the IRS had granted tax exempt status to twice as many conservative groups as other groups during that time period, while also indicating that groups across the political spectrum obtained exemptions.¹⁴¹

Consistent with the data from the list of 176 groups released by the IRS, IRS employees told the Subcommittee that, from 2010 to 2013, the

But a substantial minority – almost one-third of the subset – did not fit that description.”).

¹⁴¹ Id. Similarly, a list of about 160 organizations whose 501(c) applications were undergoing review in November 2011, allegedly compiled by the IRS and leaked to USAToday two years later, also indicated that more applications had been filed by conservative groups than other groups. See “IRS list reveals concerns over Tea Party ‘propaganda,’” USAToday, Gregory Korte (9/17/2013), <http://www.usatoday.com/story/news/politics/2013/09/17/irs-tea-party-target-list-propaganda/2825003/> (attaching list of 160 organizations with pending applications as of November 16, 2011).

IRS saw a surge in tax exempt applications filed by conservative groups.¹⁴² Spending data in FEC filings also showed that, in the election years of 2010 and 2012, conservative 501(c)(4) groups spent almost ten times as much as liberal 501(c)(4) groups, suggesting that conservative groups may have outnumbered their liberal counterparts during that time period.¹⁴³ In addition, media reports depicted conservative groups as the leaders in the 501(c)(4) area at the time, with liberal groups working to catch up.¹⁴⁴ Together, the evidence indicates that more conservative than liberal groups filed for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status from 2010 to 2013, underwent IRS scrutiny, and ultimately won tax exempt status.

¹⁴² See, e.g., Subcommittee interviews of Holly Paz, IRS (10/30/2013) and Judith Kindell, IRS (11/5/2013).

¹⁴³ An analysis conducted by the Center for Responsive Politics found, for example, that in 2010, conservative 501(c)(4) spending was $115.2 million (88.1%), liberal 501(c)(4) spending was $10.7 million (8.2%) and “other” spending was $4.8 million (3.6%). In 2012, the Center determined that conservative 501(c)(4) spending was $265.2 million (85.3%), liberal spending was $34.7 million (11.2%) and “other” spending was $10.9 million (3.5%). “2010 Outside Spending, by Group,” and “2012 Outside Spending, by Group,” Center for Responsive Politics, <http://www.opensecrets.org/outsidespending/summ.php?cycle=2010&chrt=V&disp=O&type=U>, and <http://www.opensecrets.org/outsidespending/summ.php?cycle=2012&chrt=V&disp=O&type=U>.

III. IRS 501(C)(4) SCREENING

The IRS identified the first application for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status from a group affiliated with the Tea Party in February 2010. For the next three years, the IRS used a series of screening criteria to identify similar applications from both conservative and liberal groups, subject those applications to heightened scrutiny, and determine whether the groups should be granted tax exempt status despite their involvement with campaign activities.

During the first half of that three-year period, to identify applications of interest, the IRS employed screening criteria that used key phrases from the names of some organizations and from materials indicating their political views, rather than any direct indicators of the groups' involvement with campaign activities. From February 2010 to May 2011, the cases were referred to as "Tea Party" cases; beginning in June 2011, at the direction of IRS officials in Washington, the name of the category of cases was changed to "advocacy" cases. During both phases, the IRS subjected not only conservative groups with "Tea Party," "9/12," or "Patriot" in their names to heightened scrutiny, but also liberal groups with "Progressive," "ACORN," "Emerge," or "Occupy" in their names.

All of the cases were handled by the IRS Exempt Organizations Determinations (EOD) Unit in Cincinnati, where IRS agents reviewed the applications to determine whether they should be approved, denied, or suspended pending receipt of more information. Work to resolve the applications was often interrupted, delayed, or halted, while senior Determinations personnel sought guidance from the Exempt Organizations Technical (EOT) Unit in Washington, D.C. about how to handle the cases. Guidance was sought, because EOD personnel were uncertain how to apply the required "facts and circumstances" test, which mandated consideration of all relevant, material factors to determine whether an applicant was engaged primarily in social welfare activities. Despite constant pressure for additional guidance, EOT personnel took more than three years to resolve two test cases and drafted, but never finalized, additional guidance on how to screen, develop, and evaluate the applications.

While awaiting the promised EOT guidance, the backlog of 501(c)(4) cases awaiting IRS action grew to about 320 cases. The affected groups could and generally did continue to operate while awaiting disposition of their applications, but they were forced to act without certainty over their tax exempt status, sometimes for years. While waiting for an IRS decision on their tax exempt status, some of the groups had difficulty obtaining contributions from donors or lost funding opportunities, many spent funds on legal representation, and all were unable to exercise appeal rights to advance their cases. When, in December 2011, almost two years after the first case was flagged, a newly appointed case coordinator approved sending out “development letters” to obtain additional information needed to apply the facts and circumstances test, some of the recipients criticized some of the questions as inappropriate, burdensome, or intrusive. Some critics also complained that the letters singled out Tea Party groups for heightened scrutiny. Negative media reports and Congressional inquiries followed. In response, in the first quarter of 2012, the IRS established a special “bucketing” process which reduced the backlog of cases, but a year later still left hundreds of cases unresolved.

A. Screening 501(c) Applications Generally

In recent years, of the 70,000 applications filed each year by groups seeking tax exemption under Section 501(c), between 1,700 and 2,700 – less than 5% of the total – were filed each year by applicants seeking tax exempt status under Section 501(c)(4).¹⁴⁵ Each of those applications had to be assigned, screened, and evaluated by IRS revenue agents assigned to the Exempt Organization Determinations Unit. Key mechanisms used by the Determinations Unit to resolve the 501(c) applications included a general screening group, specialty groups focused on particular categories of applications, a general inventory of cases awaiting determination, and Be-on-the-Lookout (BOLO) lists to flag applications raising particular concerns.

During the three-year period reviewed by the Subcommittee, from 2010 to 2013, all 501(c) applications were filed with a centralized IRS Submission Processing Center in Kentucky, entered into an IRS database for exempt organizations, and then forwarded to the EO Determinations Unit in Cincinnati, Ohio.¹⁴⁶ Generally, each application was assigned to a Determinations Unit revenue agent who could seek more information from the applicant, approve the application, or deny it with the concurrence of a manager.¹⁴⁷ According to the head of the EO Screening Group, in recent years, about 30% to 40% of the 501(c) applications were quickly approved or denied; about 40% to 50% of the cases required some additional information, such as missing documentation, before they could be processed; and about 20% were assigned to a specialty group for more indepth scrutiny.¹⁴⁸

Screening Group. The typical first stop for 501(c) applications sent to the Cincinnati EOD Unit was the “Screening Group.” According to the Screening Group’s manager, John Shafer, the IRS formed the Screening Group in 2003, to centralize and standardize the screening process for 501(c) applications.¹⁴⁹ Mr. Shafer served as the Screening Group’s head from its inception in 2003 until 2013.¹⁵⁰ He explained that revenue agents assigned to the Screening Group were called “screeners” and used a screening guide sheet, called a “Be-on-the-Lookout” (BOLO) List, to identify 501(c) applications requiring heightened scrutiny.¹⁵¹ As the screeners completed work on incoming applications, they were supposed to inform the group manager who would then provide them with new applications as they came in, typically sent in hard copy form from the processing center in Kentucky.¹⁵²

According to the Screening Group manager, the training for the screeners consisted of instructing them about the applications and relevant tax code sections, and providing them with guidance from more senior personnel.¹⁵³ He explained that most of the screeners were “senior people” who had worked at the IRS for 10 to 30 years.¹⁵⁴ He indicated that, when a new agent joined the Screening Group, that person received training from a more senior screener who then reviewed the new person’s work until the new screener was comfortable with the process.¹⁵⁵

¹⁴⁸ Subcommittee interview of John Shafer, IRS (1/17/2014). TIGTA referenced similar percentages in an internal summary of an early meeting with IRS personnel about the 501(c) applications process. See 5/1/2012 “Review of [IRS]’s Process for Reviewing Applications for Tax Exemption by Potential 501(c)(4) - (6) Organizations,” prepared by TIGTA, PSI-TIGTA-05-000892 - 898, at 897 (indicating that the IRS told TIGTA that about 35% of the screened cases were “closed on merit”; about 45% required limited additional information; and about 20% required “full development”). The TIGTA audit report also stated that, in fiscal year 2012, “70% of all closed applications for tax-exempt status were approved during an initial review with little or no additional information from the organizations.” See 5/14/2013 TIGTA Audit Report, at 1.

Mr. Shafer said that the Screening Group typically had about a dozen screeners at a time, together with an administrative assistant and a secretary.¹⁵⁶ According to Gary Muthert, a senior revenue agent who worked in the Screening Group and served at times as the acting manager, the group manager assigned the incoming applications on an electronic, random basis to screeners requesting new cases.¹⁵⁷ He explained that, once a screener received a new application, the screener made one of six initial determinations:

- 1) If the application was covered by a specialty group, the screener was unable to work on it and was required to send it to the specialty group in charge of those cases.
- 2) If the application was not subject to a specialty group and the screener found the case file to be complete, the screener could immediately approve it, or could recommend denial of the application and submit the case to the group manager for review. The manager then reviewed the application and, if appropriate, could concur in the denial, completing the application process.
- 3) If the application was not subject to a specialty group and the case file was incomplete, the screener could send the application back to the applicant with a request for the missing documentation. The applicant was generally given 90 days to respond.
- 4) If the application was very close to being complete but missing only one or two items, the screener could send it to the Accelerated Processing (AP) group.
- 5) If the application was too large for the AP group or needed information beyond one or two items, the screener could send it to the Intermediate Processing (IP) group.
- 6) If the application did not fall into any of the above five categories and the screener was unsure how to process it, the screener could send it to what was called “general inventory.” The application then remained in general inventory until it was assigned to an EOD revenue agent for review.¹⁵⁸

Each EO group outside of the Screening Group also had what was called a “secondary screener” who doublechecked that the first screener had made the correct determination in sending the application to the group; if the secondary screener determined that the application should not have been sent to the group, that screener returned it to the Screening Group for further processing.¹⁵⁹

Whether an application was sent to a specialty group, AP, IP, or general inventory, it was reviewed by an EO revenue agent, called a “determinations specialist.” During the review process, the determinations specialist was required to consider the facts and circumstances depicted in the information contained in the application, as well as any applicable precedent for how the group should be handled.¹⁶⁰ If an application presented questions that required further development, the determinations specialist was authorized to engage in a dialogue with the applicant to obtain additional information.

Specialty Groups. During the time period reviewed by the Subcommittee, the Exempt Organizations (EO) group had about 12 specialty groups reviewing 501(c) applications, each of which was assigned to evaluate certain types of applications.¹⁶¹ In a 2011 email to a colleague, the head of the Determinations Unit, Cindy Thomas, described some of the specialty groups as well as the reasoning behind establishing them:

“In fact, most of the groups have more than one category of cases assigned to them. For example, one group works charter schools and farmers’ co-ops, another group works foreclosure assistance/downpayment assistance/credit counseling cases, another group works potential emerging issues and potential auto revocation cases, another carbon credit cases/VEBAs/foreign organizations, and on and on. The reason we took this step was to improve quality, decrease time per case, improve customer satisfaction, and improve employee/manager satisfaction so that everyone did not need to be a technical expert in every area.”¹⁶²

¹⁵⁹ Subcommittee interview of Stephen Seok, IRS (11/22/2013). The recent TIGTA audit found that the EO screeners were not always accurate; they forwarded to specialists some 501(c) applications that had no “indications of significant political campaign intervention,” and failed to forward other applications with “evidence of significant political campaign intervention.” 5/14/2013 TIGTA Audit Report, at 5.

Applications subject to specialty group review were required to be evaluated by the relevant EOD group and generally were not supposed to be resolved outside of it.¹⁶³

General Inventory. If a case wasn't within the subject matter of any specialty group, but could not be quickly resolved, a screener could assign the case to "general inventory."¹⁶⁴ "General inventory" was not the name of a review group, but referred to cases that had been assigned to sit in a queue until an EOD revenue agent became available to review them. Any EOD manager of a group could assign cases from the general inventory to the agents within the manager's group if they had time to work on the cases.

EO Technical. If an application raised issues for which there was no established precedent and involved concerns that could produce inconsistent outcomes, the EOD Unit could refer the case to the EO Technical (EOT) Unit.¹⁶⁵ EOT is an Exempt Organizations subdivision whose personnel work in Washington, D.C. It is staffed with higher graded tax law specialists who work with the IRS Office of Chief Counsel to interpret and provide guidance on the law governing tax exempt entities; provide technical advice on complex issues affecting the tax exempt community; and assist EO revenue agents with spotting issues and handling cases in a consistent manner.¹⁶⁶ EOT specialists had the authority to review applications and seek additional information from applicants to complete the administrative record.¹⁶⁷ If, upon review, an EOT specialist concluded that an applicant did not meet the requirements for tax-exempt status, the specialist could issue a proposed denial explaining why and provide a copy to the applicant. The applicant could then request a "conference of right" to address the issues. Following the conference, the EOT specialist typically issued a final determination. "If the application is approved, the administrative record is made publicly available" for inspection.¹⁶⁸ If the application is denied, the applicant may challenge that determination in court.

501(c) BOLOs. One of the key issues confronting the IRS was screening and categorizing the 70,000 501(c) applications that were filed each year so that similar groups were handled in a consistent manner, including, if appropriate, by being assigned to the proper specialty group. The Subcommittee was told that, in recent years, a key mechanism used by the Exempt Organizations Determinations (EOD)

Unit to help with those tasks involved the development of “Be-On-the-Lookout” Lists, referred to as “BOLOs.”

BOLOs represented an IRS effort to identify and aggregate groups of similar 501(c) applications that required special scrutiny and to subject them to a more standardized process of review.¹⁶⁹ According to the Determinations Unit head, the groups identified on the BOLO lists were generally ones which had raised concerns in the past over whether they qualified for tax exemption, or which IRS employees had reason to believe could raise tax exemption problems in the future.¹⁷⁰ The BOLOs were emailed periodically – usually on a monthly basis – to all EO determination specialists and managers to alert them to the highlighted cases and ensure they were treated in the same way.¹⁷¹

The first BOLO was issued by email in August 2010.¹⁷² Prior to that, IRS employees had sent one another email alerts about various types of entities to be aware of when processing applications.¹⁷³ According to Determinations head Cindy Thomas, EO personnel had found it too difficult to keep track of the numerous email alerts they were receiving, and the alerts were instead consolidated into a single document, resulting in the “BOLO” list.¹⁷⁴ The BOLO list consisted of a number of spreadsheets circulated as a single document.¹⁷⁵ As one senior EO official explained to another in a 2011 email: “The BOLO spreadsheet is disseminated to managers and specialists so that they have a consolidated list to reference and don’t need to keep individual emails, etc.”¹⁷⁶

EO determinations specialist Ronald Bell was the keeper of the BOLO lists, from their inception in 2010 through approximately August 2012, and then from approximately April 2013 until the BOLOs stopped being used later that year.¹⁷⁷ He told the Subcommittee that he retained the BOLOs that were sent to him, but generally did not author individual BOLO entries, with one exception explained below.¹⁷⁸ According to the EOT head, for the first two years the BOLOs were issued, the process for adding new entries to the BOLO list was informal and, at times, entries were added, revised, or updated without the knowledge or participation of senior EO personnel.¹⁷⁹ In May 2012, the process was formalized to require management approval of BOLO revisions and additions.¹⁸⁰ According to the Screening Group manager, the BOLOs were not seen as “a critical part” of the training process for new screeners, and he was unsure to what extent the screeners used the BOLOs.¹⁸¹ However, one senior screener told the Subcommittee that he used the BOLOs extensively and always checked to see if he had any cases on the BOLO list.¹⁸²

The BOLO list was divided into a handful of subsections that sometimes varied. The subsections typically included these five categories: “TAG,” “TAG Historical,” “Watch List,” “Coordinated Processing,” and “Emerging Issues.”¹⁸³ “TAG” stood for “Touch-and-Go,” a term which was used in earlier email alerts about problematic organizations to look for in 501(c) applications and which generally referred to organizations suspected of involvement with tax avoidance, fraud, or terrorism.¹⁸⁴ “TAG Historical” referred to cases that had been historically problematic for the IRS; entries in the section cautioned IRS agents to be on the lookout for related cases. The Subcommittee was told that all screeners and determination specialists were supposed to review the names in the TAG and TAG Historical sections and run searches and check their files for those entities.¹⁸⁵ Applications involving organizations listed in the two sections were supposed to be sent to a TAG specialty group and processed only by that group.¹⁸⁶

The “Watch List” section was a “general term for issues or cases in need of special handling” such as a request from the IRS Criminal Investigation Division to look for a specific application, or a request from EOT to look for applications filed by certain groups.¹⁸⁷ It was also used to alert IRS agents to problematic applications that were expected, but not yet received.¹⁸⁸

The “Coordinated Processing” section of the BOLO was used as “the mechanism for promoting uniform case handling by assigning multiple related cases to a particular specialist or group when there is existing precedent and procedures that cover the issues involved.”¹⁸⁹ It was used, for example, to flag applications involving “multiple entities related through a complex business structure such as a senior housing management company and separate senior housing properties.”¹⁹⁰

Finally, the “Emerging Issues” section of the BOLO was used to flag “an issue identified in a group of cases for which no standard practice for handling has been established.”¹⁹¹ As one senior EO official explained to a colleague in a 2011 email:

“Most new emerging issues [were] identified by screeners through the initial screening process, for example tea party cases. When these potential emerging issue cases [were] identified, they [were] assigned to the group designated to work emerging issues.”¹⁹²

The Emerging Issues section of the BOLO was used, for example, to flag applications filed by “Tea Party” organizations, “Pension trust 501(c)(2) non-traditional investment” organizations, credit counseling groups, and hedge funds seeking tax exempt status as entities whose applications should be sent to the Emerging Issues specialty group.¹⁹³

The evidence reviewed by the Subcommittee investigation indicates that the IRS used at least three of the BOLO sections to identify 501(c)(4) organizations engaged in campaign or other advocacy activities requiring heightened review. For example, as explained below, the Emerging Issues section led to hundreds of cases being selected for heightened review by EOD personnel, including groups with “Tea Party,” “9/12,” or “Patriot” in their names.¹⁹⁴ In addition, the TAG Historical section included an entry for “Progressive political activities”¹⁹⁵ that, together with the Emerging Issues section, contributed to groups with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names being subjected to heightened scrutiny for advocacy activities.¹⁹⁶ Further, as explained below, the Watch List section included entries for “ACORN successor” groups¹⁹⁷ and “Occupy” groups¹⁹⁸ which were also identified and subjected to heightened review for their advocacy activities.¹⁹⁹ In June 2012, an Emerging Issues entry was revised to encompass all of the advocacy groups in a single BOLO entry, combining the Tea Party, ACORN successor, and Occupy groups, among others. At the same time, while the evidence indicates the BOLO listings played a major role in identifying the 501(c)(4) advocacy groups subjected to heightened review, they were not the only way the groups were identified.²⁰⁰

B. Flagging Tea Party and Other Groups

In February 2010, an IRS screener working in the Cincinnati office flagged the first application in which the applicant used the phrase “Tea Party” in its name, and asked the head of the Screening Group how to handle the case. The Screening Group head forwarded an email from the screener describing the application to more senior Determinations ¹⁹⁴ See TIGTA Audit Report at 10 (“We reviewed all 298 applications that had been identified as potential political cases as of May 31, 2012.”). personnel who alerted the EO Technical Unit to the potentially high profile case. By March, a senior screener had flagged ten similar cases. He also highlighted what he called an “equal Democratic ‘tea party’ type entity, called Emerge” and later suggested flagging applications filed by groups with either “Emerge” or “Progressive” in their names. The head of the EOT agreed to provide technical advice on how to handle the applications and requested two test cases. Also in April 2010, at a regular meeting of IRS screeners to discuss emerging issues, the senior screener gave a presentation about the “Tea Party” category of cases and asked the screeners to send the cases to the Screening Group manager.

First Tea Party Group Flagged. In February 2010, Jack Koester, a senior member of the EO Screening Group, reviewed an application for tax exempt status from an organization with the words “Tea Party” in its name.²⁰¹ Characterizing the application as a “high profile case” due to “media attention” to those types of organizations, he sent an email to the Screening Group manager, Mr. Shafer, asking him how to handle it.²⁰² His action was apparently the first to flag a 501(c) application from an organization that included “Tea Party” in its name. Mr. Shafer responded by telling Mr. Koester that he would forward the issue to his supervisor. Mr. Shafer told the Subcommittee that, at the time he received the Koester email, he was not familiar with the Tea Party, but had heard of it and thought it was a conservative group.²⁰³ Mr. Shafer said that he forwarded the Koester email to his supervisor, Sharon Camarillo, who, in turn, forwarded the email to the head of the Determinations Unit, Cindy Thomas.²⁰⁴

Ms. Thomas sent an email to the acting manager of the EO Technical Unit, Holly Paz, located in Washington, D.C., asking whether “EO Technical wants this case because of recent media attention.”²⁰⁵ Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that, according to the Internal Revenue Manual, EO application cases that were without precedent and cases that had national media impact were supposed to be handled by EO

Technical.²⁰⁶ Ms. Paz responded to Ms. Thomas' inquiry in the affirmative: "I think sending it up here is a good idea given the potential for media interest."²⁰⁷ Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that her plan was to have EOT work on the case and develop a template for how to handle future determinations in the area although, ultimately, no template was developed.²⁰⁸

Ten Cases Flagged. By mid-March 2010, the Screening Group had identified ten applications that raised issues similar to the application Mr. Koester had flagged in February from the organization with "Tea Party" in its name.²⁰⁹ Mr. Muthert, a senior revenue agent who worked in the Screening Group and sometimes served as its acting manager, told the Subcommittee that he had found the additional cases by conducting searches of the IRS database, TEDS, using the following words: "Tea Party," "9-12," and "Patriot."²¹⁰ He said that he presented the cases to the Screening Group manager, Mr. Shafer.²¹¹

On March 16, 2010, Mr. Shafer sent an email to the EO Determinations head, Ms. Thomas, stating: "We have identified a total of 10 Tea Party cases. Three cases have been approved, two 501(c)(4) and one 501(c)(3). I have collected the other cases and will forward ²¹⁰ Subcommittee interview of Gary Muthert, IRS (1/15/2014). According to Mr. Muthert, Mr. Shafer did not ask how he found these cases. Id. When asked if he had a negative view of the Tea Party, Mr. Muthert replied: "No, I align with them." Id. It is also important to note that the term "Patriot" was not used exclusively by conservative groups. In 2010, for example, a 501(c)(4) group called "Patriot Majority USA" began operations, supporting views and candidates affiliated with the Democratic Party. In the 2012 election cycle, the Center for Responsive Politics characterized it as one of the largest spending, Democratic-leaning 501(c)(4) groups. See "2012 Outside Spending, by Group: Non-Disclosing Groups," prepared by Center for Responsive Politics, <http://www.opensecrets.org/outsidespending/summ.php?cycle=2012&chrt=V&disp=O&type=U>. For more information about Patriot Majority USA, see the Report section on Evaluating Campaign and Social Welfare Activities, below.

them to EO Technical.”²¹² Ms. Thomas forwarded Mr. Shafer’s email to the EOT head, Ms. Paz. The next day, March 17, 2010, Ms. Thomas wrote to Ms. Paz: “Did you know about these additional 10 tea party cases? Do you want all of them or do you only want a few and then give us advice as to what to do with the remaining?”²¹³

Ms. Paz responded that EOT would take “a few more cases, (I’d say 2) and would ask that you hold the rest until we get a sense of what the issues may be.”²¹⁴ In response, Mr. Shafer sent two cases to EOT and held the remaining case files in his office.²¹⁵

Democratic Equivalents Flagged. At the same time the Tea Party cases were being presented to the EOT, on March 16, 2010, Mr. Muthert sent an email to Mr. Shafer about what he called “an equal Democratic ‘tea party’ type entity, called Emerge,” and offered to provide information on applications filed by that group as well.²¹⁶ Mr. Muthert wrote:

“I just looked at CNN.com. There is a major TEA Party protest in Washington D.C. today. I watched the video. It appears the TEA party is a Republican based entity. I am now a resident expert on the TEA Party. However, that being said, there is also an equal Democratic ‘tea party’ type entity, called ‘Emerge.’ If you want more info, just ask.”²¹⁷

Mr. Shafer replied: “What’s the [REDACTED BY IRS] movement?”²¹⁸ The Subcommittee was unable to identify any substantive response made by Mr. Muthert to Mr. Shafer at the time.

As detailed further below, other evidence shows that, by the time of Mr. Muthert’s 2010 email, the IRS had already flagged multiple applications submitted by Emerge groups, which were affiliated with a national organization, Emerge America, dedicated to encouraging and training Democratic women candidates to run for office. Beginning in 2008, the applications had been set aside for heightened review due to their political activities and apparent private benefits for the Democratic Party. According to IRS materials released by the House Committee on Ways and Means, the Emerge groups were the subject of a Significant Case Report in April 2010, the same month a similar report discussed the Tea Party cases; the Emerge cases were subjected to the same level of heightened scrutiny, including EOT reviews; and the Emerge groups ultimately were either denied tax exempt status or lost their 501(c)(4) tax exempt status due to engaging in partisan advocacy activities.²¹⁹ More information about these cases is provided below.

In addition to conducting searches for Tea Party groups, Mr. Muthert suggested conducting searches using the term “Emerge” and “Progressive” to identify other groups warranting heightened review, both before and after the August 2010 BOLO urged screeners to look for those organizations.²²⁰ Mr. Muthert explained to the Subcommittee that “Progressive” was one of the entries in the BOLO spreadsheet, in the section called “TAG Historical.”²²¹ Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that all EO screeners were obligated to be on the lookout for groups described in the BOLO TAG Historical section, including by running searches for those entities and checking their files to see if they had any of those cases.²²² Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that, just as he did with the Tea Party, he ran electronic queries using the word “Progressive” and would have sent any cases he found to the relevant specialty group handling them.²²³ According to an analysis by the IRS Chief Risk Officer, over a period running from May 2010 to December 2012, 20 applications were filed by groups with the words “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names, most of which were subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS, demonstrating that, at the same time the agency began to focus on Tea Party groups, it also began to examine progressive groups.²²⁴

²²⁴ See IRS analysis of 501(c)(4) advocacy cases as of 6/5/2012, PSI-IRS-37-000004 - 019, at 011 - 012 (showing that at least 11 groups with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names had filed 501(c)(4) applications that had been subjected to IRS reviews lasting six months or longer). This evidence shows that from 2010 to 2012, progressive groups were applying for tax exempt status and were being identified and subjected to heightened review by IRS personnel, countering the assertion in the Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views that cases involving progressive groups “were inactive during the time period of the TIGTA audit.” Dissenting Views at 227, 229, 237.

Other Screeners Notified about Cases. According to Mr. Muthert, he continued to run searches to find “Tea Party” cases and found additional examples which were held within his Screening Group, while awaiting word from EOT on how to handle them.²²⁵ On April 5, 2010, the head of the Determinations Unit, Cindy Thomas, asked Mr. Muthert, then acting manager of the Screening Group while Mr. Shafer was on vacation, to compile a list of the Tea Party cases that had been identified.²²⁶ In response, Mr. Muthert provided a list of 18 organizations, almost double the number from a few weeks earlier.²²⁷

On April 14, 2010, Mr. Muthert gave a presentation on the cases at a routine Screening Group meeting designed to alert screeners to a variety of applications and emerging issues.²²⁸ The minutes from the meeting provided this summary of the presentation:

“Gary Muthert gave a presentation on ‘Tea Party Cases.’ He stated that 3 cases have been approved including one as a 501(c)(3). We are waiting guidance from HQ on these cases. John Shafer is h[o]lding these cases in his office if you identify one. Give case information to Gary Muthert as well.”²²⁹

Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that after giving this presentation, he stopped running electronic searches for the applications, because he believed that the other screeners had been put on notice to look for the cases and would turn them over to Mr. Shafer.²³⁰ Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that he did not believe the other screeners had been running queries like he had been doing to find the cases, but were identifying the cases as they came in and were assigned to the screeners for review.

On April 24, 2010, Ms. Thomas sent the list of 18 cases to Steven Grodnitzky, then acting EOT head while Ms. Paz was on maternity leave, and noted: “None of these cases have been assigned. They have been sitting in our Screening Group waiting for guidance from EOT.”²³¹ Her email was sent about two months after the first Tea Party application had been flagged by the Screening Group.

C. Reviewing Test Cases

The EO Screening Group sent two “test cases” involving applications filed by Tea Party groups to the EO Technical Unit in early 2010, which left them unresolved for more than three years. The initial EOT specialist assigned to the cases, Carter Hull, took a year to obtain information from the applicants, analyze the issues, and propose how the applications should be handled, recommending that a 501(c)(4) application be approved and a 501(c)(3) application be denied. On the instruction of EO head Lois Lerner, his analysis of the test cases was then forwarded to the Tax Exempt and Government Entities (TEGE) division within the IRS Chief Counsel’s office for analysis and advice. Even though the cases had been pending for over a year and other development letters had been sent, the TEGE legal counsel advised obtaining additional information from the applicants before deciding the cases, including reviewing any campaign activities undertaken in 2010. In response, the EOT specialist drafted a new letter requesting the additional information, but failed to send it after the cases were reassigned to a new EOT specialist in August 2011, about 18 months after the applications were first filed with the IRS. The new EOT specialist, Hilary Goehausen, recommended denying both applications, but those recommendations were not acted on, and both test cases remained unresolved for another two years. During the course of their work, both EOT specialists prepared Significant Case Reports that provided monthly updates on the two test cases to senior EO management.

Initial EOT Review of Test Cases. In late February 2010, Holly Paz, EOT head, told Determinations head Cindy Thomas that it would be a good idea to send the first Tea Party case to EOT for review.²³² In mid-March, Ms. Paz suggesting sending two Tea Party cases to EOT to “get a sense of what the issues may be.”²³³ On March 31, 2010, Ms. Paz accepted two “tea party” cases.²³⁴

In April 2010, Ronald Shoemaker, the manager of EOT Group II, assigned the two Tea Party cases to Carter (Chip) Hull, a senior EOT Tax Law Specialist who had been with the IRS for decades, and told him they were test cases intended to help provide guidance to the Cincinnati office on how to handle those types of applications.²³⁵ Around the same time, Steven Grodnitzky, then acting head of the EOT, asked Mr. Hull to begin preparing “Significant Case Reports” for the test cases, which is a type of monthly report that the IRS uses to monitor cases with significant issues.²³⁶ The report information was provided to senior management, including EO head Lois Lerner.²³⁷

Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that, after the two test cases were assigned to him, he read and analyzed the case files, one of which involved a 501(c)(4) organization and the other of which involved a 501(c)(3) organization.²³⁸ He said that the cases fit “broadly” within the Tea Party category but, at the time he was analyzing them, he did not know why they were called Tea Party cases or why the IRS was interested in them.²³⁹ When Ms. Thomas, the head of the Determinations Unit, was asked why the category used for the cases was called “Tea Party,” she explained that the first case involved an organization with Tea Party in its name.²⁴⁰

Mr. Hull sent a development letter to the 501(c)(3) applicant, but never received a reply from the group and closed the file.²⁴¹ He also sent a development letter to the 501(c)(4) applicant and received the requested information.²⁴² At some point, Mr. Hull requested another case to take the place of the closed 501(c)(3) case, and Mr. Shoemaker sent him another 501(c)(3) Tea Party case.²⁴³

He also indicated that the group submitted additional information in response to the letter, but a few items were still missing. He indicated that the group ultimately provided all of the missing information. Subcommittee interview of Carter Hull, IRS (11/19/2013).

²⁴³ Subcommittee interview of Carter Hull, IRS (11/19/2013).

In October 2010, Mr. Hull sent a memorandum to Mr. Shoemaker providing an update on the two test cases, explaining that he was working on those as well as other similar applications in coordination with the Cincinnati office.²⁴⁴ That memorandum was dated about seven months after the test cases had first been referred to EOT. During that period, Mr. Hull had been working with Elizabeth Hofacre, a Determinations specialist who had been tasked with coordinating the Tea Party cases and who had sought his advice with respect to developing the facts associated with those cases while awaiting resolution of the two test cases.²⁴⁵

On November 20, 2010, Determinations head Cindy Thomas sent an email to Steven Bowling, head of the EOD group handling Tea Party cases, to update him on the EOT review of the test cases. She wrote:

“I had a discussion with Holly Paz on Wednesday (11/17) afternoon to again discuss the tea party cases. She advised me that we were sending applicable parts of the application package to EOT along with the additional information letter and that based on this information they are finding that not all the tea party cases have the same issues. This is why they have not been able to prepare a template [development] letter with additional questions. EOT is putting together a briefing paper and going to discuss the various issues in these cases with Judy Kindell [Senior Technical Advisor to EO Director]. If Judy does not believe they have a basis for denial for the egregious situations, then they will most likely recommend all cases be approved. In the meantime, the specialist(s) need to continue working the applications as they have and will need to advise applicants that the cases are still under review. If this has not been finalized by 12/13/2010, please follow up with me and I will ask for a status report from Holly.”²⁴⁶

In December 2010, the test cases were still unresolved, and Ms. Thomas asked Ms. Paz for an update: “Has there been any update regarding the tea party cases as far as the discussion with Judy Kindell?”²⁴⁷ Ms. Paz responded:

“We will be going to Judy shortly with the proposal to grant exemption to the c4 applicant The c3 application is not yet ready for discussion with Judy – TP’s [taxpayer’s] response to development letter is under review. We expect to move that to Judy sometime in January.”²⁴⁸

In January 2011, Lois Lerner, head of Exempt Organizations, reviewed a Significant Case Report for that month which included a discussion of the two Tea Party test cases. On February 1, 2011, Ms. Lerner warned Holly Paz, EOT head, about the dangers involved with those cases and suggested the cases should not be left in the Cincinnati office:

“Tea Party Matter very dangerous. This could be the vehicle to go to court on the issue of whether Citizen’s United overturning the ban on corporate spending applies to tax exempt rules. Counsel and Judy Kindell need to be in on this one Cincy [Cincinnati office] should probably NOT have these cases – Holly please see what exactly they have please.”²⁴⁹

Ms. Paz responded that the Cincinnati agents were being carefully supervised and were not making any final decisions on the cases until the two test cases were resolved by EOT:

“Cases in Determs are being supervised by Chip Hull at each step – he reviews info from TPs [taxpayers], correspondence to TPs, etc. No decisions are going out of Cincy until we go all the way through the process with the c3 and c4 cases here. I believe the c4 will be ready to go over to Judy soon.”²⁵⁰

Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that, after this email exchange, she communicated Ms. Lerner’s instructions that the two test cases be elevated to Judith Kindell and legal counsel in the Tax Exempt and Government Entities (TEGE) division of the IRS Chief Counsel’s office.²⁵¹ Ms. Kindell, along with Siri Buller and Justin Lowe, were then the EOT subject matter experts on political advocacy and campaign issues.²⁵² The TEGE division was a key source of legal advice on tax exempt issues for EO personnel.

Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that, at some point in late 2010 or early 2011, he discussed the Tea Party test cases with his “reviewer,”

Elizabeth Katzenberg, and she suggested sending the cases to Judith Kindell for her review.²⁵³

In late 2010 or the first quarter of 2011, Mr. Hull finally reached a decision on how the two test cases should be handled, recommending that tax exemption be approved for the 501(c)(4) group, but denied for the 501(c)(3) group.²⁵⁴ A later briefing paper prepared for EO head Lois Lerner indicated that his favorable recommendation on the 501(c)(4) group was because the group would “conduct advocacy and political intervention, but political intervention will be 20% or less of activities.”²⁵⁵ The briefing paper indicated that his recommended denial of the 501(c)(3) application was based on the group’s “ties to politically active (c)(4)s and 527s.”²⁵⁶ The paper also noted: “A proposed denial is being revised by TLS [Tax Law Specialist] to incorporate the org.’s response to the most recent development letter.”²⁵⁷

The meeting between Mr. Hull and Ms. Kindell took place on or around April 7, 2011, about two months after it was first proposed and a full year after Mr. Hull first received the test cases;²⁵⁸ the reason why the meeting was so delayed is unclear. Mr. Hull met at the time with both Ms. Katzenberg and Ms. Kindell, and discussed his analysis and recommendations for approving the 501(c)(4) application and denying the 501(c)(3) application.²⁵⁹ Ms. Kindell responded by recommending that additional information be obtained regarding both cases, and that the cases be sent to TEGE counsel for review.²⁶⁰

After the meeting, Ms. Kindell wrote to Lois Lerner, EO head, and Ms. Paz, EOT head, proposing that all of the Tea Party cases collected by the Determination Unit in Cincinnati be moved to the EOT office in Washington, D.C., “[g]iven the sensitivity of the issue.”²⁶¹ Ms. Paz responded that the EOT staff was busy with other work which precluded them from being able to work on the Tea Party cases.²⁶² Ms. Paz noted that, by then, the inventory of Tea Party cases had grown to 102.²⁶³

In May 2011, Mr. Hull included this observation in his Sensitive Case Report:

“The various ‘tea party’ organizations are separately organized, but appear to be a part of a national political movement that may be involved in political activities. The ‘tea party’ organizations are being followed closely in national newspapers (such as The Washington Post) almost on a regular basis. Cincinnati is holding three applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as educational organizations and approximately twenty-two applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations. Two organizations that we believe may be ‘tea party’ organizations already have been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(4). EOT has not seen the case files, but are requesting copies of them. The issue is whether these organizations are involved in campaign intervention or, alternatively, in nonexempt political activity.”²⁶⁴

His report indicated that the total number of related, pending applications had reached 25, and that his office had “not seen” those case files but were in the process of requesting them. The total cited in his report conflicted with the larger total given to EO head Lois Lerner in the prior month of 102 cases. At the time of his report, the two Tea Party test cases had been pending for over one year without resolution.

Consultation with TEGE Counsel. In May or June 2011, at the suggestion of Ms. Kindell, Mr. Hull forwarded the two test case files to the TEGE division of the IRS Chief Counsel's office for its review.²⁶⁵ He included his recommendations for approving one application and denying the other.²⁶⁶

On June 26, 2011, Lois Lerner, head of Exempt Organizations, met with lawyers from the TEGE Counsel's office.²⁶⁷ The meeting participants included EO senior personnel Holly Paz and Nan Marks, and TEGE legal counsel Don Spellmann and Janine Cook. According to Mr. Spellmann, at the meeting, Ms. Lerner explained that, by then, EO had 100 "advocacy cases," and she wanted to find a way to process them.²⁶⁸ Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that his office had suggested drafting a model development letter.²⁶⁹ He said that Ms. Lerner told TEGE counsel that EOT would forward them the two pending test cases to demonstrate what the cases looked like and what issues were involved.²⁷⁰

Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that, after the meeting with Ms. Lerner, the TEGE Counsel's office discovered that the two test cases had already been provided to them by Mr. Hull, and that one had been assigned to Amy Franklin and the other to David Marshall.²⁷¹ Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that he personally reviewed the case files and saw that both organizations had been engaged in some campaign activities.²⁷² He indicated that he planned to recommend that

Two months later, on August 4, 2011, a brief meeting took place between TEGE Counsel and EOT staff in which TEGE recommended that EOT "factually develop the election year of 2010."²⁷⁴ Invited participants were TEGE counsels Don Spellmann, Amy Franklin, David Marshall, and Ken Griffin; and EOT staff Carter Hull, Hilary Goehausen, Justin Lowe, Andy Megosh, and Elizabeth Kastenber.²⁷⁵ In an email discussing the upcoming meeting, EOT head Ms. Paz wrote that the meeting would be helpful to coordinate with counsel on the two test cases, a guidesheet – referred to as a "checksheet" – to help determinations specialists develop and evaluate the cases, and a research paper defining "exclusively."²⁷⁶ Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that he recalled attending the meeting with Michael Seto and Amy Franklin, but did not recall anything else about the meeting other than it was brief.²⁷⁷

On August 10, 2011, TEGE counsel participated in a larger and longer meeting with Carter Hull and other EOT staff to discuss the two test cases and "advocacy case development."²⁷⁸ The invited participants were Carter Hull; the three TEGE lawyers, Donald Spellmann, Amy Franklin, and David Marshall; and other EOT personnel, including Elizabeth Kastenber, Hilary Goehausen, Justin Lowe, Andy Megosh, and Ronald Shoemaker.²⁷⁹ According to Mr. Hull, at the meeting, TEGE counsel recommended collecting additional information about both test cases by sending another development letter to the groups and reviewing the groups' 2010 election activities since that election cycle had recently concluded.²⁸⁰ Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he was surprised by the recommendation for additional development letters, since the applications had already been pending for more than a year,²⁸¹ and he had already sent at least one development letter to each group.

Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that his office had offered to help Mr. Hull prepare the suggested development letters, but never heard back from Mr. Hull or anyone else with regard to the test cases.²⁸² Mr. Spellmann also told the Subcommittee that although the TEGE counsel's office had offered to draft a model development letter, the EOT head, Holly Paz, told him not to do so.²⁸³ When asked whether TEGE counsel had caused a delay with regard to processing the test cases, William Wilkins, IRS Chief Counsel, told the Subcommittee that he had instructed his staff to look into the matter and his staff had found there was no delay.²⁸⁴ Mr. Spellmann concurred there was no delay on TEGE Counsel's end, contending that his office received the applications from Mr. Hull in June 2011, met with Mr. Hull in August 2011, and then never heard anything further about the cases.²⁸⁵

²⁸⁴ Subcommittee interview of William Wilkins, IRS (12/4/2013). Mr. Wilkins also told the Subcommittee that he had been unaware at the time that TEGE legal counsel had been consulted about the test cases in 2011, and said he learned of their role only when the TIGTA report was published in 2013. Id.

²⁸⁵ Subcommittee interview of Donald Spellmann, IRS (12/18/2013). Aside from the August 2011 meeting on the two test cases, Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that the TEGE Counsel's office had no other role in specific advocacy cases aside from two brief matters that took place in 2012 and 2013. Id. According to Mr. Spellmann, in April 2012, EOT transferred to the TEGE Counsel's office an application involving an applicant with Tea Party in its name, but TEGE Counsel did not review the case and returned it to EOT, because TEGE Counsel knew that those cases were supposed to be handled through a special "bucketing process" that had recently been established, as described further below. Also according to Mr. Spellmann, on another occasion in early 2013, prior to publication of the TIGTA report, Sharon Light, EO Senior Technical Advisor, sent a proposed 501(c)(4) denial to TEGE counsel for review involving a 501(c)(4) organization advocating on behalf of Democratic candidates. On that occasion, TEGE counsels Don Spellmann and Susan Brown agreed with the recommendation to deny the exemption. Id.

According to Mr. Hull, in August 2011, after the meeting with TEGE counsel's office, Michael Seto, EO Quality Assurance Manager, told Mr. Hull that his Tea Party cases were being reassigned to another EOT specialist.²⁸⁶ Holly Paz, EOT head, told the Subcommittee that she made the decision to reassign the cases after speaking with Mr. Seto about Mr. Hull's work.²⁸⁷ Other EO personnel had apparently also questioned the quality of Mr. Hull's work.²⁸⁸

Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that she assigned the two test cases to both Hilary Goehausen, a new attorney in EOT, and Justin Lowe, a more senior EOT specialist with expertise on political advocacy and campaign issues.²⁸⁹ Ms. Goehausen, an attorney who had started at the IRS in the EOT Unit earlier in 2011, told the Subcommittee that Mr. Seto had asked her to take on the cases, because one of the subject matter experts on campaign activities, Siri Buller, was leaving the IRS.²⁹⁰ Ms. Goehausen also told the Subcommittee that she believed that the backlog of cases needing action had accumulated due to a cessation of work on them in the Cincinnati office while awaiting EOT guidance.²⁹¹ When asked during an interview by staff from two House Committees, Ms. Goehausen described herself as a registered Republican.²⁹²

²⁸⁶ Subcommittee interview of Carter Hull, IRS (11/19/2013). Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he had known Mr. Seto a long time, and when he was told about the reassignment of the cases, he didn't want to ask why and did not ask why. Id.

²⁸⁸ Cindy Thomas, Determinations Unit head, told the Subcommittee that the reason for Mr. Hull's removal was that he was not handling the cases quickly enough. Subcommittee interview of Cindy Thomas, IRS (11/13/2013). Three months earlier, on May 26, 2011, Lois Lerner, EO head, wrote to Holly Paz, EOT head, as well as other colleagues about a 501(c)(4) organization: "Looks to me like [REDACTED BY IRS] is simply an acronym for [REDACTED BY IRS] (-: Joseph, Cindy also believes there is an application in Cincy [Cincinnati] on this as part of a larger look — it is being coordinated with EO Tech." 5/26/2011 email from Lois Lerner to Nanette Downing, Joseph Grant, and others, "C 4," IRSR0000222949 - 950. A: Yes.

Q: What is your party affiliation?

A: Republican Party.

According to Ms. Goehausen, Mr. Hull's two cases were transferred to her, but no one described them as "test cases."²⁹³ Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he provided Ms. Geohasuen with a great deal of information about the two cases, but did not speak with her about them after they were transferred.²⁹⁴ Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he also drafted an additional development letter, but did not send it because he no longer had the test cases.²⁹⁵

Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that, after researching the law and reviewing the case files, she prepared proposed denials on both applications.²⁹⁶ She indicated that she did not consult with TEGE counsel prior to making the recommendations. Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that she asked to be taken off of the cases nearly a year later, in the summer of 2012.²⁹⁷ She also told the Subcommittee that, as of the end of 2013, the two Tea Party test cases still had not been closed, more than three years after they were first flagged in early 2010.²⁹⁸

D. Handling Other Tea Party Cases in Cincinnati: February to October 2010

At the same time the Tea Party test cases were sent to EOT for guidance on how to handle them, the EO Screening Group continued to identify additional applications raising similar concerns. To collect and analyze those cases, the Determinations Unit designated Elizabeth Hofacre, an EO determinations specialist in the Emerging Issues Specialty Group in the Cincinnati office, as the "Tea Party Coordinator." For the next eight months, the evidence indicates that the screeners and Ms. Hofacre had different views as to what types of organizations fit into the Tea Party category, leading to confusion over what cases should be sent to her. Although most screeners thought the category included both conservative and liberal groups, Ms. Hofacre viewed her job as analyzing only conservative groups and redirected any other cases referred to her to the general inventory of tax exempt cases. At the same time, internal EO presentations clearly included both conservative and liberal groups within the Tea Party category of cases.

While serving as the case coordinator, Ms. Hofacre attempted to develop and resolve the 40 or so cases she collected, including by sending development letters and seeking guidance from EOT Carter Hull, but ongoing delays over the test cases stymied her efforts. In October 2010, Ms. Hofacre asked to move to a different IRS division, and her cases were reassigned.

First Tea Party Coordinator. After identifying the first Tea Party case in February 2010, Cincinnati continued to amass similar cases. From February 2010 to October 2010, about 40 cases falling into the Tea Party category were assigned to Elizabeth Hofacre, a determinations specialist for Emerging Issues.²⁹⁹ When she first began collecting the cases, Ms. Hofacre worked in Group 7825, headed by Joseph Herr.³⁰⁰ Later in 2010, after the EO groups were reorganized, Ms. Hofacre moved to Group 7822, bringing her Emerging Issues cases with her.³⁰¹ Group 7822 was headed by Steven Bowling.³⁰²

Confusion Over Relevant Applications. As screeners in the Screening Group identified potential “Tea Party” cases, they forwarded them to Ms. Hofacre who retained the case files. The evidence indicates that the screeners as well as other EO personnel were confused as to what types of organizations fit into the Tea Party category and should be sent to Ms. Hofacre. Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that screeners sent her all types of organizations, both liberal and conservative.³⁰³ She also told the Subcommittee that she kept the conservative ones and sent the liberal ones to the general inventory, because she understood that the phrase, “Tea Party,” meant she was responsible for reviewing only the conservative organizations.³⁰⁴ Many of her colleagues, however, viewed the term, “Tea Party,” as including both conservative and liberal groups.³⁰⁵

³⁰⁵ In interviews conducted by TIGTA, for example, most IRS employees said the term “Tea Party” included both conservative and liberal groups. See, e.g., 7/30/2012 TIGTA interview of Justin Lowe, “Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political Activity,” PSI-TIGTA-03-000669 (According to Mr. Lowe, “Cincinnati referred to cases as Tea Party, but it was just a shorthand for all advocacy cases.”); 7/31/2012 TIGTA interview of Holly Paz, “Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political Activity,” PSI-TIGTA-03-000678 - 682, at 679 (According to Ms. Paz, “[c]ases were commonly referred to as Tea Party cases in Cincinnati and by Chip Hull. It did not occur to Determinations not to use this ‘short hand’ for the types of cases they were identifying. Other issues have been referred to by particular names in the past.”); 7/31/2012 TIGTA interview of Sharon Light, “Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political Activity,” PSI-TIGTA-03-000685 (“She has always referred to these cases as advocacy cases, but prior to her involvement they were probably referred to as Tea Party cases. People understood that Tea Party referred to a range of issues, not the Tea Party specifically.”); 8/7/2012 TIGTA interview of Cindy Thomas,

On July 28, 2010, at a routine “Screening Workshop” designed to alert screeners to a variety of issues, both Mr. Muthert and Ms. Hofacre made presentations to explain what types of cases should be sent to her as part of the “Tea Party” category of cases. The presentations reflect their division of opinion over what cases were included in that category, with Mr. Muthert identifying both conservative and liberal groups involved with “political activities,” and Ms. Hofacre identifying only conservative groups.

Two key documents describe what was discussed at the July 2010 workshop, the official IRS notes summarizing the issues addressed and a powerpoint presentation shown to IRS screeners. The official IRS “Notes” summarizing the issues discussed at the workshop included this summary of Mr. Muthert’s presentation:

“Current/Political Activities: Gary Muthert

- Discussion focused on the political activities of Tea Parties and the like – regardless of the type of application.
- If in doubt Err on the Side of Caution and transfer to [Group] 7822.
- Indicated the following names and/or titles were of interest and should be flagged for review:
 - 9/12 Project,
 - Emerge,
 - Progressive
 - We The People,
 - Rally Patriots, and
 - Pink-Slip Program.”³⁰⁶

The named groups included both conservative and liberal groups. The conservative groups were 9/12 Project, We The People, Rally Patriots, and Pink-Slip Program; the liberal groups were Emerge, a group that helped Democratic women candidates run for office, and Progressive.³⁰⁷ This IRS document shows that, even before the first BOLO was issued, IRS screeners were being advised to be on the lookout for both conservative and liberal groups.

“Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political Activity,” PSI-TIGTA-03-000705 - 707 (According to Ms. Thomas, “Determinations should also not have used the term Tea Party to refer to advocacy cases. They did not think about how it would look to outsiders. Tea Party was just used as a shorthand for political advocacy cases.”). IRS employees provided similar statements to the Subcommittee.

³⁰⁶ 7/28/2010 “Screening Workshop Notes,” prepared by IRS, attached to 7/29/2010 email from Nancy Heagney to multiple IRS colleagues, IRSR0000006700 - 704, at 703 (circulating the “Screening Workshop meeting minutes”).

³⁰⁷ The Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views state, at 238, that only groups with “Tea Party,” “9/12,” or “Patriot” in their names were flagged for enhanced review, but this IRS document shows that, in July 2010, the IRS was also using the names “Emerge” and “Progressive” to flag groups for review.

The Screening Workshop Notes followed the Muthert summary with this summary of Ms. Hofacre's presentation:

"Elizabeth Hofacre, Tea Party Coordinator/Reviewer

- Re-emp[has]ize that applications with Key Names and/or Subjects should be transferred to [Group] 7822 for Secondary Screening. Activities must be primary.
- 'Progressive' applications are not considered 'Tea Parties.'"³⁰⁸

Ms. Hofacre's presentation showed that, contrary to Mr. Muthert, she did not consider applications filed by "Progressive" groups to be within the "Tea Party" category of cases and advised against sending her applications filed by those groups.³⁰⁹

In addition to summarizing the two presentations, the Screening Workshop Notes attached a 25-page powerpoint presentation that was shown at the meeting addressing a variety of issues.³¹⁰ Six of those pages addressed the cases discussed by Mr. Muthert and Ms. Hofacre.³¹¹ The first page presented images of an elephant and a donkey, symbols of the Republican and Democratic political parties, suggesting that the cases were portrayed as involving groups across the political spectrum.³¹² Other pages named the conservative and liberal groups listed in the Muthert summary above.³¹³ None of the pages contained any indication that the Tea Party category of cases was limited to conservative groups; the presentation's overall message was, indeed, the opposite.

Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee there was a great deal of confusion at the meeting about which cases should be considered "Tea Party" cases.³¹⁴ The meeting minutes themselves note, on the one hand, that both liberal and conservative groups should be flagged for additional screening, while on the other hand, that "Progressive" applications were not to be considered "Tea Parties." At the same time, the powerpoint presentation indicated that both liberal and conservative groups should be flagged. In contrast to Mr. Muthert, the Screening Group manager, John Shafer, told the Subcommittee that he did not recall a great deal of confusion by the screeners at the July meeting; he indicated that if an applicant appeared to engage in campaign activity that did not adhere to the 501(c)(4) law, the application was supposed to be sent to Ms. Hofacre, regardless of whether it had a liberal or conservative character.³¹⁵ All of the EO personnel interviewed by the Subcommittee agreed that, in 2010, IRS management did not intervene to clarify what applications were intended to be included in the new category of Tea Party cases.

August 2010 BOLO. In August 2010, the month after the screeners' meeting, the EO Determinations Unit sent out the first BOLO to help screeners identify applications warranting additional scrutiny. That BOLO included an entry using the phrase "Tea Party" and urged EO employees to be on the lookout for applicants using that phrase in their names or application materials.³¹⁶ Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that she authored the BOLO language, with assistance from and the approval of more senior personnel, John Waddell and Steve Bowling.³¹⁷ The BOLO entry, which appeared in the "Emerging Issues" section, stated:

"These cases involve various local organizations in the Tea Party movement [that] are applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)."³¹⁸

As indicated earlier, "Tea Party" was not the only political group named in the August BOLO. In addition, the BOLO's "TAG Historical" section contained an entry urging EO employees to be on the lookout for applicants using "Progressive" in either their names or their applications. The TAG Historical entry for "Progressive political activities" stated:

"[C]ommon thread is the word 'progressive.' Activities appear to lean towards a new political party. Activities are partisan and appear anti-Republican. You see references to 'blue' as being 'progressive.'"³¹⁹

This description of the progressive groups focused on their "political activities" as the central concern.

The Minority Staff's Dissenting Views state that the "progressive cases, unlike their Tea Party counterparts, were not selected for additional scrutiny because of the group's name," see Dissenting Views at 228, 238, but this BOLO entry explicitly directed IRS screeners to focus on "the word 'progressive.'"

In addition, as indicated earlier, another BOLO section called the “BOLO List” – later renamed the “Watch List” – urged EO employees to be on the lookout for “ACORN successor” groups. The BOLO’s description of those groups was mostly redacted by the IRS, but stated in part: “ACORN successors, Following the breakup of ACORN [REDACTED BY IRS].”³²⁰ A later email urged EOD personnel to focus on the names and political views of those ACORN successor groups.³²¹ These two BOLO entries show that, from the first BOLO, the IRS did not single out only conservative groups for greater scrutiny, but also spotlighted liberal groups.

Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that she was the person who actually sent the email containing the first BOLO in August 2010.³²² She also explained that, by mistake, instead of sending the BOLO only to the EO Determinations email list, she sent the BOLO to everyone on the EO’s email list, including EOT.

After the August 2010 BOLO was issued, screener Gary Muthert told the Subcommittee that if an organization had the words “Tea Party” in its name, the screeners automatically sent the application to Ms. Hofacre, but “anything else was a guess.”³²³ In contrast, the Screening Group manager, John Shafer, told the Subcommittee that it was common knowledge that all organizations involved with campaign activity or political advocacy had to be sent to Ms. Hofacre, whether conservative or liberal.³²⁴ At the same time, Ms. Hofacre continued to view her job as coordinating only those applications whose organizations were conservative in nature. The diverging views of these three key individuals demonstrate the ongoing confusion about what groups were supposed to be included in the “Tea Party” category of cases.

Development Letters. In addition to identifying and retaining “Tea Party” applications, Ms. Hofacre was responsible for developing them and, if possible, resolving them. Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that, even though she was the Tea Party coordinator, the IRS provided no special training or guidance to help her determine how to develop or evaluate an organization that appeared to be involved with campaign activity or political advocacy.³²⁵ Ms. Hofacre's manager, Joseph Herr, told her that she needed to get guidance from EOT on how to handle the applications, and she contacted Carter Hull, the EOT specialist handling the two test cases.³²⁶

According to Ms. Hofacre, she initially sent Mr. Hull examples of some of the cases she was collecting and asked for his suggestions on appropriate development letters.³²⁷ She also supplied him with initial drafts of those development letters and at times supplied copies of the case files.³²⁸ Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that, at the direction of his supervisor, Ronald Shoemaker, he contacted Steve Grodnitzky who was then acting EO Director, and they worked together on a draft for the first development letter which Mr. Hull then sent to Ms. Hofacre.³²⁹

Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that Ms. Hofacre contacted him seeking advice on about 40 cases total.³³⁰ Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that she contacted Mr. Hull regarding 30 to 40 cases, of which she sent out about 20 development letters to the organizations.³³¹ One IRS document produced to the Subcommittee indicates that, from May 2010 to October 2010, Mr. Hull reviewed and, in most instances, provided comments on, approximately 26 applications and development letters.³³² Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that she recalled one issue in connection with those development letters; the letters asked for copies of the applicants' Facebook and Twitter pages which upset some Tea Party organizations, but Ms. Hofacre said she had asked for the same information from other groups she had evaluated.³³³

At one point in October 2010, Determinations head Cindy Thomas wrote to EOT head Ms. Paz expressing concern about EOT's ongoing involvement with the Tea Party cases, which was slowing down the review process:

“I have a concern with the approach being used to develop the tea party cases we have here in Cincinnati. Apparently, an additional information letter is prepared for each case and the letter is faxed to Chip Hull for him to review. After he reviews, we send out the letter. In some instances, the organizations have responded and we are just ‘sitting’ on these cases. Personally, I don’t know why Chip needs to look at each and every additional information letter. It seems to me that if he reviewed the template letter and approved it, we should be good to go.”³³⁴

Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that, during the eight-month period she served as the Tea Party case coordinator, she continued to call Mr. Hull to ask him how she should handle the applications aside from sending development letters, and he continued to respond that she had to wait until the test cases were resolved before going any further.³³⁵ Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that, at some point, although he couldn’t recall exactly when, he stopped advising Ms. Hofacre on the cases, because he was waiting for guidance on the test cases from the TEGE Counsel’s office and felt that he couldn’t advise her without that advice.³³⁶ His explanation does not, however, fit the timeline of the cases, since he was not instructed to contact the TEGE Counsel’s office until mid-2011, and Ms. Hofacre ceased handling the cases in October 2010.

Ms. Hofacre told the Subcommittee that she found the Tea Party cases frustrating, because the applicants kept calling her to get their applications resolved, and she couldn’t help them; she said she felt like she was “working in lost luggage.”³³⁷ Ms. Hofacre said it was that frustration that, in October 2010, caused her to move to a different part of the IRS, the Quality Assurance division.³³⁸ Her cases were then reassigned to a new Tea Party case coordinator, Ronald Bell.

Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he wasn’t frustrated by the delay in getting guidance from the TEGE Counsel’s office about the Tea Party test cases, and never mentioned it to his supervisors, because he had too much other work to do.³³⁹ Ms. Goehausen accepted reassignment of the cases from Mr. Hull in August 2011.³⁴⁰

E. Delaying Tea Party Cases Another Year:
November 2010 to November 2011

In November 2010, eight months after the first Tea Party case was flagged by the IRS, about 40 of the cases were reassigned to the new case coordinator, Ronald Bell. For the next year, Mr. Bell essentially took no action to resolve the cases, while awaiting guidance from EOT on how to handle them. EO head Lois Lerner and EOT head Holly Paz in Washington, and Determinations head Cindy Thomas in Cincinnati were in general agreement that the applications being held in Cincinnati should wait for EOT guidance on the test cases to ensure that all of the cases were resolved in a consistent manner. At the same time, Ms. Thomas expressed impatience with how long EOT was taking to resolve the two test cases. By April 2011, the inventory of Tea Party cases had grown to 102. In June 2011, EOT raised questions about the criteria being used to identify the relevant cases, and Ms. Lerner instructed the Determinations Unit to stop referring to them as “Tea Party” cases and instead call them “advocacy cases.” In response, in July 2011, the Determinations Unit revised the language used in the BOLOs to flag the cases, dropping the reference to “Tea Party.”³⁴¹

By the fall of 2011, about 160 advocacy cases had been identified. In September 2011, EOT proposed developing “informal guidance” on how to handle the cases and spent months working on a “guidesheet” for the cases, before abandoning the effort. In the meantime, EOT initiated a review of the backlogged cases to remove any lacking campaign issues. EOT specialist Hilary Goeshausen conducted that review in October 2011, and prepared a list of the 160 cases with comments about how each should be handled, but her list was seen as unhelpful by the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati and was not used to close any cases. In November 2011, the advocacy cases awaiting action in the Determinations Unit were transferred from Ronald Bell to Stephen Seok, who became the third EOD coordinator of the cases in three years.

Reassignment of Tea Party Cases in Cincinnati. In November 2010, Steven Bowling, head of Group 7822 which included the Emerging Issues cases, reassigned the Tea Party cases from Ms. Hofacre to Ronald Bell.³⁴² Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that Ms. Hofacre “briefly briefed” him on the cases, and it was his understanding that as Tea Party coordinator he was focusing only on conservative groups.³⁴³ Like Ms. Hofacre, Mr. Bell reported that he always received a mix of both liberal and conservative cases from the screeners, but kept only the conservative ones.³⁴⁴ Mr. Bell said that if he received a case that didn't fall into the Tea Party category as he understood it, he returned the case to the agent who had sent it to him who then had to decide how to handle the case.³⁴⁵

Instruction to Wait. Ms. Hofacre had sent development letters to some of the Tea Party groups and when the requested information began arriving at the Cincinnati office, Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that he asked Mr. Bowling how to proceed.³⁴⁶ He said that Mr. Bowling told him to wait to get guidance "from headquarters," meaning the EOT office in Washington, D.C., before moving forward.³⁴⁷ Mr. Bowling's instruction to Mr. Bell led to essentially a one-year delay in the resolution of the Tea Party cases, from approximately November 2010 to November 2011, while Mr. Bell awaited guidance from EOT on how to handle the cases.³⁴⁸

Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that during that waiting period he received numerous complaints from organizations asking about the status of their applications, conveyed the complaints to Mr. Bowling, and was told by Mr. Bowling to say that the cases were under review.³⁴⁹ According to Mr. Bell, over the year, he repeatedly asked Mr. Bowling about when the EOT guidance on the cases would be available, and Mr. Bowling repeatedly told him that they were still waiting for it.³⁵⁰

On November 16, 2010, Mr. Bowling wrote to his supervisor, Sharon Camarillo, to alert her to the delay in processing the cases:

"I know Cindy has contacted Holly Paz about the tea party cases but I don't know or remember if a game plan was established. I believe when this all started the idea was to have EOT take a look at some of these and provide us with a development letter similar to how we handled Credit Counseling cases. I'm not sure how everyone wants to proceed but I think we need to get a handle on this. Ron is getting phone calls on these cases and his typical answer is 'the case is under review.'"³⁵¹

Ms. Camarillo forwarded his email to the Determinations Unit head, Cindy Thomas, who responded: “I called Holly [Paz] a couple of weeks ago and she indicated she was going to check into this matter and would get back with me.”³⁵² In December 2010, Ms. Thomas asked Ms. Paz for another status report and was told that the cases had yet to be presented to Judy Kindell who would be reviewing them.³⁵³

Five months later, in April 2011, the 501(c)(4) cases were still sitting idle awaiting EOT guidance. That month, Ms. Thomas wrote to Steven Bowling:

“Judy [Kindell] also recommended that all tea party cases be sent to EOT (tell Ron Bell not to get too excited!), but Mike Seto does not believe this should happen. He thinks EOT should give us a template letter for the c3 denials and share developmental questions, etc., for the c4’s. Holly will be meeting with Lois to discuss this. Stay tuned.”³⁵⁴

That same month, Ms. Paz assured EO head Lois Lerner that the Cincinnati office had “been told not to issue determs” until EOT “work[ed] through the test cases we have here.”³⁵⁵

Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that over the course of the year from November 2010 to November 2011, he spoke on a few occasions with Mr. Hull, the EOT specialist then handling the test cases.³⁵⁶ Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that when he asked Mr. Hull when he would be receiving guidance about the cases, Mr. Hull indicated that he didn’t know.³⁵⁷ Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that when she took over the test cases in August 2011, she received only a few calls from the Determinations Unit about them.³⁵⁸ Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that he did not contact Ms. Goehausen about the cases.

While Mr. Bell waited for guidance from EOT, EO screeners continued to identify additional cases falling within the Tea Party category. By April 2011, the inventory of Tea Party cases had grown to 102.³⁵⁹ When asked about those cases, Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that she had always understood that the phrase “Tea Party” was being used generically, and that the total of 102 pending cases included both conservative and liberal groups.³⁶⁰

In May 2011, Mr. Bell received a request from another IRS revenue agent about how to handle a Tea Party case, and he wrote to the Determinations head, Ms. Thomas, inquiring how he should respond.³⁶¹ Ms. Thomas sent Mr. Bell’s inquiry to Ms. Paz, the EOT head, who forwarded it to Michael Seto, the EO Quality Assurance Manager. Mr. Seto responded:

“Okay. The current status is: Judy [Kindell] has reviewed our proposed (c)(3) denial and (c)(4) favorabl[y] and requested the staff to ask for more information from the taxpayers. We are waiting for the information from the taxpayers. The cases have not gone to Counsel yet.”³⁶²

It would be another three months until Mr. Hull met with TEGE counsel in August 2011, after which his test cases were transferred to Ms. Goehausen.

Focus on Tea Party Selection Criteria. In June 2011, for the first time, IRS personnel in Washington asked IRS personnel in Cincinnati to describe exactly how they were identifying applications falling within the category of “Tea Party” cases. On June 1, 2011, Ms. Paz, EOT head, asked Ms. Thomas, Determinations head, to tell her “[w]hat criteria are being used to label a case a ‘Tea Party case?’”³⁶³ On June 2, 2011, Ms. Thomas conveyed that inquiry to the Screening Group manager, John Shafer, writing: “Could you send me an email that includes the criteria screeners use to label a case a ‘tea party case?’”³⁶⁴

In response, Mr. Shafer emailed his top three screeners, Gary Muthert, Roger Vance, and Dale Schaber, and asked them to provide him with “what issues may indicate an organization is involved with the tea party movement.”³⁶⁵ Mr. Muthert promptly responded: “I myself look for cases with the names, such as ‘Tea Party’, ‘Patriots’, or the ‘9/12 Project’.”³⁶⁶ Mr. Vance responded: “Some of the cases do contain references to the tea party and other cases that I have identified are organizations concerned with government spending, government debt, and taxes.”³⁶⁷ The IRS was unable to locate the email response from Mr. Schaber. Later that same day, June 2, 2011, after hearing from his agents, Mr. Shafer sent Ms. Thomas an email summarizing the criteria being used to identify Tea Party cases:

“The following are issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential ‘tea party’ case and sent to Group 7822 for secondary screening.

1. “Tea Party”, “Patriots” or “9/12 Project” is referenced in the case file.
2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes.
3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live.
4. Statements in the case file that are critical of how the country is being run.”³⁶⁸

These emails indicate that, as of June 2011, more than one year after the first Tea Party case was flagged, the IRS office in Cincinnati did not have any official criteria for identifying which cases fell within the Tea Party category. Instead, when asked, the Screening Group head surveyed his screeners to find out how they were identifying the cases, compiled their uncoordinated and divergent approaches into a list, and forwarded the list to the Determinations Unit head, explaining that the proffered criteria “could indicate a case to be considered a potential ‘tea party’ case.”

The emails also indicate that, prior to June 2011, IRS officials in Washington were unaware of the criteria being used by EO screeners in Cincinnati to identify cases falling within the Tea Party category. In fact, Ms. Paz, located in Washington, D.C., had to ask Ms. Thomas, the EO Determinations head in Cincinnati, and Ms. Thomas had to ask Mr. Shafer, the Screening Group head in Cincinnati, for the specific criteria being used. He, in turn, had to ask his screeners. These internal emails demonstrate that no Washington IRS official had directed any IRS personnel in Cincinnati to single out Tea Party groups for special scrutiny.³⁶⁹ To the contrary, the evidence indicates that the screeners themselves had first identified the Tea Party cases as raising sensitive issues and then came up with their own selection criteria to identify similar cases, without any input from IRS personnel in Washington.³⁷⁰ The Subcommittee investigation found no evidence that any IRS official directed, pressured, or encouraged any IRS personnel in Cincinnati to subject applications filed by Tea Party or other conservative groups to heightened review.

When asked about the four selection criteria listed in the Shafer email, Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that she didn't know whether the criteria were conservative or liberal in nature, and observed that they had picked up liberal leaning organizations as well as conservative ones.³⁷¹ During the TIGTA audit, when asked by a TIGTA auditor who had "sanctioned" the four criteria listed in the Shafer email, Ms. Paz stated that "[n]o one in the EO management chain sanctioned the use of the four criteria."³⁷²

To the contrary, the criteria listed in the Shafer email stirred up both questions and concerns among IRS officials in Washington. On June 6, 2011, Determinations head Cindy Thomas sent an email to Steven Bowling, manager of the group handling the Tea Party cases, indicating that questions had been raised about the criteria; she also expressed a willingness to change the criteria and a need to get official guidance on what selection criteria should be used to ensure consistent treatment of the cases. Ms. Thomas wrote:

“Holly [Paz] sent an email and asked questions about criteria being used to identify cases as ‘tea party cases.’ The D.C. office thinks the criteria being used may be resulting in over-inclusion. [REDACTED BY IRS]. My response was that we have no problem including or excluding any type of case, as long as they come up with the criteria so we can provide it to the Screening Group. And, it doesn’t matter what the cases are called or how they are grouped, EOD still needs guidance to ensure consistency.”³⁷³

A week later, on June 14, 2011, Ms. Thomas sent an email to Steven Bowling about an upcoming meeting to discuss the selection criteria for Tea Party cases:

“Discussion probably won’t be about specific cases but more of a general discussion about criteria for determining the cases that are in this group, figuring out if there are like kinds that can be grouped into buckets, changing the label we have assigned to these cases, i.e., tea party cases, to something that is more descriptive for the wide net we are using to capture these cases (all cases included in the net are not tea party cases), etc.”³⁷⁴

Changing Case Label and BOLO Description. On June 29, 2011, Lois Lerner, EO head, convened a meeting of senior EO staff in Washington, D.C. to discuss the Tea Party cases. Participants included Ms. Lerner, Ms. Paz, Mr. Hull, Michael Seto, Hilary Goehausen, Justin Lowe, and Elizabeth Kastenberg, with Ms. Thomas participating by telephone from Cincinnati.³⁷⁵ A briefing paper prepared in anticipation of the meeting described the category of cases as “advocacy” cases instead of “Tea Party” cases, while also including the criteria listed in the Shafer email.³⁷⁶ The briefing paper also noted that two “sample” cases had been transferred to EOT, and a total of about 100 cases had been identified by the Determinations Unit.³⁷⁷

Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that, during the meeting, Ms. Lerner expressed concern about using the phrase “Tea Party” in the BOLO lists to describe the cases that required additional review.³⁷⁸ According to Ms. Thomas, Ms. Lerner said that she knew Tea Party organizations weren't being singled out, but the term still needed to be changed since it could be misperceived by others.³⁷⁹ According to Ms. Paz, Ms. Lerner directed that the cases be referred to in the future as "advocacy cases," rather than "Tea Party" cases.³⁸⁰ Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that she agreed with Ms. Lerner and thought "that makes sense."³⁸¹ Ms. Paz said that during the discussion, various participants explained that the Determinations Unit had not been looking just at Tea Party groups, even though that was the phrase used in the BOLO, and agreed the focus should be on all groups involved with campaign activity.³⁸²

Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that, in response to the June meeting, she revised the BOLO entry flagging the cases, and on July 5, 2011, Ronald Bell, the keeper of the BOLO lists, distributed the revised version.³⁸³ The new description, which appeared in the Emerging Issues section, omitted any mention of the Tea Party and instead described the cases as follows:

"Advocacy Orgs[:] Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)."³⁸⁴

The BOLO indicated that covered cases should be forwarded to "Group 7822," and identified Mr. Bell as the case coordinator.³⁸⁵

The revised description did not please everyone. EO screener Gary Muthert told the Subcommittee that, because the new BOLO entry used much broader terms than the prior version, it no longer offered useful search terms to conduct electronic reviews of incoming applications; instead he had to look at each application and determine whether the applicant was engaged in political advocacy or campaign activities.³⁸⁶

Ongoing Delays. In Cincinnati, despite the focus by senior EO management on changing the case label and BOLO description, the advocacy cases continued to sit idle through the summer and fall of 2011, with no EOT guidance about how they should be resolved. The number of cases also continued to increase, reaching 160 cases by the fall.³⁸⁷ Ms. Thomas and Mr. Bell continued to ask EOT in Washington, D.C. for guidance on the cases.

On July 19, 2011, Holly Paz sent an email outlining a plan for processing the cases:

“Lois would like to discuss our planned approach for dealing with these cases. We suspect we will have to approve the majority of the c4 applications. Given the volume of applications and the fact that this is not a new issue (just an increase in frequency of the issue), we plan to [have] EO Determinations work the cases. However, we plan to have EO Technical compose some informal guidance re: development of these cases (e.g., review websites, check to see whether org is registered with FEC, get representations re: the amount of political activity, etc.) EO Technical will also designate point people for Determs to consult with questions. We will also refer these organizations to the Review of operations for follow-up in a later year.”³⁸⁸

This email was written about 18 months after the first Tea Party case was flagged by the EO screeners, and six months after Ms. Lerner wrote that the Cincinnati office “should probably NOT” handle the cases.³⁸⁹ It indicates that, even then, neither the EOT nor the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati had an established process or clear guidance as to how to handle those cases.

Two months later, in September 2011, Holly Paz and Sharon Light, senior EOT personnel based in Washington, happened to be in the Cincinnati office, and Ms. Thomas shared with them an application filed by an advocacy group and asked how to handle it.³⁹⁰ Ms. Light reviewed the application and determined that it could be approved.³⁹¹ Ms. Thomas asked them for help in resolving the growing backlog of advocacy cases, and Ms. Paz offered to assist by having EOT personnel review all of the pending cases to weed out those that did not involve lobbying or campaign activities.³⁹²

On September 21, 2011, Ms. Paz sent an email to EOT personnel announcing that review effort:

“We have now have over 100 advocacy cases on hold in deterns awaiting guidance from EOT/EOG in the form of a list of areas to be developed. Justin [Lowe] has been overseeing Hillary [Goehausen] on this. In meeting with Cindy [Thomas] in Cincy [Cincinnati] last week and looking at some of the cases, it is clear to me that we cast the net too wide and have held up cases that have nothing to do with lobbying or campaign intervention (e.g., org distributing educational material on the national debt). We are tasking Hilary with the task of looking at these cases on TEDs and triaging them – identifying those that clearly are advocacy cases and those that are clearly not.”³⁹³

Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that, when she was given the assignment, about 160 advocacy cases were pending.³⁹⁴ According to Ms. Goehausen, she went through the list of advocacy cases in the TEDS system, looked at the “facts and circumstances” of each case, and made comments on each application in a document she provided to the Determinations Unit.³⁹⁵ Her document listed each case with her comments after each organization’s name.

Ms. Thomas, the Determinations Unit head, told the Subcommittee that she did not find Ms. Goehausen’s list particularly helpful,³⁹⁶ writing in an email at the time: “Not sure where this leaves us and I’m unclear as to what action is being suggested for some of these cases.”³⁹⁷ Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that even after Ms. Goehausen’s effort, her team struggled to decipher a confusing set of IRS regulations on how to handle applications involving campaign activity.³⁹⁸ According to Ms. Goehausen, a few weeks later, Michael Seto, EO Quality Assurance Manager, instructed Ms. Goehausen to rework the document, which she did, but it appears that it was never used by the Determinations Unit to close cases.³⁹⁹

Cases Transferred to Third Coordinator. In the late fall of 2011, the advocacy cases awaiting action in the Determinations Unit were transferred again, from Ronald Bell to Stephen Seok, who became the third coordinator of the cases in three years.⁴⁰³ Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that Mr. Bowling put Mr. Seok in charge of the cases instead of Mr. Bell, because Mr. Bowling thought Mr. Seok would be a better leader.⁴⁰⁴ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that he transferred to IRS Determinations Group 7822 in August of 2011, and when he asked his manager, Steven Bowling, about the cases he’d be handling, Mr. Bowling said he would have an assignment for him later.⁴⁰⁵ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that he later received an email from Mr. Bowling assigning him the advocacy cases.⁴⁰⁶

According to Mr. Seok, after receiving the email, he met with Mr. Bowling and Ms. Thomas to determine how to develop the cases.⁴⁰⁷ He said they discussed creating an “advocacy team” to handle the cases, which he would lead.⁴⁰⁸ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that, in December 2011, he called the first advocacy team meeting to discuss the cases which then numbered around 170.⁴⁰⁹ He said that, in January 2012, he also introduced himself by email to the EOT specialists who were assigned to the test cases, Ms. Goehausen and Mr. Lowe, and asked for their technical assistance.⁴¹⁰ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee, groups had, in fact, experienced the same mismanagement as conservative groups, the Subcommittee examined how the IRS processed applications filed by groups associated with three nationwide, liberal organizations: ACORN, Occupy, and Emerge America, and by groups with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names. The evidence shows that some of those liberal groups underwent the same types of inappropriate IRS screening, lengthy EOT reviews, intrusive questions, and years-long delays as some conservative groups.

(1) ACORN

As explained earlier, “ACORN” stands for Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, a decades-old, openly liberal organization that advocated for the poor, especially in the area of housing. At its peak, it claimed more than 1,200 community-based affiliates. On November 2, 2010, the national association declared bankruptcy, leading to the termination of the ACORN network of groups. When it appeared that some ACORN affiliates were reorganizing under new names, questions arose about whether those successor organizations might be disqualified from tax exempt status, in part due to issues involving political advocacy or campaign activities. Like Tea Party groups, applications filed by ACORN successor groups were singled out for heightened scrutiny, resolution of the applications was suspended pending EOT review of the issues, and the ACORN successor cases sat idle for more than three years awaiting final disposition.

First ACORN Case Flagged. The first ACORN successor case was flagged by the IRS in February 2010, the same month as the first Tea Party case. On February 26, 2010, an IRS ROO examinations specialist wrote:

“There is a lot of internet traffic about ACORN reinventing itself. [REDACTED BY IRS] office is now occupied by [REDACTED BY IRS]. They have formed a new corporation and will be applying for exemption under 501(c)(4). ... These cases probably should be handled by the TAG group if they can be identified.”⁴¹⁴ “included more explicit references to progressive groups, ACORN successors, and medical marijuana organizations than to Tea Party entities”).

⁴¹⁴ 2/26/2010 email from Richie Heidenreich to Nancy Todd, “Investigation,” IRSR0000458439 - 447, at 441. As explained earlier, “ROO” stands for “Review of Operations,” and refers to an IRS review of an existing tax exempt organization to gauge its compliance with the tax code. Seven months earlier, in August 2009, Congressman Darrell Issa, Chairman of the House Government Reform Committee, wrote to the IRS voicing concerns regarding ACORN’s tax-exempt status due to alleged violations of the tax code and Federal Election Campaign Act. See 8/11/2009 letter from Committee Chairman Issa to the IRS, IRSR0000469223 - 228.

He and others noted that an earlier ACORN successor group had been the subject of a Sensitive Case Report.⁴¹⁵

By March 2010, the examiner's email had been forwarded to Steven Grodnitzky, then acting head of the EO Technical Unit, who forwarded it to the head of the EO Rulings and Agreements Unit, Robert Choi, with this note:

"Just a heads up that it appears that ACORN is morphing into new organizations. According to Cincy [Cincinnati], there was one organization that came in for exemption, but they believe it was closed FTE [Failure to Establish]. Will keep you updated as to new developments in this area. May cause some press attention."⁴¹⁶

A few days later, Mr. Choi indicated to his EO colleagues that he was scheduled to meet with IRS officials from headquarters in Washington, D.C., to discuss the ACORN cases. In an email dated March 26, 2010, Mr. Choi wrote to Determinations head Cindy Thomas and others: "I need a summary from Cincy regarding this issue of ACORN morphing into new entities. I have a meeting Monday afternoon, 3/29, to discuss this issue with HQ folks."⁴¹⁷ Jon Waddell, a manager in the Determinations Unit, responded to Mr. Choi that no ACORN successor applications had recently been approved or denied, but managers and screeners had been told that ACORN groups were changing their names and they should be on the lookout for successor organizations.⁴¹⁸

ACORN BOLO Entry. Five months later, in August 2010, an ACORN entry was included in the first BOLO issued by the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati asking EO employees to be on the lookout for certain applications. That BOLO included entries for both conservative and liberal groups; a section called "Emerging Issues" contained the entry for "Tea Party" groups, while a separate section called "BOLO List" (later renamed "Watch List") contained the entry for “ACORN successor” groups.⁴¹⁹ The entry describing the ACORN cases has been largely redacted by the IRS so that all that is disclosed in the BOLO is as follows: “ACORN successors, Following the breakup of ACORN [REDACTED BY IRS].”⁴²⁰

IRS screeners used the BOLO list to conduct searches for the listed groups, including ACORN successor organizations. Gary Muthert, a senior IRS screener, told the Subcommittee that, as he did with the Tea Party groups, he ran electronic searches for applications filed by ACORN successor groups.⁴²¹ Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that he ran searches for ACORN successor organizations even before the August 2010 BOLO, because he had received an earlier email alert asking screeners to be on the lookout for those organizations.⁴²² Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that he recalled personally finding about two ACORN successor cases which he sent to the specialty group handling them.⁴²³ Mr. Muthert also observed that ACORN had been featured in an internal IRS presentation as a “watch for example” which included a picture of a smiling acorn.⁴²⁴

The BOLOs used by the EOD Unit continued to carry the ACORN successor entry for nearly two years until approximately June 2012, when multiple entries were consolidated in the Emerging Issues section of the BOLO and were referred to by this single entry: “501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit).”⁴²⁵ When that new entry was included in the June 2012 BOLO for groups involved with campaign activity, the separate ACORN entry was eliminated and ACORN successor groups were intended to be included in the new one.

to identify the cases that should be included within ACORN successors category. In October 2010, a determinations manager, Jon Waddell, advised that he had identified two applications for ACORN successor groups based in Pennsylvania that were in addition to two pending applications for ACORN successor groups in New York.⁴²⁶ He recommended issuing an email alert asking EO personnel to be on the lookout for similar cases, and proposed adding the following criteria to the BOLO Watch list section for ACORN:

1. "The name(s) Neighborhoods for Social Justice or Communities Organizing for Change.
2. Activities that mention Voter Mobilization or the Low-Income/Disenfranchised.
3. Advocating for Legislation to Provide for Economic, Healthcare, and Housing Justice for the poor.
4. Educating Public Policy Makers (i.e. Politicians) on the above subjects."⁴²⁷

The proposed criteria were very similar in style and in their use of organization names and political views to the criteria used to identify the Tea Party cases.⁴²⁸ John Shafer, the manager of the Screening Group, forwarded the proposed ACORN criteria to the IRS screeners and asked them to be on the lookout for the ACORN successor cases.⁴²⁹

The Minority Staff's Dissenting Views suggest that ACORN successor groups were placed on the BOLO list because of concerns about illegality, rather than advocacy activities, writing that the groups were "not flagged simply for their political activities, but also because of a specific association to a group known to have legal problems." Dissenting Views at 240. That assertion, however, is at odds with the actual selection criteria used by the IRS to flag ACORN successor cases; those criteria make no mention of illegality or fraud, and instead focus exclusively on the successor groups' names and political views. Attributing the flagging of ACORN successor groups as solely the result of IRS concerns about illegality or fraud is also inconsistent with the actions taken by the IRS in June 2012, to combine the ACORN, Occupy, and Tea Party cases under a single, new Emerging Issues entry focused on indicators of campaign activity.

handled the Tea Party cases, also handled the ACORN cases.⁴³⁰ He told the Subcommittee that he did not know why he had been designated as the EOT contact person for the ACORN cases.⁴³¹ According to Mr. Hull, his only involvement with the ACORN cases was that he received a phone call from someone asking about an ACORN successor case, and advised treating the group as a new organization.⁴³² Ronald Bell, a determinations specialist who, from November 2010 to November 2011, served as the coordinator for the Tea Party cases, told the Subcommittee that he also worked on ACORN cases, including with Mr. Hull, and knew other people who had as well.⁴³³

The Determinations Unit in Cincinnati waited years for ACORN EOT guidance, just as it waited years for Tea Party guidance. As with the Tea Party cases, EO senior management explicitly suspended resolution of the ACORN cases pending issuance of EOT guidance on them. In June 2010, for example, Steven Grodnitzky, then acting head of EO Technical, wrote to Determinations head Cindy Thomas about the ACORN-related cases:

“Just want to make sure we are all on the same page as to the ACORN-related cases. We should not be developing or resolving them at this point. I had spoken to Rob [Choi] about a successor to one of the ACORN orgs in NY and he mentioned that some ⁴³¹ Subcommittee interview of Carter Hull, IRS (11/19/2013). A year later, in July 2011, Mr. Hull told at least one EO determinations specialist that he was no longer handling ACORN cases. That specialist sent an email to a colleague as follows: “I am working a case that has a board member who is also serving on the board of an ACORN organization. Per the instructions on the BOLO list and your instruction, I called Chip Hull in EO Technical for guidance in developing the case. Mr. Hull informed me that he should not be on a list as contact person for ACORN related organizations. While he previously provided guidance to a Determ manager re: ACORN successors, his manager informed him that he should not be doing research for our cases. Mr. Hull requested that his name be removed from the BOLO list as a contact person.” 7/11/2011 email from Melissa Conley to William Angner, “BOLO List Issue,” IRSR0000054946. The next month, in August 2011, his Tea Party cases were transferred to a new EOT specialist, Hilary Goehausen, as explained earlier, but his name continued to be listed as the contact for ACORN cases until June 2012, when the ACORN cases were folded into the category of tax exempt groups with campaign activities. ⁴³² Subcommittee interview of Carter Hull, IRS (11/19/2013). Mr. Hull told the Subcommittee that he could not recall who had contacted him about the ACORN case or when. Mr. Hull also said that he had heard of ACORN, but was unaware of the screening criteria used to identify ACORN cases.

activity is going on in the TEGE Commissioner's office with respect to ACORN and to hold off."⁴³⁴

Internal IRS documents confirm that limited action was taken on the ACORN cases while awaiting EOT guidance. A July 2010 document, for example, reported that one ACORN group's application had been awaiting guidance from EO Technical for over 60 days.⁴³⁵ Emails exchanged among EO personnel three months later, in October 2010, described two more pending ACORN successor cases that were sitting idle in Cincinnati, awaiting EOT guidance.⁴³⁶ On March 8, 2011, one year after the ACORN successor cases were first flagged, Donna Abner, in Quality Assurance, sent this email to her team:

"Today I received a call from Jon Waddell regarding specifically Acorn related cases and Tea Party cases. In brief, guidance from EO Technical is pending and EO Technical has advised that no determination letters be issued – favorable or unfavorable – until guidance is received."⁴³⁷

This email shows that ACORN and Tea Party cases were being handled by the same IRS personnel in the same way.

Proposed ACORN Denials. Almost two years after the first ACORN case was flagged, in January 2012, Ms. Abner proposed denying tax exempt status for one of the ACORN successor organizations. She wrote: "[B]ecause this is the first such letter we've prepared I'd like to have someone in EO Technical review before it is issued. (I also think that this might receive some attention)."⁴³⁸

Ms. Abner submitted the proposed denial to EOT in February 2012, and provided the case file in March.⁴³⁹ In March 2012, EOT advised that the ACORN “denial need[ed] additional facts to support the legal conclusion that the organization doesn’t qualify as a (c)(3).”⁴⁴⁰ In response, Ms. Abner revised the denial.⁴⁴¹

On April 6, 2012, Holly Paz, by then Director of the Rulings and Agreements Unit, indicated that EOT needed to review the revised denial.⁴⁴² That same day, Ms. Abner asked Michael Seto, then EOT Acting Manager, for an estimate on how long the review would take, in particular because the Determinations Unit wanted to issue a second ACORN denial and wanted EOT’s advice before proceeding.⁴⁴³ Mr. Seto responded that he would reassign the case to another EOT specialist whose review would take about two weeks.⁴⁴⁴ In fact, the review took months, and the case remained unresolved for more than another year.

In July 2012, according to press reports, a group called Cause of Action urged review of two ACORN successor groups in Texas, the Texas Organizing Project and the Texas Organizing Project Education Fund, for what it said was “a scheme to collect donations and divert them for political use” to support Democratic candidates for office.⁴⁴⁵ One article stated that the Texas groups provided the third occasion in which Cause of Action had asked for ACORN successor groups to be investigated.⁴⁴⁶ The IRS and TIGTA declined at the time to discuss either organization.⁴⁴⁷

In October 2012, Jon Waddell, an IRS determinations manager, noted in a monthly briefing report that two ACORN cases with proposed denials were still pending at EOT:

“These are advocacy cases (similar to Tea Parties) where we have proposed denial and QA [Quality Assurance] has agreed. There are two cases that are involved and both currently reside in EO Tech for review of the denial letters – cases have been in EO Tech for at least six months. At some point (months from now), the cases will ultimately return to the group to issue the denial letters and communicate with the applicants. When the denial letters are ultimately issued, media attention will almost certainly follow.”⁴⁴⁸

Mr. Waddell’s report directly compared the ACORN and Tea Party cases, both of which were then undergoing extended EOT review.

At another point in 2012, at least one ACORN case was included in the so-called “bucketing” effort, described further below, which was a 2012 effort by the IRS to process a large number of the advocacy cases quickly.⁴⁴⁹ But in March 2013, at least two ACORN cases were still pending, awaiting guidance from EOT on the proposed denials.⁴⁵⁰ When the IRS received a new application from still another ACORN successor organization in March 2013, this summary was prepared regarding the pending ACORN cases:

“I’m elevating a case identified in Vicki’s group related to the political advocacy area. While the development issues within Vicki’s group are straightforward, any type of ruling on this case could be impactful. Below is the background on the Acorn-related cases:

1. Acorn-related cases were previously reflected on the BOLO and subsequently folded into the political advocacy category over a year ago.
2. Currently, we have two proposed denials under review in D.C. involving Acorn-related cases. One is assigned to Ed Pomerantz and the other to April Garrett[.]
3. These cases contain the same characteristics as other identified political advocacy cases as the applications contain instances of partisan political activity and excessive legislative and mobilization activities precluding approval under c(3).”⁴⁵¹

This email indicates that the IRS viewed the ACORN-related cases as involving the “same characteristics as other identified political advocacy cases.”

In April 2013, Rulings and Agreements Director Holly Paz indicated that the EOT review of the ACORN cases continued unabated: “These cases are still going back and forth between the initiator and reviewer. I have asked Mike to get these cases to Virginia ASAP for a fast track review so we can reach a decision.”⁴⁵²

Over Three Year Delay. When Determinations head Cindy Thomas was asked about the status of the ACORN successor cases during her Subcommittee interview in November 2013, she indicated that the proposed denial letters still had not been sent and the cases were still pending more than three years after the ACORN successor applications were first submitted to the IRS in February 2010.⁴⁵³ The evidence shows that those ACORN cases experienced the same inappropriate selection criteria focused on their names and political views, the same EOT reviews, and the same delays and mismanagement as the Tea Party cases being considered at the same time.

(2) Occupy

A second example of IRS treatment of liberal groups involves applications filed by groups associated with “Occupy.” Occupy, sometimes called “Occupy Wall Street,” has described itself as “a people-powered movement that began on September 17, 2011 in Liberty Square in Manhattan’s Financial District, and has spread to over 100 cities in the United States and actions in over 1,500 cities globally.”⁴⁵⁴ Occupy has described its mission as “fighting back against the corrosive power of major banks and multinational corporations over the democratic process, and the role of Wall Street in creating an economic collapse that has caused the greatest recession in generations.”⁴⁵⁵ A loose affiliation of organizations using the word “Occupy” in their names began forming across the country in late 2011. The groups were generally viewed as liberal or progressive organizations, sometimes described as having opposing or overlapping interests with the Tea Party.⁴⁵⁶ Like Tea Party groups, applications filed by Occupy groups were singled out for heightened scrutiny by the IRS due to advocacy issues, they were identified using screening criteria that focused on the groups’ names and political views, the applications were subjected to extended EOT review, and resolution of the cases was delayed for years.

First Occupy Case Flagged. On January 20, 2012, the first Occupy case was flagged within the IRS by EOD personnel. An email was sent to Determinations head Cindy Thomas under the subject line, “Potential Watch List/BOLO item - Occupy Groups Applying for (c)(3).”⁴⁵⁷ Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that she first heard about the Occupy organizations when an IRS agent saw the group in the news and elevated the related case to her.⁴⁵⁸ She also told the Subcommittee that she wasn’t sure at the time whether Occupy organizations were conservative or liberal, but viewed their applications as ones that should be treated in the same manner as other advocacy cases.⁴⁵⁹ A few days after the case was flagged, Jon Waddell, a senior EOD manager, advised that he saw the Occupy cases as falling into the same “advocacy cases” category as the Tea Party and ACORN successor cases.⁴⁶⁰

Issues involving the Occupy cases were handled by Steven Bowling, head of Group 7822 which was already handling the Tea Party cases. In an email, Mr. Bowling indicated that he viewed the Occupy cases as falling within the advocacy category, but also expressed confusion over how to alert screeners to be on the lookout for them: “I know we don’t want to use the words ‘tea party’ or ‘occupy’ but I’m not sure how we could weed out a simple advocacy type organization.”⁴⁶¹ This email suggests that, from the initial effort to alert IRS personnel to Occupy applications, EO managers viewed the Occupy cases as comparable to the Tea Party cases. EO personnel debated how to adequately capture the Occupy groups on the BOLO list without referring to them as “Occupy,” with one agent noting: “We wouldn’t want to miss this one if it comes in so it needs to be pretty clear.”⁴⁶²

Occupy BOLO Entry. In January 2012, a separate entry for Occupy organizations was added to the BOLO in the “Watch List” section. The entry read as follows:

“Occupy Organizations involve organizations occupying public space protesting in various cities, call people to assemble (people’s assemblies) claiming social injustices due to ‘big money’ influence, claim the democratic process is controlled by wall street/banks/multinational corporations, could be linked globally. Claim to represent the 99% of the public that are interested in separating money from politics and improving the infrastructure to fix everything from healthcare to the economy.”⁴⁶³

The BOLO entry instructed IRS agents to send any Occupy applications to Group 7822, the same group handling the Tea Party cases.⁴⁶⁴

The January 2012 BOLO also contained a revised entry for “current political issues,” in the Emerging Issues section, which read as follows:

“[C]urrent political issues: Political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the constitution and bill of rights, Social economic reform/movement.”⁴⁶⁵

In a January 25, 2012 email, Ronald Bell, the keeper of the BOLO lists for the Determinations Unit, wrote to his manager, Steven Bowling, asking why there was a separate Occupy entry: “I thought the Social economic reform in the updated current political issues was our ‘code word’ for the occupy organizations.”⁴⁶⁶ Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that he had met with Mr. Bowling and Stephen Seok about revising the BOLO entry for political issues, and thought that the group had agreed to use “Social economic reform” as a “code” for identifying Occupy cases.⁴⁶⁷ Mr. Bowling responded: “I think we can leave it in. Some of the orgs are pushing that other than occupy groups.”⁴⁶⁸

Gary Muthert, a senior EO screening agent, told the Subcommittee that once he received the January 2012 BOLO, he would have been on the lookout for Occupy cases and would have sent any to Group 7822.⁴⁶⁹ He said that he didn’t recall receiving any of those cases nor did he recall if he used “Occupy” as a search term.⁴⁷⁰ He also noted that he did not know why Occupy had its own separate BOLO entry, and wasn’t simply included in the advocacy issues entry.⁴⁷¹

In June 2012, at the direction of Lois Lerner and Holly Paz, the BOLO entry for current political issues, which appeared in the Emerging Issues section, was revised to encompass all types of political groups, including Occupy and ACORN, with campaign activity.⁴⁷² At that time, the BOLO dropped the separate entry for Occupy cases.⁴⁷³ From then on, the political issues entry was the sole entry used to identify Occupy as well as other advocacy cases.⁴⁷⁴

Occupy Applications. In February 2012, Mr. Bowling assigned the first Occupy case to Stephen Seok, who was then the Tea Party case coordinator, explaining that it was similar to the other “political type cases” he was handling.⁴⁷⁵ The IRS received a second Occupy application in May 2012.⁴⁷⁶ Ronald Bell, the prior Tea Party coordinator, told the Subcommittee that he also worked on the Occupy cases, which he perceived as involving liberal organizations.⁴⁷⁷

Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that he helped develop the Occupy case he was assigned.⁴⁷⁸ Hilary Goehausen, the EOT specialist who began handling the Tea Party cases in 2011, told the Subcommittee that she was also assigned an Occupy case as part of her work on the advocacy cases.⁴⁷⁹ She told the Subcommittee that she did not recall the details of the Occupy case, but would have treated it like any other advocacy case and helped put together development questions for the group.⁴⁸⁰ In addition, at least one Occupy case was included in the 2012 so-called “bucketing” effort, described further below, which was an IRS attempt to quickly process a large number of the advocacy cases then pending.⁴⁸¹ In short, the Occupy cases went through the same processing, using the same IRS personnel, as the Tea Party cases.

The current status of the Occupy applications is unclear. Applications filed in the first half of 2012 were still unresolved by the end of the year, but whether or how they may have been resolved in 2013 or 2014 has not been publicly disclosed. When asked, the IRS told the Subcommittee that it was barred by Section 6103 of the tax code from discussing individual cases and could not disclose the current status of the Occupy applications. The IRS personnel interviewed by the Subcommittee indicated that they did not know the current status of the cases.

On the internet, Occupy Solidarity Network, Inc., which operates the OccupyWallSt.org website, “the oldest and most trusted online resource for the Occupy Movement,” describes itself as a “New York

The Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views note that the Occupy cases were not included in the IRS list of advocacy cases reviewed by IRS specialists from May 2010 to May 2012. See Dissenting Views at 240. The evidence shows, however, that whether or not they appeared on that list, Occupy cases were flagged using a BOLO entry that focused on the groups’ names and political views, were later combined with Tea Party cases under a revised BOLO Emerging Issues entry, and were assigned to the same EOD and EOT personnel handling Tea Party cases. In addition, the first Occupy application was filed in February 2012, more than a year before the TIGTA audit report was released in May 2013, and the IRS repeatedly brought the Occupy BOLO entry and cases to the attention of TIGTA auditors who failed to examine them.

501(c)(4) non-for-profit organization.”⁴⁸² Another group, Occupy.com, Inc., which operates the Occupy.com website, describes itself as a nonprofit corporation “currently awaiting our tax-exempt, 501(c)(3) status.”⁴⁸³ Friends of Occupy Portland has described itself as a nonprofit “social welfare/civic organization for the purpose of tax laws.”⁴⁸⁴ It is unclear whether these or other Occupy groups submitted the applications described in IRS documents.

One Occupy group which does not appear to have filed one of the applications already discussed has provided public information on its website about its nearly two-year effort to obtain tax exempt status from the IRS. On its website, Occupy the Roads, a group whose self-described mission is “to educate Americans about the social and economic injustices which oppress people or destroy resources of the earth for profit,” indicates that it first applied for 501(c)(3) status from the IRS in August 2012.⁴⁸⁵ More than a year later, in September 2013, the group’s application was still pending.⁴⁸⁶ In January 2014, hoping to expedite the process, Occupy the Roads divided its operations and sought approval as two tax-exempt organizations — one under Section 501(c)(3) and one under Section 501(c)(4).⁴⁸⁷ Both applications were finally approved in April 2014, 21 months after the initial application was filed.⁴⁸⁸ According to Occupy the Roads, its activities were curtailed during the prolonged review process, because its uncertain tax status did not permit it to apply for grants or accept tax-deductible donations. After approval was granted, on June 6, 2014, the group’s director called the IRS to ask why the group’s approved 501(c)(3) status was still not listed on the IRS website. According to the director, the IRS informed her that the group’s approved application had been “lost,” and it might take up to eight more weeks for the listing to appear, during which time potential grantors and donors would be unable to easily verify Occupy the Roads' tax-exempt status.⁴⁸⁹

The evidence shows that Occupy cases were handled by the same IRS personnel who handled Tea Party cases and, like Tea Party groups, were flagged using BOLO entries that at first focused on the groups' names and political views, and later employed the same Emerging Issues criteria used to flag Tea Party cases. Occupy groups also underwent the same EOT reviews and experienced the same lengthy delays and mismanagement as their Tea Party counterparts.

(3) Emerge America

A third example of IRS treatment of liberal groups involves organizations associated with Emerge America. Emerge America characterizes itself as an organization dedicated to encouraging and training Democratic women candidates to run for office.⁴⁹⁰ It currently operates in 14 states and has affiliates across the country.⁴⁹¹

Emerge organizations began applying for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status in 2008. Documents reviewed by the Subcommittee discuss at least eight Emerge organizations whose tax exempt applications have undergone IRS review since then. Like Tea Party groups, the Emerge applications were singled out for heightened scrutiny by the IRS using inappropriate screening criteria focused on their names, and the applications were subjected to extended EOT review. In 2011, after a three-year wait, the IRS denied tax exempt status to three Emerge organizations and approved tax exempt status for five others, demonstrating ongoing confusion within the IRS on applying the law to groups involved with partisan campaign activity. In 2012, the IRS revoked the tax exemptions that had been granted to the five Emerge organizations in the prior year.

Emerge Applications Flagged. The first Emerge application appears to have been flagged for heightened review in January 2008.⁴⁹² By September 2008, two Emerge applications had been sent to the EO

Technical Unit for review. Donna Abner, in the IRS Quality Assurance division, wrote:

“Because of the partisan nature of the cases – guidance from EO Technical is pending. ... Per IRM [Internal Revenue Manual] 7.20.5 – ‘sensitive political issue’ cases were designated as subject to mandatory review in 2007. Please note the two case[s] above closed in 2008 that did not come through QA [IRS Quality Assurance]. I recommend an alert be issued regarding this type of case as well as a reminder that ‘sensitive political issue’ cases are subject to mandatory review.”⁴⁹³

Her email indicated that two other Emerge cases had already been “closed,” in addition to the two cases then undergoing review, but did not indicate whether those applications had been approved or denied.⁴⁹⁴ The Subcommittee was told that, at some point, an email alert was issued to EO personnel as Ms. Abner had requested, asking them to be on the lookout for Emerge cases.⁴⁹⁵

In November 2008, two Emerge applications were the subject of an EO Sensitive Case Report.⁴⁹⁶ The report was prepared by Jon Waddell, a senior EOD manager who also worked on Tea Party and ACORN cases. He wrote:

“Two organizations from 2 different states applied for exemption under section 501(c)(4) for the purpose of training women to run for political office. The services are only provided to women affiliated with the Democratic Party and focus on a variety of subjects such as public speaking and press relations, as well as how to conduct fund raising activities. The applications appear to represent potential partisan political activity.”⁴⁹⁷

EOT Review. At EOT, the two Emerge cases were originally assigned to Justin Lowe, an EOT tax law specialist who handled a variety of 501(c)(4) cases involving political and campaign activities, including Tea Party cases.⁴⁹⁸ Mr. Waddell coordinated with Mr. Lowe on the Emerge cases.⁴⁹⁹ In February 2009, when a third case, described as “another Emerge Case (political Case),” was identified, and Mr. Waddell learned that Mr. Lowe had been temporarily detailed to another office, he contacted the EOT head, Steven Grodnitzky, about what to do. Mr. Grodnitzky advised Mr. Waddell to consult with EOT tax law specialists Siri Buller and Andy Megosh, who handled “political activity cases.”⁵⁰⁰

Ms. Buller became the lead EOT contact for the three Emerge cases.⁵⁰¹ In at least one of them, she sent a development letter to gather more information about the group and its application.⁵⁰² In April 2010, another EOT specialist Janet Gitterman, working on still another Emerge case, also worked on a development letter.⁵⁰³

On April 28, 2010, an EOT Sensitive Case Report indicated that Emerge applications were then pending from four organizations: Emerge Maine, Emerge Nevada, Emerge Massachusetts, and Emerge Oregon.⁵⁰⁴ The report indicated that the groups were being reviewed to determine “[w]hether orgs that recruit women belonging to [the] Democratic party to schools that teach campaign-related skills qualify for C4 status.”⁵⁰⁵ April 2010 was also the first month that a Sensitive Case Report was prepared for two Tea Party groups.⁵⁰⁶

In July 2010, as described earlier, at a routine “Screening Workshop” to alert EOD screeners to a variety of issues, a presentation urging IRS personnel to look for groups involved with “political activities” listed “Emerge” groups along with “Tea Party” groups.⁵⁰⁷ The presentation stated that “the following names ... were of interest and should be flagged for review,” and listed Emerge along with six other groups.⁵⁰⁸ This presentation showed that, like Tea Party groups, IRS screeners were instructed to look for Emerge groups by name and, due to their “political activities,” ensure they were subjected to heightened review.⁵⁰⁹

Emerge Denials. In the first half of 2011, three years after the first Emerge application was flagged, the IRS denied tax exempt status to three Emerge organizations due to the groups’ engaging in partisan political activity benefiting the Democratic party.⁵¹⁰ Emerge America publicly acknowledged at the time that three state organizations, Emerge Nevada, Emerge Maine, and Emerge Massachusetts, had been denied tax exemption.⁵¹¹

⁵⁰⁹ Id. The Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views contend that the IRS treated the Emerge groups differently from Tea Party groups due to their partisan activities, but the facts indicate that, in both cases, the groups were flagged for heightened review due to their involvement in political activities, were flagged in part due to their names, were sent to Washington, D.C. for EOT review, were subjected to development letters, and underwent years of review. At the same time the IRS denied those three applications, which had undergone EOT review, the IRS approved five other Emerge applications which had apparently been processed by EO screeners without EOT input.⁵¹² The executive director of one of the groups granted tax exemption, Emerge California, was quoted as saying: “It’s just bizarre. Nevada has been around and waiting for approval for the last five years, and in the interim, Oregon and Kentucky are established and file for their approval – and Kentucky gets it but Nevada, Maine and Massachusetts don’t.”⁵¹³

When Lois Lerner learned that the five Emerge applications had been approved by EOD screeners in the Cincinnati office without EOT input, she wrote: “How in the world did this get screened in Cincy?”⁵¹⁴ That IRS EO personnel approved some Emerge cases and disapproved others in the same year provides another indicator of the subjective nature of the decisionmaking process as well as ongoing IRS confusion over how the rules related to campaign activities should be applied to 501(c)(4) organizations.

In 2012, the IRS reversed course and revoked the tax exemptions that had been granted to the five Emerge organizations in the prior year.⁵¹⁵ To prevent a repetition of the problem, two training sessions were provided to IRS screeners and determinations specialists.⁵¹⁶

These facts show that Emerge groups, like Tea Party groups, were identified using inappropriate selection criteria focused on their names and political views, were subjected to EOT analysis and development letters, and in some cases, waited three years for their applications to be resolved. Worse yet, the applications were decided by the IRS in an inconsistent manner, and five groups that were granted tax exemptions lost those exemptions within a year. No Tea Party group experienced that same level of case mismanagement.

(4) Progressive Groups

A final example of IRS treatment of liberal groups involves organizations with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names. Like some Tea Party groups, a number of these groups were identified using inappropriate selection criteria focused on their names and political views, were subjected to EOT reviews, and experienced lengthy delays and intrusive questions.

Inappropriate Selection Criteria. The earliest occasion identified by the Subcommittee in which “Progressive” was used as a selection criteria for groups involved with political activity was in connection with a July 2010 IRS “Screening Workshop,” described earlier, which directed EOD screeners to look for certain applications and send them to the same IRS group handling Tea Party cases. The official IRS summary of the workshop included these notes:

“Current/Political Activities: Gary Muthert

- Discussion focused on the political activities of Tea Parties and the like – regardless of the type of application.
- If in doubt Err on the Side of Caution and transfer to [Group] 7822.
- Indicated the following names and/or titles were of interest and should be flagged for review:
 - 9/12 Project,
 - Emerge,
 - Progressive
 - We The People,
 - Rally Patriots, and
 - Pink-Slip Program.”⁵¹⁷

See also “Screening Workshop July 28, 2010,” powerpoint prepared by IRS, IRSR0000006674 - 699, at 690 (also indicating that IRS screeners should look for “Progressive” groups). The Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views state that the “progressive cases, unlike their Tea Party counterparts, were not selected for additional scrutiny because of the group’s name,” Dissenting Views at 228, but this document shows that, in fact,

This IRS document shows that at the earliest stages of the effort to subject Tea Party groups to heightened review, in July 2010, IRS screeners were also advised to look for progressive groups, using the groups' names as the key selection criteria.⁵¹⁸

When the IRS issued the first Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list in August 2010, progressive groups were again spotlighted. As indicated earlier, the BOLO's "TAG Historical" section included an entry urging EO employees to look for applications filed by groups involved with "Progressive political activities," explaining:

"[C]ommon thread is the word 'progressive.' Activities appear to lean towards a new political party. Activities are partisan and appear anti-Republican. You see references to 'blue' as being 'progressive.'"⁵¹⁹

This BOLO description urged screeners to focus on the "the word 'progressive,'" described the groups' political views, and identified their "political activities" as the central concern.⁵²⁰ Like the BOLO entry for Tea Party groups, it urged IRS personnel to flag a set of groups solely because of their names and political views and subject them to heightened review.

Heightened Reviews and Lengthy Delays. Gary Muthert, a senior EOD screener interviewed by the Subcommittee, confirmed that, in 2010, he conducted searches using the term "progressive" to identify groups for heightened review.⁵²¹ Mr. Muthert explained that, due to the progressive entry in the BOLO TAG Historical section, all EOD screeners were obligated to be on the lookout for those groups, including by running searches for those entities and checking their files to see if they had any of those cases.⁵²² Mr. Muthert told the Subcommittee that, just as he did with the Tea Party, he ran electronic queries using the word "progressive" and would have sent any cases he found to the IRS screeners were explicitly instructed to use certain "names," including "Progressive," to identify groups that "should be flagged for review."

⁵¹⁸ In the same presentation, while the Tea Party case coordinator, Elizabeth Hofacre, advised against sending progressive cases to her, she did not suggest that heightened review of those cases was inappropriate or that the cases should not be sent to Group 7822, which was also handling the Tea Party cases. Id.

Because the 2010 BOLO has been partially redacted by the IRS, see also July 2012 BOLO spreadsheet, prepared by the IRS, at IRS0000001484 - 499.

⁵²⁰ Again, in contrast to the Minority Staff's Dissenting Views statement that "progressive cases, unlike their Tea Party counterparts, were not selected for additional scrutiny because of the group's name," Dissenting Views at 228, this BOLO entry directed IRS personnel to focus on "the word 'progressive.'" relevant specialty group handling them.⁵²³ That specialty group, Group 7822, was also handling the Tea Party cases.

The evidence shows that groups with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names were, in fact, subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS. For example, a list compiled by the IRS Chief Risk Officer, David Fisher, looking at 501(c)(4) groups reviewed by the IRS from May 2010 through December 2012, identified 20 applications filed by groups with the words “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names.⁵²⁴ Of those 20 applications, nine were included in the same advocacy case list as the Tea Party groups and four others were otherwise subjected to EOT review, for a total of 13 cases out of 20, or 65%.⁵²⁵ The list also showed that at least eleven of the cases had been under IRS review for six months to a year.⁵²⁶ Five other applications on the list appear to have been processed relatively quickly.⁵²⁷ The final four applications had been under consideration for just one to five months before the analysis was undertaken, making it difficult to determine whether they were undergoing heightened scrutiny.⁵²⁸

Several groups with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names have publicly disclosed the difficulties they experienced in obtaining tax exempt status from the IRS. A group called Progress Texas, for example, reported that it had been subjected to intrusive questions and underwent an 18-month delay before it obtained a 501(c)(4) exemption.⁵²⁹ Another group known as Action for a Progressive Future ⁵²⁴ See IRS analysis of 501(c)(4) advocacy cases as of 6/5/2012, PSI-IRS-37-000004 - 019, at 011 - 012. The total does not include four groups that appear to have been processed prior to May 2010. Although the Minority Staff's Dissenting Views suggest, at 236, that the IRS limited its review to progressive groups seeking 501(c)(3) status, all of the cases on the list compiled by the IRS Chief Risk Officer sought (c)(4) status. A TIGTA letter has indicated that seven, rather than nine, progressive groups appeared on the advocacy case list, but TIGTA's smaller number is due to TIGTA's considering only the May 2012 advocacy case list and not the December 2012 advocacy case list which included two additional progressive groups. had a similar experience, undergoing both extensive questioning and an 18-month delay.⁵³⁰ While some dismiss concerns involving Progressive groups by noting that all of the Progressive groups on the IRS case advocacy list eventually obtained tax exempt status, during the same period 111 conservative groups – more than five times as many – also received approval, while others continued to wait for resolution of their applications. Eventual approval of an application does not mean that the application approval process itself was appropriate or timely.

The following chart summarizes some of the common negative experiences among the liberal groups that filed 501(c)(4) applications with the IRS.

Another liberal group that did not have “Progressive” or “Progress” in its name, but reported similar experiences was Alliance for a Better Utah, a “multi-issue education and advocacy organization promoting progressive ideas and causes.” See Alliance for a Better Utah website, <http://betterutah.org/about/>; “In IRS Scandal, Spat Over Level of Scrutiny,” Wall Street Journal, John McKinnon (6/25/2013), <http://online.wsj.com/news/articles/SB10001424127887323998604578567963466211132> (indicating Alliance for a Better Utah affiliate had waited almost two years for action on a still pending application). Still other liberal groups were the subject of other BOLO listings, including groups promoting medical marijuana, Palestinian rights, and implementation of President Obama’s health care law. See, e.g., “New Records: IRS Targeted Progressive Groups More Extensively Than Tea Party,” Think Progress website, Josh Israel and Adam Peck (4/23/2014), <http://thinkprogress.org/politics/2014/04/23/3429722/ire-records-tea-party/> (providing a chart showing that IRS BOLOs issued between August 2010 and April 2013, “included more explicit references to progressive groups, ACORN successors, and medical marijuana organizations than to Tea Party entities”); “I.R.S. Scrutiny Went Beyond the Political,” New York Times, Jonathan Weisman (7/4/2013), http://www.nytimes.com/2013/07/05/us/politics/irs-scrutiny-went-beyond-the-political.html?pagewanted=all&_r=0 (discussing Minnesota Break the Bonds, a group promoting Palestinian rights, that underwent intrusive questioning and a two-year delay in the processing of its then still pending application).

Together, the evidence of how the IRS treated 501(c)(4) applications filed by ACORN successor, Occupy, Emerge America, and progressive groups offers additional proof that the IRS subjected liberal groups to the same types of inappropriate selection criteria, heightened scrutiny, delayed processing, and mismanagement that affected conservative groups.

G. Developing 501(c)(4) Guidance

The Subcommittee investigation found that applications filed by both conservative and liberal groups were put on hold for years while IRS revenue agents awaited guidance from the EO Technical Unit on how to proceed. The IRS' inability to provide timely and effective guidance for EO employees on how to develop and evaluate 501(c)(4) cases involving campaign activities was a major contributor to the casework delays. Missed opportunities included the IRS' inability to produce a 501(c)(4) guidesheet for EO employees; failure to provide templates for or detailed guidance on development letters; and repeated changes in the key screening criteria. In large part, the IRS' difficulties revolved around its decision to use a facts and circumstances test to evaluate the cases rather than provide more objective criteria and bright line rules to guide EO deliberations.

(1) Seeking Increased Guidance

A primary reason the advocacy applications were delayed for years was IRS hesitation and confusion over how to apply the 501(c)(4) requirements to organizations involved with campaign activities. Because the agency mandated use of a facts and circumstances test that sought to take into account all relevant material factors, whatever they might be, the IRS required EO employees to make case-by-case determinations with multiple interpretation issues and few objective standards or bright line rules.⁵³¹

One key issue was determining what activities qualified as campaign intervention. Questions included how to evaluate issue ads, legislative campaigns, voter educational materials, voter guides, and donations to other 501(c)(4) groups. A second issue was that the law governing 501(c)(4) organizations stated unequivocally that they should be used "exclusively" to promote social welfare, but the key implementing regulation stated that 501(c)(4) organizations may be used "primarily" for social welfare activity.⁵³² That statutory-regulatory ⁵³¹ See, e.g., 4/30/2013 "Memorandum for Deputy Inspector General for Audit," from Joseph H. Grant, Acting IRS Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities, reprinted in 5/14/2013 TIGTA Audit Report, 43-48, at 44 ("There are no bright line tests for what constitutes political campaign intervention (in particular, the line between such activity and education) or whether an organization is primarily engaged in social welfare activities.").

⁵³² Compare 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(4) (2012) with 26 C.F.R. § 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i) (2012). An internal TIGTA memorandum took note of this contradiction: "It appears that the Treasury mismatch required EO personnel to determine when an organization was engaged “primarily” in social welfare activities. The issues included how to categorize various expenditures, how to quantify volunteer efforts, and whether to use a percentage test.

The IRS provided limited regulatory guidance and revenue rulings on those and other issues, leaving EO personnel struggling to interpret how the facts and circumstances test should be applied. In addition, because the facts and circumstances test, by its nature, considered a wide range of unspecified factors, applicants often criticized it as inherently time consuming, intrusive, unpredictable, nontransparent, or subjective.⁵³³ EO agents had to operate under that constant barrage of criticism as well as broader skepticism about the ability of IRS revenue agents to evaluate campaign activities in a fair, consistent, and unbiased manner.

Consensus on Lack of Clear Standards. Virtually all of the IRS personnel interviewed by the Subcommittee, from the most to least senior, described the facts and circumstances test as difficult to administer and made more difficult by a lack of objective criteria or bright line rules.

Defining campaign intervention activities was widely acknowledged as a problem. Former IRS Commissioner Steven Miller told the Subcommittee that determining campaign intervention was a “very difficult area.”⁵³⁴ In 2008, when Mr. Miller was Commissioner of Tax Exempt and Government Entities, he wrote a draft memo to Lois Lerner about the “2008 Political Campaign Season” and advocated issuing additional guidance due to “the limited and somewhat flawed statutory tools available to us to address instances of political intervention.”⁵³⁵ When asked about the revenue rulings used by agents regulation contradicts the I.R.C. [Internal Revenue Code]. If an organization is required by law to operate exclusively for the promotion of social welfare, its activities cannot be properly assessed using a lesser standard of primarily engaged in promoting the common good and general welfare of the people of the community and still meet the requirements of the law.” 1/28/2013 TIGTA Memorandum for the Office of the Chief Counsel, by the Assistant Inspector General for Audit (Management Services and Exempt Organizations), “Request for Assistance Regarding Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(4) and Treasury Regulation Section 1.501(c)(4)-1,” PSI-TIGTA-16-000006 - 009, at 007.

⁵³³ The problems with the facts and circumstances test were described in one publication, the National Review, as follows: “The proposed rule [to revise the regulation] is not entirely without merit. It would do away with the broad, indeterminate ‘facts and circumstances’ test that was a major contributing factor to the IRS scandal. Under that rule, it was left to IRS agents, considering all the ‘facts and circumstances,’ to decide whether an organization’s activities constituted ‘social welfare activities’ (good) or ‘electioneering’ (bad). Obviously, that gave huge discretion to the IRS agents Replacing the ‘facts and circumstances’ test with more objective criteria is a plus.” “Silenced by the Taxman,” National Review Online, Bradley A. Smith (11/30/2013), <http://nationalreview.com/node/365143/print>.

EO head Lois Lerner wrote to a colleague: “I personally have been up to the Hill at least 8 times this past year to explain the complexities of the rules — they are not black and white and they are not always intuitive.”⁵³⁷ She made the same point at a January 2013 meeting with TIGTA officials. A summary of that meeting stated:

“Lois noted that it is difficult for non-lawyers (like our exams and determines agents) who are looking for clear rules to operate in areas where there are no clear rules. In this situation you can’t apply black and white rules.”⁵³⁸

Ms. Lerner later complained to TIGTA officials that in their report: “[T]here was no recognition about how difficult these cases were and the fact that there is no bright line test for making determinations on applications involving these issues.”⁵³⁹ At another point, Ms. Lerner wrote to an attorney in the Chief Counsel’s office: “We need guidance on c4, we need guidance on c4, we need guidance on C4. ... Other EO personnel made similar points. Former EOT head and later head of the Rulings and Agreements Unit Holly Paz told the Subcommittee that determining campaign intervention was difficult and confusing for the Cincinnati revenue agents working the cases.⁵⁴¹ Cindy Thomas, Determinations Unit head, told the Subcommittee that IRS agents struggled with determining what political advocacy and campaign intervention were, also describing it as a difficult and confusing area.⁵⁴² Hilary Goehausen, an EOT specialist who worked on the advocacy cases, told the Subcommittee that, under “the facts and circumstances [test] two people can come to different conclusions” on the same case.⁵⁴³ Carter Hull, another EOT specialist who worked on the advocacy cases, described “political activity” as “a complicated area.”⁵⁴⁴ One of the Cincinnati determinations specialists, Stephen Seok, told the Subcommittee that, from his own experience, it was “almost impossible” to define campaign activity and the work was made harder by the absence of useful guidance.⁵⁴⁵ Two other Cincinnati EOD employees, Gary Muthert and Elizabeth Hofacre, each told the Subcommittee that their jobs were made harder by the fact that they had received no training on how to apply the facts and circumstances test.⁵⁴⁶

Defining Primarily. IRS officials acknowledged a lack of clarity, not only with respect to what activities qualified as campaign intervention, but also as to what was meant by “exclusively” and “primarily.” On September 19, 2012, Ms. Lerner wrote to two of her advocacy experts, Justin Lowe and Judith Kindell: “I am going up on the Hill today – I know both of you have given me insight about why the Reg say primarily instead of exclusively – like the statute, but I have no recollection of the reasons. Can you remind me ASAP please!”⁵⁴⁷ Mr. Lowe responded:

“There is nothing public about why the regs say primarily instead of exclusively. In the old drafting files from when the regs were written, both (c)(3) and (c)(4) regs originally said primarily. During the editing process, a reviewer commented on the (c)(3) regs that the primarily language was overbroad and should be restricted, so the insubstantial wording was added. There was no similar comments or changes made to (c)(4) regs, so we don't know what the thinking was there.”⁵⁴⁸

On another occasion in 2012, Joseph Urban, TEGE Tax Law Specialist, discussed the lack of a clear benchmark for the “primarily” standard:

“FYI, among the questions I would ask an IRS witness at a hearing is why, after all these years, the IRS has not defined primary, or given any indication as to what facts and circumstances the IRS uses in determining whether a (c)(4)’s activities primarily benefit public or private interests. Mr/Ms Witness, don’t you think vagueness might scare honest folks away from doing things they are permitted to do, but be exploited by those who want to take advantage of (c)(4) although they are not legitimate social welfare orgs? Doesn’t vagueness leave the IRS open to charges of arbitrary enforcement?”⁵⁴⁹

In 2013, when asked about these issues during a hearing before the Senate Finance Committee, former IRS Commissioner Douglas Shulman testified:

“I think everybody knew that it was very difficult to administer the (c)(4) laws, and so I do not have any memory of it, but there very well could have been conversations [between the IRS and the Treasury Department] about policy, the policy matters that members of this committee have talked about: should the ‘primary purpose’ test be changed?”⁵⁵⁰

Together, these statements suggest that senior IRS officials were well aware that the lack of guidance was inhibiting IRS enforcement efforts with regard to 501(c)(4) organizations.

Percentage Standard. Another ongoing source of debate and confusion, both within and outside of the IRS, was whether the agency used a percentage test to determine whether a group was engaged “primarily” in social welfare activities and, if so, what the percentage was.

When the Subcommittee asked about this issue in 2012, the IRS replied: “The IRS has taken no position on a fixed percentage or any one factor in precedential guidance.”⁵⁵¹ When asked about the issue during a briefing, the IRS told the Subcommittee that the agency did not have an official percentage test that was used to decide cases.⁵⁵² Yet former Acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller told the Subcommittee that it was common knowledge at the IRS that a 501(c)(4) organization was permitted to engage in campaign activities up to 49% of its total expenditures.⁵⁵³ Cindy Thomas, the Determinations head, told the Subcommittee that the IRS used a 51% test to establish whether an organization was engaged primarily in social welfare activities, although she didn’t recall why that number was used or where the number came from.⁵⁵⁴ Elizabeth Hofacre told the Subcommittee that the test was 51% social welfare activity and up to 49% campaign activity, while Carter Hull told the Subcommittee that “everyone assumed a 50% dividing line.” During the 2012 special bucketing effort to reduce the advocacy case backlog, Holly Paz told the Subcommittee that she had instructed IRS employees to use a 51/49% test for permissible social welfare/campaign activity.⁵⁵⁵

The investigation also found several IRS documents suggesting that the agency was using a 51% test. For example, a July 2009 Instructor Guide for determinations specialists stated: “[E]xclusively only means ‘primary’ for (c)(4) and ‘primary’ is generally understood to mean 51%.”⁵⁵⁶ A summary of a 2010 briefing on Tea Party cases noted that when determining political activity, if that activity was “more than 50% political, possible PAC (Political Action Committee).”⁵⁵⁷ On the other hand, an undated document from the IRS Quality Assurance Division stated:

“There is no absolute 51% primary activity test. Because the law is so grey, the conclusion that the organization qualifies for exemption under 501(c)(4) is ultimately a professional assertion of the specialist.”⁵⁵⁸

Together, these statements and documents show conflicting guidance and ongoing ambiguity over use of a percentage test in 501(c)(4) cases; the result was confusion for the Cincinnati determinations specialists who repeatedly requested clarifying guidance.

(2) Failing to Agree on a Guidesheet

In the summer of 2011, more than a year after the first Tea Party application was filed and as the number of advocacy cases collected by the IRS exceeded 100 for the first time, the Exempt Organizations Technical (EOT) Unit undertook an effort to produce a “guidesheet” to help EOD employees identify, develop, and evaluate the cases assigned to them. In September 2011, EOT circulated a draft, but multiple rounds of comments, criticisms, and suggested edits from the Chief Counsel’s office slowed and eventually halted work on the draft. In May 2012, after about ten months of effort and despite ongoing requests for guidance, EO stopped working on the guidesheet, which was never finalized.

Initiating the Guidesheet. The EO Determinations (EOD) Unit had been pressing EOT to develop additional written guidance on how to handle advocacy cases since 2010.⁵⁵⁹ According to EOT head Holly Paz, the effort to develop a guidesheet was finally undertaken, because the determination specialists in Cincinnati were struggling with how to handle the advocacy cases; understanding the activities that qualified as campaign intervention was generally difficult for the agents who were confused about how to make those determinations; and making those determinations was time consuming and complex.⁵⁶⁰

In July 2011, the Exempt Organizations division decided that additional written guidance on advocacy cases should be developed for the Determinations Unit.⁵⁶¹ An attorney in the IRS Chief Counsel’s office later summarized the “three principal objectives” of the guidesheet as follows:

“To help agents (1) screen applications for possible political campaign intervention or lobbying, (2) decide which cases require further development and which facts to develop, and (3) make a Standard Under §501(c)(4),” prepared by the IRS, IRSR0000410696 - 711, at 709 (“The IRS has not published a precise method of measuring exempt activities or purposes in any of its published guidance, though three revenue rulings have stated that all of the organization’s activities must be considered and that there is no pure expenditure test.”)).

determination whether a particular activity is political campaign intervention or lobbying.”⁵⁶²

Circulating the Draft Guidesheet. According to EOT specialist Hilary Goehausen, around the same time she took over the advocacy case duties from Carter Hull, then Acting EOT head Michael Seto directed her to draft the advocacy “guidesheet” that the Determinations Unit had been requesting.⁵⁶³ Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that she worked to model the guidesheet after ones the IRS had previously created for other issues like health care.⁵⁶⁴ She said that she was the primary author of the initial draft, with help from Justin Lowe.⁵⁶⁵

In September 2011, Ms. Goehausen circulated the draft guidesheet to a number of EOT managers and specialists to obtain their comments, including Judith Kindell, Thomas Miller, Carter Hull, and Elizabeth Kastenber.⁵⁶⁶ On October 25, 2011, Determinations head Cindy Thomas asked for an update on the effort, noting the IRS was “starting to get a lot of heat” to resolve the cases:

“[W]here do we stand with the document Justin Lowe or others from D.C. were putting together with lessons learned, suggested developmental questions for those applying under c3 and for those applying under c4, sample denial letter, etc.? We’re starting to get a lot of heat from the public on these cases sitting idle and now have Congressionals on some of these. What is the plan of action and estimated completion date?”⁵⁶⁷

Five days later, on October 30, 2011, Ms. Thomas sent an email with the subject line, “Congressionals Coming! WE NEED TO MOVE ON THIS,” in which she urged swift action on the guidesheet:

“I’m not sure what the hold is on the document/guidance EOT is supposed to be providing for us, but I’ve received a phone call from an individual who was previously an EO Determinations specialist. He is working with one of these organizations [REDACTED BY IRS] and is threatening to go to his Congressional Office regarding this organization and others. That is only going to create even more work for us and we need to get letters out to these organizations ASAP. Please let me know when we can expect to get the document from EOT.”⁵⁶⁸

By that point, Ms. Thomas had been pressing EOT to issue guidance for nearly 18 months.⁵⁶⁹

On November 3, 2011, after incorporating suggested edits, Ms. Goehausen circulated a revised draft, writing: “Attached is an updated version of the draft Advocacy Org Guidesheet that Cincinnati requested and has been asking us for.”⁵⁷⁰ A copy was provided to Ms. Thomas by Michael Seto later in November.⁵⁷¹ In December, the draft was also given to the members of a newly formed “advocacy team” of determinations specialists.⁵⁷²

The draft guidesheet was summarized by a TEGE attorney as a document that had been drafted:

“for organizations that engage in lobbying, political intervention and general issue advocacy. It summarizes the law for applicable organizations (social welfare, labor, business leagues and political organizations), explains how to distinguish politics from issue advocacy, and provides comprehensive case development questions. EO will use the guide to process exemption applications and provide general guidance to the public on irs.gov.”⁵⁷³

At that point, the guidesheet was composed of an overview and eight individual guidesheets on specific activities, including how to distinguish between issue advocacy versus campaign intervention. Generally, the specific guidesheets set out some general principles, provided a list of facts tending to show that an activity did or did not qualify as campaign intervention, and offered a list of questions that could be directed to an applicant to develop the facts needed to apply the facts and circumstances test.⁵⁷⁴

According to Ms. Goehausen, in late 2011, she learned that the Determinations Unit viewed the draft guidesheet as unhelpful because it was “too lawyerly.”⁵⁷⁵ She also learned that attorneys in the TEGE Counsel’s office had a copy and were working on revisions.⁵⁷⁶ In February 2012, Donald Spellmann, one of the TEGE attorneys, also alerted his supervisor, Victoria Judson, to the guidesheet project. Ms. Judson worked directly for IRS Chief Counsel William Wilkins.⁵⁷⁷ Ms. Goehausen told the Subcommittee that the draft guidesheet then began going back and forth between her office, attorneys who worked directly for the Chief Counsel, and attorneys in the TEGE section of the Chief Counsel’s office.⁵⁷⁸ Various changes were made without the participants coming to a final agreement on the document.⁵⁷⁹

IRS Chief Counsel Wilkins told the Subcommittee that the attorneys who worked directly for him, Victoria Judson and Janine Cook, told him about the guidesheet effort, explained that EO head Lois Lerner had asked them to review the draft due to the sensitive topics, and indicated the draft needed some fine tuning. Mr. Wilkins also said that Ms. Judson and Ms. Cook had indicated that they thought the guidesheet should not stray from existing law, and he agreed with that assessment.⁵⁸⁰

Mr. Wilkins told the Subcommittee that he did not share a copy of the draft guidesheet with anyone at Treasury or the White House, nor did he talk to anyone there about it.⁵⁸¹ When asked about an email in which he asked his staff about whether the draft guidesheet should be shared with Treasury, Mr. Wilkins told the Subcommittee that he thought Treasury was concerned primarily about public guidance, and the guidesheet was intended to be used internally within the IRS.⁵⁸² Mr.

Wilkins said that he learned his staff was exchanging comments on the draft with EOT and TEGE attorneys, and that Ms. Lerner began having intense conversations with Ms. Judson and others about how the guidesheet should look.⁵⁸³

The key participants from the TEGE Counsel office were Donald Spellmann, Susan Brown, and David Marshall.⁵⁸⁴ Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that Lois Lerner gave his office the draft in February 2012, and the TEGE attorneys viewed it as needing additional work.⁵⁸⁵ On February 24, 2012, Ms. Lerner wrote to Mr. Spellmann and others: “The guidance provided to Cincy [Cincinnati] that Don reviewed – I’m hoping you can let us know your concerns as soon as possible so we can finalize the draft. We will be sending it over to them and putting it out on the web with other check sheets/guide sheets.”⁵⁸⁶ On February 28, 2012, Mr. Spellmann wrote to his supervisor, Victoria Judson, that EO had asked the TEGE Counsel’s office “for an accelerated review of the guide sheet” and that they viewed the draft as “good, but needs a fair amount of work throughout.”⁵⁸⁷

Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that his office returned preliminary comments on the draft to Ms. Lerner in early March 2012.⁵⁸⁸ On March 7, 2012, after reviewing TEGE’s suggested changes, Ms. Lerner made the following comments:

“I looked quickly last night and overall like the approach. I do think, however, that we need more upfront text explaining why this is a difficult determination. You[r] papers [are] great for lawyers who understand the facts and circumstances grayness, but I think we need to add a more ‘practical’ piece in the introduction, as well. Also, I noticed you took out the chart on different types of orgs and what they can do – I’d like that added back in – I think it clearly illustrates to the non-expert that this isn’t even on[e] size fits all for the requirements – we have given it to the press with good results in the past.”⁵⁸⁹

On March 26, 2012, Ms. Lerner tried to explain to Victoria Judson of the Chief Counsel’s office the importance of providing practical guidance to the IRS agents analyzing 501(c)(4) applications:

are published in the I.R.B., so this is not what they have been talking about. However, my guess is that they would also want to be seeing items like this one.”).

“I also think we live in 2 different worlds. I live in a more ‘real’ world than yours where my staff can’t wait for formal guidance to do their jobs. ... These are live cases and if all we can give them is published guidance on the extreme ends of the spectrum, they will get themselves in trouble.”⁵⁹⁰

Attorneys from EOT, the TEGE section of the Chief Counsel’s office, and the attorneys who worked directly for the Chief Counsel continued to exchange comments on the guidesheet. The TEGE and Chief Counsel attorneys carefully reviewed the existing IRS revenue rulings and attempted to ensure that the guidesheet did not break new ground, even though the purpose of the guidesheet was to provide additional guidance beyond what already existed. In late March, the TEGE and Chief Counsel’s attorneys discussed cutting out certain parts of the draft to ensure it didn’t exceed existing guidance.⁵⁹¹ Mr. Spellman noted at one point that striking the right balance between the existing and new guidance was “super tricky.”⁵⁹² On April 4, 2012, Susan Brown wrote that she and Mr. Spellman were thinking about deleting the specific guidesheet on lobbying, due to difficulties associated with distinguishing between lobbying communications and campaign activities.⁵⁹³ Ms. Cook responded:

“I think Lois [Lerner] will react very strongly against that, particularly on the theory that this is fact gathering focused. I think we need to leave them in if at all possible; she is already pushing back a lot on [501(c)] 5/6s deletion and if we take out lobbying, I’m concerned we’ll lose any remaining credibility in their eyes in giving them something they can conceivably use.”⁵⁹⁴

In fact, the next day, Ms. Lerner wrote to Ms. Cook, opposing the suggestion that the guidesheet address only 501(c)(3) and (4) organizations, and omit any mention of 501(c)(5) or (6) groups, since applications were being filed by all four groups, and EO determinations specialists were going to be confronted with campaign activity issues with respect to all of them:

Could be a problem if the lobbying is ‘Stop the wrongheaded legislation (sponsored by Candidate X)’! For that reason we plan to delete the lobbying guide sheets (which applied to (c)(3)s only anyway). These issues don’t get easier!”).

⁵⁹⁴ See 4/4/2012 email from Janine Cook to Susan Brown and Donald Spellmann, “Advocacy guide,” IRSR0000057166.

“I know you suggested just including c3 and c4 information in the guide sheet – that just won’t work. So, if – as we initially agreed – you can tell me specifically what parts of the draft we sent give you heart burn and why, we will try to lessen the heartburn. Ignoring pieces or not speaking to them because Counsel is not comfortable is NOT an option for me. The work is here, my folks need to do it, and they will regardless of what we give them. Our job is to provide them with the best tool we can.”⁵⁹⁵

Ms. Cook responded:

“I do have a sense of the challenges you are under here and that frankly you’re being caught between a rock and a hard place. ... While much of what you do every day falls into the highly sensitive category, I venture to say that this has got to be one of the top at this time. Accordingly, our legal advice is to follow as closely to the guidance line as possible in what is disseminated and thus publicly available – formal or not, we all know it will be scrutinized.”⁵⁹⁶

A few weeks later, on April 25, 2012, Mr. Spellmann provided Ms. Lerner with still another revised version of the guidesheet, explaining: “We just can’t keep our hands off this thing (or stop thinking about it).”⁵⁹⁷ At the end of May, Ms. Lerner expressed frustration with the edits made by the attorneys, in particular the proposed deletion of substantive portions of the draft guidesheet, given the pressing need for guidance to ensure IRS agents treated cases in a consistent manner in accordance with the law.⁵⁹⁸ Ms. Lerner expressed her concerns in an email to Nancy Marks, who worked for then TEGE Commissioner Steven Miller:

“Counsel has been very uncomfortable about applying c3 stuff even to c4 and wasn’t willing to include the c5 and 6s. They also were unwilling to use the c4, 5 and 6 rev rule because it was designed to talk about 527 political activity, which has a slightly different articulation. I find that silly since the entire regulated community has been relying on that guidance as a look at how the IRS might think about specific factual scenarios. Nikole [Flax] asked me whether I thought this would actually help our guys practically – for example does it provide direction in how the determine which activity is primary. I told her I think it is cumbersome and not the best practical tool, but – with some discussion about where to focus – could work. ... Perhaps could add language that reminds them it’s a look at all the facts and circumstances including, but not limited to, expenditures, volunteer activity, communications, etc.”⁵⁹⁹

Abandoning the Guidesheet Project. Mr. Spellmann told the Subcommittee that after supplying the revised version of the draft guidance at the end of April 2012, he didn’t hear back from Ms. Lerner, and eventually learned EO had decided it wasn’t going to issue the document.⁶⁰⁰ After ten months of effort, EO gave up trying to finalize the draft guidesheet.⁶⁰¹

The documents suggest that the biggest issue dividing IRS personnel over the guidesheet was how much guidance to provide beyond the regulations and revenue rulings already available. Determinations personnel wanted more guidance; the Chief Counsel’s office apparently did not want to use the guidesheet to expand the existing guidance, despite acknowledging gray areas and interpretation difficulties. The inability of the IRS to provide the guidance repeatedly requested by the Determinations Unit is more evidence of the difficult issues and ongoing confusion and disagreements over how to apply the law to 501(c)(4) organizations.

Initial Refusal to Provide Guidesheet. The Subcommittee first learned of the draft guidesheet when it was mentioned in a June 2012 letter from the IRS.⁶⁰² In that letter, the IRS wrote: “In connection with recent cases, EO Technical prepared a draft educational guide sheet on the issue of political activity for section 501(c)(4) applications that was shared for comment with some employees in EO Determinations. That guide sheet was neither mandated nor finalized.”⁶⁰³ The Subcommittee requested a copy of the guidesheet on several occasions in 2012 and 2013, but the IRS refused to provide it. After the TIGTA report was issued in May 2013, however, the IRS finally provided a copy to the Subcommittee.

(3) Disagreeing on Development Letters

The draft guidesheet was intended to provide guidance not only on how to apply the law, but also on how to use development letters to gather the information needed to apply the facts and circumstances test requiring consideration of all relevant, material factors. Development letters were the primary tool used by EO determinations specialists to obtain additional information about pending 501(c)(4) applications. Early on, EOT specialists had reviewed some of the development letters before they went out and sometimes promised to develop templates for them, but never did so. In January 2012, in an effort to reduce a growing backlog of 501(c)(4) applications, some of which had been sitting idle for more than a year, a newly designated advocacy case coordinator, Stephen Seok, used the draft guidesheet to develop sample questions, encouraged the determinations specialists to draft development letters, and approved the sending of dozens of development letters to applicants. Some recipients of those letters criticized some questions as inappropriate, burdensome, or intrusive, resulting in negative media stories and Congressional inquiries. The new coordinator was removed from his post, despite having consulted his supervisor beforehand, demonstrating the ongoing division of opinion within the agency and lack of reliable guidance on how to develop 501(c)(4) cases.

Early Development Letters. For the first eight months that IRS was reviewing Tea Party cases, from February to November 2010, as explained earlier, Elizabeth Hofacre acted as the case coordinator and worked with EOT specialist Carter Hull who reviewed her development letters. Her caseload was then reassigned to Ronald Bell, who acted as the case coordinator from November 2010 to November 2011. He took little action on the cases, while awaiting guidance from EOT. In December 2011, he was replaced by Stephen Seok who became the third coordinator of what, by then, were called the “advocacy” cases.

That same month, in consultation with his supervisors, Mr. Seok formed an “advocacy team” composed of determinations specialists who would be working on the advocacy cases, and, on December 16, 2011, called a team meeting to discuss how to handle the cases.⁶⁰⁴ According to the meeting minutes, the team faced a backlog of about 170 pending cases, which were described in the following manner: “30 Something Tea party, Several 912, Repeal PPACT (Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act), Enact Universal Single-Payer Health Care System, etc.”⁶⁰⁵ While that list was not all inclusive, it suggested that the team was processing both conservative and liberal leaning organizations.

Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that, at the advocacy team meeting, he emphasized the need to treat the cases in a consistent manner, and discussed the use of development letters to develop key facts, including developing a template letter which the team hoped EOT would provide.⁶⁰⁶ He said that Ms. Hofacre also attended the meeting, gave a history of the cases, and provided copies of the development letters she had sent out.⁶⁰⁷ Mr. Seok said that, after the meeting, he sent the team members a copy of the draft guidesheet which had recently been sent to him and which included guidance on developing 501(c)(4) cases.⁶⁰⁸

January 2012 Development Letters. Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that he used the draft guidesheet to develop a list of questions that could be included in development letters sent to advocacy organizations.⁶⁰⁹ According to a later email, Mr. Seok circulated to the advocacy team a 12-page list of possible questions, which he later described as a “reference” list, not a “template” for development letters.⁶¹⁰ In January 2012, EOD revenue agents began sending a new round of development letters to organizations with pending 501(c)(4) applications. Many of those letters contained questions from the list circulated by Mr. Seok.⁶¹¹

According to a later email, a total of 59 development letters were sent by multiple IRS revenue agents to organizations with pending 501(c)(4) applications.⁶¹² Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that development letters were not sent to all 170 of the pending applicants in early 2012, due to resource constraints.⁶¹³

IRS personnel later summarized some of the troubling development letter questions as follows:

EOT head Holly Paz told the Subcommittee that, for the most part, the development letters issued by the new advocacy team in January and February 2011, were not reviewed by anyone other than Mr. Seok before they went out.⁶¹⁷ The TIGTA Audit Report, which conducted a review of all of the development letters sent by the IRS to the 170 organizations, many of which received more than one letter and many of which received letters prior to 2012, determined that 98 of the applicants received requests for “unnecessary” information.⁶¹⁸

Negative Reaction to Information Requests. A few weeks after the first development letters were mailed in January 2011, as word of the letters spread, some recipients objected to some of the questions as inappropriate, burdensome, or intrusive, criticizing in particular requests for donor information and copies of materials on the organizations’ websites, Twitter, and Facebook. Negative media stories followed.⁶¹⁹ A March 2012 New York Times article, which was circulated among IRS officials, expressed alarm about IRS inquiries into the groups’ politics: “In recent weeks, the IRS has sent dozens of detailed questionnaires to Tea Party organizations applying for nonprofit tax status, demanding to know their political leanings and activities.”⁶²⁰

Members of Congress also expressed concern. On February 28, 2012, Mr. Spellmann from the IRS Chief Counsel’s office sent an email to his colleagues noting: “Lois [Lerner] told me the Hill gripes include the applications are taking too long to process, the requests for information are too burdensome, and some types of organizations (like Tea Party) are being singled out for greater scrutiny.”⁶²¹ A number of Members of Congress expressed concern about the requests for donor names. Although 501(c)(4) organizations were already required to disclose the names of donors of $5,000 or more on Schedule B of their Form 990 tax returns, that information was filed after the close of the covered year, and Schedule B was normally kept confidential unless an organization elected to make it public. A March 2012 letter signed by twelve Senators stated in part: “A number of our constituents have raised concerns that the recent IRS inquiries sent to civic organizations

Intrusive Questions to Conservative and Liberal Groups. On March 26, 2012, an article was circulated to Ms. Lerner and others reporting that the Landmark Legal Foundation had sent a letter to TIGTA calling for an investigation into the IRS’ “inappropriate and intimidating investigation tactics in the administration of applications for exempt status submitted by organizations associated with the Tea Party movement.”⁶²³ A TIGTA analysis later determined, however, that of the development letters sent to the 170 organizations, only 27 letters included donor questions, and of those 27, only 13 were sent to groups with Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in their names.⁶²⁴

The evidence indicates that burdensome development letters were sent to both conservative and liberal groups.⁶²⁵ For example, an article examining IRS review of two Texas groups seeking tax exempt status analyzed IRS development letters sent to a Tea Party organization and a progressive group, making copies of both letters publicly available.⁶²⁶ The article concluded:

“A comparison of the letter from the IRS released by the Waco Tea Party and of a letter provided by the progressive Texas organization found that both are extensively detailed, asked similar questions, and were tailored to each organization. Both letters asked for copies of the organization’s board meeting minutes and for copies of each organization’s web sites. Questions also addressed specific concerns that the IRS had with each organization but, on the whole, did not appear to treat the organizations differently.”⁶²⁷

While the article indicated that the letters did not treat the conservative and liberal groups differently, it indicated that both were subjected to extensive, detailed questions.

Prior Approval of Donor Questions. Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that, before the development letters went out, he had sought guidance on asking for donor names and related information and received permission to include the questions.⁶²⁸ Mr. Seok indicated that he had shown a draft development letter with the donor questions to his manager, Steve Bowling, and they had discussed the donor questions with EOD manager Jon Waddell.⁶²⁹ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that Mr. Waddell had advised against including the donor questions, but Mr. Seok had explained it was important, because it would indicate whether a Super PAC involved with campaign activities was funding the proposed 501(c)(4) organization.⁶³⁰ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that his manager, Mr. Bowling, agreed that the donor questions should be included in the development letters.⁶³¹

Development Letters Halted. According to Mr. Seok, he held a second advocacy team meeting in February 2012.⁶³² At that meeting, he noted the negative media reports raising concerns about the IRS asking inappropriate questions, and urged his advocacy team to be very careful when sending out their development letters.⁶³³

Due to the criticism, confusion arose over whether EOD determinations specialists in the Cincinnati office were supposed to stop issuing new development letters. On February 27, 2012, one EOD manager wrote to Mr. Seok:

“Do we have any idea on when we might be able to issue developmental letters again. I have four un-reviewed cases. It does not make sense to review them if we cannot issue letters. If it will be a while, I should request some non-advocacy case[s] to work.”⁶³⁴

The same day, Determinations head Cindy Thomas emailed Mr. Seok’s manager, Mr. Bowling: “A question though: Why are we not issuing development letters? Who instructed folks to stop? The only thing I heard from Holly is that we shouldn’t be asking organizations to submit their entire website.”⁶³⁵ Mr. Bowling responded: “I told Stephen [Seok] to hold off on any further development of template questions, not to stop developing cases. I’ll straighten it out. I understood that Washington is looking at the letters that went public and would provide guidance.”⁶³⁶

In March 2012, then TEGE Commissioner Steven Miller approved giving some of the advocacy groups that had received development letters an additional 60 days to respond.⁶³⁷ Ms. Thomas sent an email to EOT head Holly Paz, protesting: “I don’t understand why an organization who is not being compliant is getting special treatment. But obviously, we’ll do what we are told.”⁶³⁸ Ms. Paz responded: “The theory is that when we have had a case for a long time without taking action and are asking for a lot of stuff, we have to give more time. I hear you on fairness but I also do what I am told.”⁶³⁹

Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that, in early March 2012, Mr. Bowling sent him an email directing him to stop his team from sending out any more development letters on the advocacy cases, and Mr. Seok relayed this message to his team.⁶⁴⁰ On March 6, 2012, EO head Lois Lerner wrote: “Cincy [Cincinnati] is on hold for the time being on sending anymore questions out on these cases.”⁶⁴¹ A few days later, according to Mr. Seok, Mr. Bowling reversed course and told him to instruct his team to continue sending out development letters.⁶⁴² Mr. Seok said that, two weeks later, Mr. Bowling reversed course again and told him to stop developing the cases entirely.⁶⁴³

Team Leader Removed. On April 11, 2012, William Angner, an EOD manager, sent an email to Mr. Seok and others announcing an upcoming TIGTA audit of how the agency was handling 501(c)(4) cases:

“FYI: Holly Paz and TIGTA employees will be here in Cincy 4/30-5/1/2012 to review advocacy cases (ie TIGTA audit). There will also be Congressional hearings about how we handle those cases as well. Glad those are in another group worked by other agents! Please give Stephen all the morale support you can muster :)”⁶⁴⁴

Mr. Seok responded to Mr. Angner: “Boss, You are going to save me, right?” Mr. Angner replied: “pawns in chain of command are either overlooked or sacrificed ... some one up the chain should take the heat for you :)”⁶⁴⁵ In May 2012, then Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement Steven Miller removed Mr. Seok from his position as advocacy team leader.⁶⁴⁶

Lack of Development Guidance. Development letters are the primary mechanism used by EOD determinations specialists to obtain additional information needed to apply the facts and circumstances test to 501(c)(4) cases, but the IRS failed to provide its agents with clear guidance on permissible questions. The draft guidesheet, which included guidance on appropriate questions, was never finalized. Although the advocacy team leader used the draft guidesheet to develop a list of sample questions, obtained explicit permission from his supervisors to include questions about donor information in his team’s development letters, and sought donor information that is routinely supplied in organizations' tax returns, he was removed from his post for encouraging the inclusion of allegedly inappropriate and burdensome questions. Rattled by public criticism, senior IRS officials then went back and forth over whether to allow any 501(c)(4) development letters to be issued at all. Together, the facts demonstrate that, within the IRS in 2012, confusion and a lack of consensus about the types of information that should be obtained through development letters continued to roil the agency.

The issue that received the most attention in early 2012 involved development letters with requests for donor information. The IRS did not keep a list of the 27 organizations that received donor questions, but noted that most of those organizations did not provide the requested information in any event.⁶⁴⁷ In the few cases where donor information was provided, the IRS expunged the information from the files and notified the affected organizations accordingly.⁶⁴⁸ Although Mr. Seok was removed from his post for asking donor questions, both Steven Miller and Judith Kindell told the Subcommittee that situations existed where asking for donor information would be appropriate, for example, if a group were potentially controlled by a 527 political organization or if someone in the group was receiving a private benefit from the group.⁶⁴⁹ The donor issue is just one among many development letter issues that appear to remain unresolved.

Under current practice, the facts and circumstances test requires IRS agents to consider a wide range of material facts affecting 501(c)(4) applications. To gain an understanding of those facts, IRS agents are required to ask detailed questions that, by their nature, are likely to generate criticisms that the IRS inquiries are inappropriate, burdensome, or intrusive. To avoid that outcome, the IRS should consider replacing the facts and circumstances test with more objective standards and bright line rules that would relieve its agents of the need to ask wide-ranging, detailed questions of 501(c)(4) applicants.

⁶⁴⁷ See 8/16/2012 email from Holly Paz to Cheryl Medina, "Bucketing Results List," TIGTA Bates No. 010755 ("[T]here is no list of the organizations who were sent the letter indicating that the donor information was expunged from the file. (4) Failing to Agree on Effective Screening Criteria

In addition to failing to provide needed guidance on substantive issues and development letters, the IRS failed to provide effective guidance to its agents about how to screen incoming 501(c) applications to identify those that should be subject to heightened scrutiny. From 2010 to 2012, the primary BOLO entry for advocacy cases was changed four times in three years without producing consensus support for the screening criteria. Some of the screening criteria were criticized for relying on organizations' names or political views rather than indicators of campaign activity. Other criteria were criticized for being so broadly worded, that they did not facilitate electronic searches for relevant cases or convey the types of campaign and advocacy activities that warranted subjecting an application to heightened scrutiny. In addition to providing ineffective guidance to EOD screeners through the BOLOs, the IRS failed to make routine use of FEC filings that provided more direct indicators of campaign activity and less intrusive means for identifying relevant cases.

2010 Tea Party Screening Criteria. As explained earlier, the IRS receives about 70,000 applications for tax exempt status each year, only a small percentage of which – typically much less than 1% – involve 501(c)(4) organizations involved with campaign activities. The IRS is required by law to determine whether 501(c)(4) organizations have engaged in too much campaign activity to retain their tax exempt status. The evidence reviewed by the Subcommittee indicates, however, that identifying the 501(c)(4) cases that ought to be subjected to that analysis is difficult. From the time that the first Tea Party application was flagged in February 2010, the IRS used primarily two tools to identify advocacy cases: (1) screening criteria which was included in email alerts or Be-on-the-Lookout (BOLO) lists; and (2) case-by-case reviews of individual applications when filed.

As explained earlier, the first BOLO, issued in August 2010, included an entry instructing EO screeners and determination specialists to be on the lookout for applications filed by “local organizations in the Tea Party movement.”⁶⁵⁰ Screeners then used that BOLO entry to look for a variety of advocacy cases, both conservative and liberal, finding more than 40 the first year and over 100 by June 2011. When, in June 2011, senior EO officials asked for the exact criteria being used to identify “Tea Party” cases, as explained earlier, John Shafer, head of the EO Screening Group, surveyed three of his screeners, compiled their various approaches into a list, and provided the following four “issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential ‘tea party’ case”:

⁶⁵⁰ August 2010 BOLO spreadsheet, prepared by IRS, IRS0000002503 - 515, at 509; August 2010 BOLO spreadsheet, prepared by the IRS, IRSR0000455182 - 196

- “1. ‘Tea Party’, ‘Patriots’ or ‘9/12 Project’ is referenced in the case file.
2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes.
3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live.
4. Statements in the case file that are critical of how the country is being run.”⁶⁵¹

The Shafer email shows that, more than one year after the first case was flagged, the IRS still did not have official or widely accepted criteria to identify cases falling within the Tea Party category; instead, IRS agents were using their own individual criteria to identify the cases.

July 2011 BOLO Change. Also as explained earlier, on June 29, 2011, EO head Lois Lerner convened a meeting of senior EO staff to discuss the advocacy cases.⁶⁵² Among other matters, Ms. Lerner expressed concern about using “Tea Party” to refer to the category of cases at issue and directed that, from then on, the cases should be referred to as “advocacy cases.”⁶⁵³ In response to her instruction, beginning in July 2011, the BOLO dropped any reference to the “Tea Party” and instead described the cases, in the Emerging Issues section, as follows: “Advocacy Orgs[:] Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4).”⁶⁵⁴

January 2012 BOLO Change. Six months after that change was made, however, in January 2012, the BOLO entry was altered a third time. The Subcommittee was told that, in January 2012, Stephen Seok, the newly appointed advocacy case coordinator; Ronald Bell, the keeper of the BOLO lists and former Tea Party case coordinator; and their supervisor, Steven Bowling, met to “brainstorm” about the BOLO entry for advocacy cases.⁶⁵⁵ According to Mr. Seok and Mr. Bell, the three believed the BOLO language was so broad that it did not effectively help screeners identify 501(c)(4) groups involved with campaign activities, and all three wanted to revise the wording.⁶⁵⁶ Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that, at the same time, none of them wanted to use “insensitive words” in the BOLO.⁶⁵⁷ Mr. Bell said that the objective of their discussion was to create a revised BOLO entry that would help identify 501(c)(4) applicants that might be involved with campaign activities.⁶⁵⁸

The January 2012 BOLO circulated among the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati contained, for the first time, the following new language to describe advocacy cases:

“Current political issues. Political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the constitution and bill of rights, Social economic reform/movement.”⁶⁵⁹

The new language replaced the prior language that had been in use since June 2011.⁶⁶⁰

Both Mr. Seok and Mr. Bell, two of the three participants in the January 2012 “brainstorming session,” denied authoring the revised BOLO language.⁶⁶¹ Mr. Seok told the Subcommittee that he saw the new language when he received the January 2012 BOLO, but said he did not draft or approve the change.⁶⁶² Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee he had not authored the new BOLO language, and did not know who did.⁶⁶³ Cindy Thomas told the Subcommittee that she reviewed the January 2012 BOLO before it was sent out, saw the new language, and sent an email to Holly Paz alerting her to it, but when she didn’t hear back, Ms. Thomas assumed that Ms. Paz did not have a problem with it and allowed the BOLO to go forward.⁶⁶⁴ Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that she learned during the course of the TIGTA audit that she had ⁶⁶³ Subcommittee interview of Ronald Bell, IRS (1/15/2014). As explained earlier, however, on January 25, 2012, Mr. Bell sent an email to Mr. Bowling asking why a new BOLO entry had been added for Occupy organizations, stating: “I thought the Social economic reform in the updated current political issues was our ‘code word’ for the occupy organizations.” 1/25/2012 email from Ronald Bell to Steven Bowling, “BOLO,” IRSR0000013187. Mr. Bell told the Subcommittee that he had met with Mr. Bowling and Stephen Seok about revising the BOLO entry for advocacy groups, and thought that the group had agreed to use “Social economic reform” as a “code” for identifying Occupy cases. Subcommittee interview of Ronald Bell, IRS (1/15/2014). His explanation suggests that the three had reached at least some level of agreement on specific BOLO language.

⁶⁶⁴ Subcommittee interview of Cindy Thomas, IRS (11/13/2013). Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that she elevated the BOLO entry to Ms. Paz, because she knew that the D.C. headquarters wanted to be kept informed about the advocacy cases, and that Cincinnati “wasn’t doing anything without letting D.C. know.” Id. Ms. Thomas also told the Subcommittee that she couldn’t tell if the new language was left-leaning or right-leaning. Id.

received the email from Ms. Thomas, but did not recall looking at the revised BOLO language.⁶⁶⁵

Mr. Muthert, a screening agent, told the Subcommittee that he saw the revised entry in the January 2012 BOLO language and, thereafter, if he saw an application with the exact language used in the BOLO, sent the organization's application to Mr. Bell.⁶⁶⁶ According to Mr. Muthert, however, the January 2012 language was still very broad, it was difficult to use to search for relevant organizations electronically, and he did not receive any guidance as to what was a "Political action type organization."⁶⁶⁷ Mr. Muthert said that he did not view the entry as limited to Tea Party groups.⁶⁶⁸

May 2012 BOLO Change. Five months later, the BOLO language was changed a fourth and final time. Ms. Paz told the Subcommittee that, in April 2012, she asked Ms. Thomas for a copy of all of the past BOLOs, reviewed the latest BOLO, and only then realized that the entry for advocacy cases had been changed to include references to the political views of applicants.⁶⁶⁹ She told the Subcommittee that she immediately informed EO head Lois Lerner, and worked to revise the entry so that it would, once again, use more generic language.⁶⁷⁰

Ms. Paz also told the Subcommittee that she not only authored the new language, but also, because the advocacy entry was intended to cover all types of political groups, both conservative and liberal, directed that separate BOLO entries for two other types of advocacy groups, ACORN successor and Occupy groups, be eliminated.⁶⁷¹ The ACORN successor entry had been included in the BOLO list since 2010;⁶⁷² the Occupy entry had been included in the BOLO Watch List section since January 2012.⁶⁷³

On May 17, 2012, Ms. Paz sent the revised BOLO language to Ms. Lerner and others, explaining:

"I would like your thoughts on the language below. I would like this language to replace the current advocacy org language on the

Her suggested language was approved and incorporated into the Emerging Issues section of the June 2012 BOLO. The June 2012 BOLO accordingly provided a single entry for all advocacy cases.⁶⁷⁵ It also omitted the separate entries for Occupy and ACORN successor groups.⁶⁷⁶ In addition to revising the Emerging Issues entry and eliminating the separate Occupy and ACORN entries, Ms. Paz instituted a new procedure requiring management approval of all new or updated BOLO entries.⁶⁷⁷

The revised advocacy case entry remained in place for another year, until the TIGTA report was released in May 2013, after which the IRS suspended use of all EOD BOLOs.⁶⁷⁸ According to screening agent Gary Muthert, the final version of the advocacy case BOLO entry used language that was so broad it could not be used effectively to search pending applications by electronic means to locate groups involved with campaign activities.⁶⁷⁹ Instead, he indicated that every application had to be reviewed individually as it came in to see whether it fit within the BOLO screening criteria for groups involved with campaign activities.⁶⁸⁰ In addition, according to Mr. Muthert, the BOLO screening criteria failed to provide sufficient guidance to help EO personnel determine whether an individual application should be selected for heightened scrutiny due to involvement with campaign intervention. In other words, while the BOLO entry had become inoffensive, it had also become ineffective.

Failure to Make Use of FEC Filings. A key criticism of the IRS has been its use of 501(c)(4) selection criteria that focused on organizations' names or political views instead of direct indicators of campaign involvement to trigger heightened review by IRS personnel. The revised criteria were also criticized for providing ineffective search terms to identify groups that were involved with campaign activities. One available alternative that would have cured both problems would have been for the IRS to make greater use of the FEC filings submitted by groups seeking 501(c)(4) status, since those filings provided direct evidence of campaign activities, but the IRS failed to make effective use of those FEC filings to identify relevant cases.

As explained earlier, the Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA) requires persons involved with campaign activities to file certain periodic reports. Non-candidate organizations, including 501(c)(4) groups, that engage in certain campaign-related spending, are required to file reports disclosing "independent expenditures" on Form 5, and expenditures on "electioneering communications" on Form 9.⁶⁸¹ The FEC told the Subcommittee, however, that it was unaware of the IRS making routine use of those filings to identify 501(c)(4) groups involved with campaign activities.⁶⁸² The FEC also told the Subcommittee that the IRS had never asked the FEC to include Taxpayer Identification Numbers (TINs) or 501(c) status information on its forms, even though that information would have increased the usefulness of those forms in IRS oversight efforts related to tax exempt groups engaged in campaign activities.⁶⁸³ In addition, the FEC told the Subcommittee that it had never been asked to set up any special procedures for the IRS to obtain FECA reports of interest on an automated basis.⁶⁸⁴ In a briefing, the IRS

Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, 2 U.S.C. § 431(17) (2012). told the Subcommittee that while its agents often made use of FEC filings, it had not set up automated procedures to obtain the filings and match them to pending case files, nor had its agents routinely used FEC filings as a screening device to identify 501(c)(4) applications warranting heightened review.⁶⁸⁵

If the IRS were to ask 501(c)(4) applicants and exempt organizations to provide copies of any Form 5, Form 9, or other relevant forms filed with the FEC within a specified period of time, such as within ten days of filing an independent expenditure or electioneering communications report, the IRS would become the recipient of timely information regarding two of the largest categories of campaign spending. Receiving copies of those filings would immediately alert the agency to those campaign-related expenditures, without IRS agents having to conduct any inquiries of its own. If the IRS were to ask the 501(c)(4) organizations submitting copies of those forms to also include their TINs and 501(c) status information, EO agents could easily match the forms to any existing case files. If the IRS were also to establish a bright line rule treating those expenditures as evidence of campaign intervention activities, it would relieve EO agents of any need to perform a facts and circumstances analysis of the expenditures, and enable them to consider the total amount of expenditures when evaluating whether the organization was engaged primarily in social welfare activities.

The failure of the IRS to make efficient use of FEC filings as a screening device deprived EO agents of a useful mechanism to identify 501(c)(4) applications warranting heightened scrutiny due to campaign activities.

H. Addressing the Backlog

After the January 2012 development letters focused media and Congressional attention on IRS treatment of 501(c)(4) applications, senior IRS managers learned of the growing backlog of unresolved cases and the internal confusion and hesitancy about how to resolve them. In April 2012, in an effort to reduce the backlog, the TEGE Commissioner, with the approval of the IRS Deputy Commissioner, sent a task force of EOT specialists from Washington headquarters to the Cincinnati office to tackle the backlog. The team reviewed and categorized the pending cases, which by then had hit a peak of about 320 cases, in what was called a “bucketing” effort. The EOT specialists also conducted training to help the Cincinnati determinations specialists resolve the cases. A year after the special bucketing and training effort, however, the majority of 501(c)(4) cases remained unresolved, demonstrating the ongoing difficulties within the IRS over how to handle the cases.

⁶⁸⁵ 4/30/2013 briefing by the IRS of the Subcommittee.

(1) Backlog Discovered

According to Steven Miller, then IRS Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement, it was in February 2012, that he read the negative press reports and saw the letters from Members of Congress asking about 501(c)(4) organizations being unfairly questioned by the IRS, and asked EO head Lois Lerner to brief him on the issues.⁶⁸⁶ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that it was around then that he learned for the first time that a backlog of advocacy cases was awaiting IRS action, some since 2010, and that the number of cases had climbed to over 300.⁶⁸⁷ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that because the press had referred to “Tea Party” cases, he asked Ms. Lerner and EOT head Holly Paz if the cases were limited to Tea Party applicants, and learned that they instead encompassed “a wide spectrum” of groups.⁶⁸⁸ According to Mr. Miller, he was told the cases involved primarily conservative groups, but some applications had also been filed by liberal groups.⁶⁸⁹

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he tasked Nancy Marks, then a Senior Technical Adviser to Acting TEGE Commissioner Joseph Grant, with taking a close look at the 501(c)(4) applications process for advocacy cases.⁶⁹⁰ Mr. Miller indicated that Ms. Marks put together a team of specialists who travelled to the Cincinnati office on a “fact finding tour.”⁶⁹¹ Around the same time, in March 2012, the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) initiated an audit of the application process for advocacy cases, which also included a visit to the Cincinnati office.⁶⁹²

On April 20, 2012, Determinations head Cindy Thomas sent an email to her staff announcing both upcoming visits:

“Because of the hearings involving advocacy cases in which Steve Miller will need to testify, several folks from TEGE Headquarters will be in Cincinnati next week to take a tour of our operations, review advocacy cases, etc., in order to prep Steve for the hearings. While the folks from D.C. are in Cincinnati, they plan to review all of the advocacy cases. A separate email will be sent regarding these cases.

The following week three representatives from TIGTA ... will be in Cincinnati to take a tour, etc.”⁶⁹³

The email explained that the TIGTA representatives would visit Cincinnati on April 30 and May 1, 2012, to examine the process for screening 501(c) applications and developing cases.⁶⁹⁴ The Washington team led by Ms. Marks visited the Cincinnati office on April 23, 2012, and examined about half of the advocacy cases.⁶⁹⁵

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that Ms. Marks reported to him in early May 2012, and indicated that what she and her team had seen in Cincinnati “wasn’t a pretty sight.”⁶⁹⁶ Mr. Miller said that, among other issues, he learned that Ms. Lerner had changed the wording of the BOLO entries used to identify advocacy cases from using the phrase “Tea Party” to more generic language a year earlier, but that the language had been changed again since then, and TIGTA was looking into the issue.⁶⁹⁷ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he recognized there was a problem with the cases, decided that an effort should be made to accelerate their processing to reduce the backlog, and instituted weekly meetings on the project.⁶⁹⁸

(2) Bucketing Begins

In May 2012, with Mr. Miller’s approval, Joseph Grant, then Acting TEGE Commissioner, ordered a team of EO experts from the Washington, D.C. office, led by Nancy Marks and Sharon Light, to return to the Cincinnati office to “bucket” the pending advocacy cases, meaning divide the 320 cases into categories, and help train the Cincinnati EOD determinations specialists to process the cases in each of the buckets.⁶⁹⁹ In addition, Mr. Miller directed that progress in resolving the cases be reviewed in weekly staff meetings to be attended by himself, Ms. Lerner, Ms. Paz, and Mr. Miller’s chief of staff, Nikole

Flax.⁷⁰⁰ Mr. Miller said that he attended the weekly meetings on a regular basis at first, but then only sporadically.⁷⁰¹

On or around May 14, 2012, a group of eight advocacy experts from Washington, D.C. traveled to the Cincinnati office to bucket all of the pending cases and help train the Cincinnati employees to work them.⁷⁰² They spent the first two days training a team of determinations specialists in the Cincinnati office. Then the Washington and Cincinnati employees worked together to bucket the 320 cases. They used four categories of buckets: Bucket 1 – favorable decision on the application likely; Bucket 2 – minor information needed; Bucket 3 – more development needed; and Bucket 4 – denial of application likely.⁷⁰³

According to one participant in the effort, to categorize the pending cases, each case was reviewed by two different people on the bucketing team, usually one from Washington and one from Cincinnati.⁷⁰⁴ Initially, each reviewer decided how a particular case should be bucketed. If the reviewers agreed, the case was referred to that bucket; if they disagreed, they attempted to reach consensus on the appropriate bucket; if they were unable to reach agreement, Ms. Light made the final decision.⁷⁰⁵ One of the Washington participants, Hilary Goehausen, told the Subcommittee that categorizing the cases was difficult, because under “the facts and circumstances [test,] two people can come to different conclusions” about how a case should be handled.⁷⁰⁶ Ms. Goehausen indicated that, despite the disagreements, the group completed reviewing all of the cases in about three weeks.⁷⁰⁷

(3) Case Resolutions

After the cases were bucketed, they had to be reviewed and resolved. Some of the cases placed in Bucket 1 were immediately approved, including some organizations that had failed to respond to development letters.⁷⁰⁸ Over a dozen other applications were withdrawn. In July 2012, Lois Lerner, EO head, provided an update to Mr. Miller, then Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement.⁷⁰⁹ She indicated that the IRS had begun with 320 advocacy cases pending, including 97 501(c)(3) groups and 223 (c)(4) groups. She indicated in the document that 55 of the applications had been approved, including 51 (c)(4) applications, while 15 applications had been withdrawn; and that “no denials” had been issued other than the revocation of approvals that had been “wrongly” granted to five Emerge organizations the prior year.⁷¹⁰ Her report indicated that 70 of the 320 cases had been resolved within two months.

Resolving many of the 250 remaining advocacy cases took much longer.⁷¹¹ In October 2012, Determinations head Cindy Thomas sent EOT head Holly Paz an email expressing her fear that: “with the pace that is taking place that they’ll be working the bucket 4 cases until they retire (this isn’t intended to be a flip comment, but rather a sincere concern).”⁷¹²

One key issue was whether organizations engaged in lobbying rather than campaign activities should be included in the advocacy category of cases. In February 2013, the advocacy team leader Sharon Light contacted other EO personnel about a particular case which had initially been labeled as an advocacy case; after a flurry of email traffic analyzing the case, it was determined that the case involved lobbying rather than campaign activities and should not be considered an advocacy case.⁷¹³ On March 12, 2013, however, Donna Abner, head of the IRS Quality Assurance Division, wrote: “This is no different than other cases we have seen bucketed that supported or opposed particular legislation. Sorry – I’m confused as to what is and is not bucketed. Will you please clarify?” Ms. Light responded: “There has been confusion about this issue.”⁷¹⁴ Ms. Abner replied that she was satisfied that the case at issue had been adequately analyzed, but was unsure that future cases would be appropriately classified.⁷¹⁵

According to the TIGTA Audit Report, a decision was also made “to refer cases to the Review of Operations Unit for follow-up if there were indications of political campaign intervention but not enough to prevent approval of tax-exempt status.”⁷¹⁶

Senior IRS officials continued to follow the advocacy cases, including Steven Miller after his November 2012 appointment as Acting IRS Commissioner. In February 2013, for example, his Chief of Staff Nikole Flax received a detailed data report on the number of advocacy cases that had come in, how the cases had been bucketed and resolved, and how many remained pending.⁷¹⁷ In May 2013, one year after the special bucketing effort was launched, about 259 advocacy cases from across the political spectrum remained unresolved, some dating back to 2010.⁷¹⁸ That so many cases remained unresolved after the concerted bucketing effort a year earlier offers additional evidence that the cases were difficult to resolve using the facts and circumstances test and more objective standards, bright line rules, and useful guidance were needed.

⁷¹⁴ Id. Ms. Light continued, “Some cases that only involved lobbying got bucketed and worked as advocacy cases because it wasn’t clear from screening that political intervention wasn’t a problem. Cases got identified as ‘advocacy cases’ if they mentioned lobbying and someone felt the lobbying was a sign of political intervention. And sometimes cases that vaguely mentioned ‘advocacy’ got identified because it wasn’t clear on screening whether they were talking about lobbying or political intervention. But when it’s clear that lobbying, not political intervention, is the issue then they don’t fit the criteria.” Id. at 123.

⁷¹⁵ Ms. Abner wrote, “I’m ok with the explanation below that this one particular case did not need to now go through bucketing because the case has been adequately developed to the point where we now know that political intervention is not a problem. However, will this treatment be consistent? If a similar case was received by specialists today and screener noted the ‘political consultant’ issue would it/should it be bucketed? Or, would we only send to bucketing if development uncovered significant or clear political intervention? And, if so, would this be consistent?” Id. at 122.

The balance of applications are for section 501(c)(3) status. To date, 176 applications have been approved (136 of which [are] §501(c)(4) applications). There have been 37 withdrawals, inclusive of both §501(c)(3) and (4) organizations.”) In the same document, Mr. Miller wrote: “Moreover, while it is impossible based on name alone to determine with specificity the political alignment of all organizations, in their totality it is clear that they span the entire political spectrum.” Id.

I. Evaluating Campaign and Social Welfare Activities

During the three-year period from 2010 through 2012, as the IRS struggled with the growing backlog of 501(c)(4) applications raising advocacy issues, many 501(c)(4) groups deepened their involvement in campaign activities. Those activities raised a number of difficult issues for IRS agents charged with using the facts and circumstances test to evaluate the nature and extent of those activities and ensure compliance with the tax code. A brief discussion of some of the campaign-related issues helps explain why IRS agents moved so slowly to resolve the cases, and what impact those issues could have on an organization's tax exempt status.

Increased Campaign Expenditures. As discussed earlier, the IRS reported that “[s]tarting in 2010,” it saw “a significant increase” in the number of section 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) applications from groups “that appeared to be, or planned to be engaged in political campaign activity.”⁷¹⁹ IRS data shows that, from 2008 to 2012, the number of 501(c)(4) applications filed with the IRS more than doubled.⁷²⁰ IRS data also indicates that during the two-year period from 2008 to 2010 alone, the amount of campaign-related expenditures reported by 501(c)(4) groups almost tripled.⁷²¹ Spending data in filings with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) are consistent. They show that, in 2010 and 2012, two years in which federal elections took place, 501(c)(4) tax exempt groups spent millions of dollars on independent expenditures and electioneering communications. An analysis of FEC filings conducted by the Center for Responsive Politics found that, in 2010 alone, conservative and liberal 501(c)(4) groups reported campaign spending that totaled about $126 million.⁷²² Two years later, in 2012, the Center determined that conservative and liberal 501(c)(4) groups reported spending twice as much, totaling nearly $300 million.⁷²³

Press reports of 501(c)(4) organizations sponsoring election advertisements, bankrolling get-out-the-vote efforts, or making large contributions to groups engaged in campaign activities also increased. Media stories included descriptions of campaign activities and expenditures by liberal 501(c)(4) groups such as the League of

Issue Ads Versus Campaign Ads. One key issue often confronting IRS agents handling 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups

⁷²⁴ According to the Center for Responsive Politics, the League of Conservation Voters (LCV), which works to elect pro-environment candidates, was the largest spending, Democratic leaning 501(c)(4) group in the 2012 election cycle. ⁷²⁹ Crossroads Grassroots Policy Strategies (Crossroads GPS) is a Republican-leaning 501(c)(4) group affiliated with American Crossroads, a 527 political organization. See Crossroads GPS 2011 Form 990, Schedule R, at 1, Part II. According to the Center for Responsive Politics, in 2012, Crossroads GPS spent the largest amount on political activity of any 501(c)(4) group, reporting nearly $71 million in political expenditures. involved with campaign activities was distinguishing between spending on issue advocacy versus campaign activities. The IRS required its agents to use the facts and circumstances test to determine, for example, whether a broadcast advertisement sponsored by a 501(c)(4) organization should be treated as a campaign or social welfare activity.⁷³⁰ The IRS did not allow its agents to rely on the Federal Campaign Finance Act (FECA) provision which treated any ad that is broadcast on radio or television with 30 days of a primary or 60 days of an election, and mentions a candidate to the electorate, as an “electioneering communication.”⁷³¹ Instead, the IRS required its agents to consider all of the facts and circumstances surrounding the advertisement, including its timing, wording, broadcast medium, audience, and context.⁷³²

One of the most difficult aspects of the required analysis involved the ad’s wording. If the ad used words that were campaign related, such as “vote for,” “elect,” or “defeat,” an IRS agent would likely treat it as evidence of a campaign activity. For example, a television ad aired by the League of Conservation Voters in October 2012, within a month of an election, urged viewers to “Help us defeat [a Republican candidate] and the Flat Earth Five.”⁷³³ But other ads aired by 501(c)(4) groups did not explicitly call for the election or defeat of a candidate, while still conveying a message about an individual running for office. For example, in September 2012, Patriot Majority USA aired an ad that named a Republican Congressman and, without using the words “defeat” or “vote against,” discussed his position on Medicare in very negative terms, ending with the statement: “He’s for them. Not us.”⁷³⁴ It is possible that an IRS agent would view the wording of that ad as representative of issue advocacy, in particular if Medicare legislation were under consideration in the House or a vote took place in the House on a Medicare issue around the time the ad aired. But another IRS agent might treat it as a campaign ad due to its negative tone and its being broadcast within two months of an upcoming election. Either decision would be supportable under current IRS practice. By requiring consideration of all material factors when evaluating an ad, the facts and circumstances test required IRS agents to make judgments based upon a subjective analysis of a collection of various issues related to the advertisement, rather than a dispassionate analysis of objective facts not open to dispute.

Inconsistent Tax and FEC Spending Totals. A second issue confronting IRS agents involved inconsistent spending reports. On its 990 tax return for 2010, Women's Voices Women Vote Action Fund (WVWVAF), a Democratic-leaning group, checked a box indicating that it did not engage in any "direct or indirect political campaign activities," but reported on filings with the FEC for 2010, that it had spent nearly $880,000 on electioneering communications and nearly $250,000 on independent expenditures.⁷³⁵ When questioned about the discrepancy, WVWVAF reported it had made an inadvertent error and would amend its 2010 tax return, which it did.⁷³⁶ In its amended 990 tax return for 2010, WVWVAF changed its "no" response to a "yes" on political campaign activities; added a Schedule C for "Political Campaign and Lobbying Activities;" and reported about $250,000 in political expenditures, representing about 9% of its total reported expenses for the year of $2.73 million.

Assuming WVWVAF, in fact, made an inadvertent mistake on its tax return, a second issue is why WVWVAF then reported substantially less campaign related spending on its tax return – $250,000 – compared to its FEC filings – $1.1 million. A related issue is whether the IRS agent reviewing the 990 tax return would, as a standard practice, compare the group's spending totals on its tax return versus those on its FEC filings and, if so, ask about the difference. Still another issue is how the agent will treat the information provided on the FEC filings. If the IRS had a bright line rule requiring agents to treat electioneering communications and independent expenditures as campaign spending, then the IRS, 501(c)(4) group, and tax exempt community would know how the IRS would analyze the facts. Instead, under the facts and circumstances test, the IRS, the group, and the tax exempt community cannot be sure how the group's expenditures will be treated.

In addition, if the IRS were to determine that all of WVWVAF's FEC reported spending, totaling about $1.1 million, must be treated as campaign activity, then that campaign spending would represent about 41% of the group's total spending for 2010.⁷³⁷ Since the IRS does not have a clear percentage test in place and instead relies on the facts and circumstances test to determine when a group is primarily engaged in social welfare activities, it is unclear whether the IRS would treat the 41% figure as evidence of excessive campaign activity, thereby disqualifying the group for a tax exemption. It is also easy to see why an IRS agent might delay resolving these issues pending receipt of written guidance about how to proceed.

This issue is not confined to WVWVAF. The American Action Network, a Republican- leaning organization, reported on its 990 tax return for 2010, that it had spent a total of about $25.7 million during the year, of which $5.5 million, or about 21%, was spent on political campaign activities.⁷³⁸ On its FEC filings for 2010, however, American Action Network reported spending about $18.9 million on electioneering communications and independent expenditures, which represented about 73% of its total expenditures for the year.⁷³⁹ Again, the reasons for the disparate spending totals and how the IRS would treat them are unclear. In addition, under the facts and circumstances test, it is unclear whether the IRS would view American Action Network's campaign spending as representing 21% or 73% of its total expenditures for the year, and whether it would view its campaign activities as having become the group's primary activity, in violation of its tax exempt status.

The IRS has reported that, beginning in 2010, "[m]any applications included what appeared to be incomplete or inconsistent information," with some organizations indicating that they "did not plan to conduct political campaign activity, but elsewhere described activities that appeared in fact to be such activity."⁷⁴⁰ The IRS attributed the problem in part to organizations not understanding "what activities would constitute political campaign intervention under the tax law."⁷⁴¹ The IRS also explained that the discrepancies required its agents to "gather additional information,"⁷⁴² which slowed the case resolution process.

Vague Spending Explanations. A third issue confronting the IRS agents involved how to categorize particular group expenditures. The IRS has reported that the applications it began to receive in 2010, "were in many cases vague as to the activities the applicants planned to conduct."⁷⁴³ Those activities were described not only on the groups' 1024 application forms, but also on their 990 tax returns, at times using broad or vague terms that made it difficult for IRS agents to determine whether the related spending should be treated as evidence of campaign or social welfare activities.

For example, Crossroads GPS reported on its 2010 tax return that it compensated its largest independent contractor, Crossroads Media, $18.3 million for “media services.”⁷⁴⁴ In another section of the tax return, Crossroads GPS listed expenses of $8.2 million spent on “grassroots issue advocacy,” without explaining what that phrase covered, who received the funds, or how those funds related to its contractor expenditures.⁷⁴⁵ Crossroads GPS also reported on its 2010 tax return that it engaged in political campaign activities, and spent about $15.9 million on campaign expenditures from June 2010 to June 2011, representing about 37% of its total expenses for that time period.⁷⁴⁶ Crossroads GPS reported even larger figures two years later. On its 2012 tax return, Crossroads GPS reported paying about $118.7 million for “media services” to Crossroads Media, and $74.5 million for “grassroots issue advocacy.”⁷⁴⁷ Crossroads GPS also reported spending a total of over $74 million on campaign expenditures, or about 39% of its total expenses of $189 million for the covered time period.⁷⁴⁸ Because IRS agents must operate under the facts and circumstances test with few bright line rules, they would have to identify and analyze each of the expenditures included within the terms, “media services” and “grassroots issue advocacy,” and make case-by-case determinations about what qualified as campaign versus social welfare spending.

Another example involved VoteVets Action Fund, which reported on its 990 tax return for 2010, that it had engaged in political campaign activities, and spent about $3.5 million on those activities, representing about 48% of its total expenses of $7.3 million for the year.⁷⁴⁹ Of the $3.5 million spent on political campaign activities, VoteVets Action Fund indicated it had contributed $250,000 to Patriot Majority PAC, a Super PAC, for “voter education,” and a total of $110,000 to three other 501(c)(4) groups, including in one instance $45,000 to WWAF for “general support.”⁷⁵⁰ In addition, it spent about $1.1 million on “communications/media” and about $855,000 on “consulting.”⁷⁵¹ An IRS agent would have to determine what activities were included within the terms, “communications/media,” “consulting,” and “general support,” how to categorize each type of expenditure, and then determine how to evaluate the 48% total. Again, it is easy to see why an IRS agent might want guidance on how to proceed.

Categorizing Grants and Donations. A fourth issue confronting the IRS involved how to categorize “grants” and “donations.” In recent years, many 501(c)(4) organizations made large grants or donations to other nonprofit groups, raising a host of difficult questions about whether the funds were being used on campaign activities. For example, in 2010, according to its 990 tax return, Patriot Majority USA, a Democratic-leaning group, spent the majority of its revenue on grants to ten 501(c)(4) groups and one 527 political organization, describing the funds as spent on “general support for grassroots advocacy,” “general support for direct advocacy,” or “general support for nonpartisan voter turnout.”⁷⁵² Its tax return contained no information about how the recipients actually used the funds, including whether they were ultimately spent on campaign activities. In its 2012 tax return, Crossroads GPS reported providing over $35 million in grants to three 501(c)(3) organizations, five 501(c)(4) organizations and two 501(c)(6) organizations, all for “social welfare purposes.”⁷⁵³ Under the facts and circumstances test with few bright line rules in place, an IRS agent required to evaluate these tax returns would have to analyze each grant, determine how far to go in finding out how the recipient used the funds that were provided, decide whether to categorize the grants as campaign spending, and analyze how that spending would affect an analysis of the group’s primary activity.

In California, the settlement of a recent case illustrated how some 501(c)(4) groups have functioned as intermediaries to transfer funds from undisclosed donors to campaign organizations. The case involved two Arizona 501(c)(4) groups, the Center to Protect Patient Rights and Americans for Responsible Leadership, which settled with the California Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC) and the California State Attorney General’s office in 2013.⁷⁵⁴ The Center to Protect Patient Rights was alleged to have accepted a total of $15 million in contributions from undisclosed donors, and then transferred the funds to intermediary groups – either Americans for Responsible Leadership or a group called the American Future Fund – each of which, in turn, donated the funds to political action committees engaged in campaign activities.⁷⁵⁵ Only the immediate contributor – Americans for ⁷⁵² Of $5.2 million in total revenue, Patriot Majority USA spent about $2.9 million on grants. See 2010 Patriot Majority USA Form 990, at 1, 2, Part I, line 13; at 17, Schedule I, Part II.

Responsible Leadership or American Future Fund – was listed as a PAC contributor; in the words of the FPPC, the groups’ intermediary roles deprived “the public of the initial source of the contribution[s].”⁷⁵⁶ Under the terms of the settlement, the Center to Protect Patient Rights and Americans for Responsible Leadership paid fines totaling $1 million, but did not have to disclose the original donors. California has since enacted legislation to prevent similar situations in the future.⁷⁵⁷

Discontinuities. Still another issue involved how the IRS treated organizations that changed their names or employer identification numbers over time. For example, since its inception, Patriot Majority USA, a Democratic leaning group, has gone through five different iterations.⁷⁵⁸ It started out, in 2006, as the Midwest Alliance for Better Government, and changed its name a year later, in 2007, to Patriot Majority For a Stronger America, while operating under the same employer identification number, mission statement, and president, Craig Varoga.⁷⁵⁹ In 2008, Mr. Varoga terminated Patriot Majority for a Stronger America, and formed a new 501(c)(4) group, the American Alliance for Economic Development, with a new employer identification number but located in the same office as the previous organization.⁷⁶⁰ Two years later, in 2010, he formed Patriot Majority USA, using the same employer identification number as the American Alliance for Economic Development.⁷⁶¹ In 2011, Patriot Majority USA liquidated and reincorporated under the same name, changing its address and employer identification number.⁷⁶² Clearly, all five organizations were successors to each other, but the details were and are complex.⁷⁶³ Since these types of changes are not unusual among nonprofits, it illustrates the importance of the IRS having clear standards and bright line rules about how to track and analyze reorganizations, asset transfers, activities and expenditures.

⁷⁵⁹ Compare 2006 Midwest Alliance for Better Government Form 990 (initial return), with 2007 Patriot Majority for a Stronger America Form 990 (name change) (each listing the group’s purpose as “education of the public regarding the elimination of corruption in government.”)

These examples of issues that have recently confronted IRS agents assigned to 501(c)(4) advocacy cases illustrate some of the challenges they faced. They also help explain why so many cases were delayed while IRS agents awaited guidance from more senior managers on how to process the applications for tax exempt status.

J. Analysis

The Subcommittee investigation into how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by organizations engaged in campaign activity exposed extensive IRS mismanagement. The litany of management failures included delayed disposition of many applications for as long as three years; unauthorized and troubling changes in the BOLO screening criteria; use of inappropriate screening criteria; use of an inappropriate descriptor for the category of cases being subjected to heightened scrutiny; yearly turnover in the key case coordinator; slow ⁷⁶² See 2011 Patriot Majority USA Form 990-EZ; 2011 Patriot Majority USA Form 990; and 2011 Patriot Majority USA Form 1024 application. Two organizations named Patriot Majority USA filed 2011 tax returns as tax exempt organizations, one using the old employer identification number and one using a new number, since both were in operation that year. Both organizations listed the same mailing address, officers, and records custodian. The predecessor Patriot Majority USA filed a Form 990-EZ for the time period January 1-April 26, 2011, indicating that the group had terminated, liquidated its assets and made a grant of about $17,000 to the successor Patriot Majority USA. The successor Patriot Majority USA filed a Form 990 for the time period March 17-December 31, 2011, designated as an initial return. Its 2011 Form 990 listed the predecessor Patriot Majority USA as a “related tax-exempt group.” Also in 2011, the successor Patriot Majority USA filed articles of incorporation in the District of Columbia, and submitted a form 1024 application to the IRS for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status, using the new employer identification number and a new address. Its application explained the group’s history as follows: “Patriot Majority USA, Inc. (PMUSA) is a successor organization to the American Alliance for Economic Development, Inc. ... which was incorporated on April 29, 2008, received its recognition of tax-exempt status under section 501(c)(4) of the Code on May 12, 2009. AAED wound down its affairs, distributed its assets in accordance with section 501(c)(4), and dissolved as of January 14, 2011. PMUSA was originally started as an unincorporated nonprofit association and was the recipient of AAED’s remaining assets. It was then incorporated in March 2011 to continue the mission of AAED, with substantially similar activities and goals.” See 2011 Patriot Majority USA Form 990-E-Z at 1, letters A-D; at 2, Part IV; at 3, Part V, lines 36, 42a; Schedule N; 2011 Patriot Majority form 990 at 1, letters A-D; at 6, Part VI, Section C, line 20; at 7, Part VII; Schedule R, at 1, Part II; at 3, Part V, line 2; 2011 Patriot Majority USA form 1024, at 1, Part I; at 3, Part II, line 4; attached Articles of Incorporation of Patriot Majority USA, Inc.

approval of development letters; inclusion of inappropriate, intrusive, or burdensome questions in some development letters; poor coordination between IRS personnel in Cincinnati and senior managers and legal counsel in Washington, D.C.; delayed casework pending the resolution of two test cases that remained unresolved for at least three years; confusion over the standards for identifying campaign activities and determining primary activities; inadequate guidance for IRS personnel confronting complex and sensitive issues involving issue advocacy and campaign intervention; failure to finalize additional written guidance despite nearly a year of work; inadequate training on how to apply the facts and circumstances test; failure to resolve the growing backlog of advocacy cases; failure to disclose the nature and extent of the management problems in response to Congressional inquiries; and failure to develop regulations that faithfully reflected the statutory requirement that 501(c)(4) groups engage “exclusively” in social welfare activities. A number of these same management failures are described in the audit report issued by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA).

The Subcommittee investigation also found evidence that the IRS management failures affected both conservative and liberal applicants for tax exempt status. Years-long delays, intrusive questions, and poorly coordinated reviews by IRS personnel in Cincinnati and Washington, D.C. impeded the disposition of 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups across the political spectrum, including conservative-leaning groups associated with the Tea Party, 9/12, and Patriot organizations, and liberal-leaning groups associated with ACORN, Occupy, Emerge America, and progressive organizations.

The Subcommittee investigation found no evidence that political bias influenced the decisions made by IRS personnel processing 501(c)(4) applications. A review of nearly 800,000 pages of documents and nearly two dozen interviews produced no evidence of political bias influencing IRS decisionmaking about how to process 501(c)(4) applications filed by conservative organizations, and no evidence that the IRS singled out conservative groups for harsher treatment than other groups. In fact, key IRS personnel involved with processing 501(c)(4) applications turned out to be registered Republicans or politically aligned with the Tea Party, with no apparent animus against conservative groups. TIGTA reached the same conclusion about the lack of political bias at the IRS in processing 501(c)(4) applications, as indicated in more detail below.

Finally, the Subcommittee investigation determined that one of the key contributors to the IRS management failures was the agency’s reliance on the facts and circumstances test to identify campaign activities and determine whether a 501(c)(4) group was engaged primarily in social welfare activities. Because that test was fact-intensive and led to case-by-case determinations, and because the IRS did not provide its agents with objective standards or bright line rules on how to handle common fact patterns, IRS agents were often forced to exercise discretion over how to develop and evaluate the facts of a case and apply the law. Delays were common as some IRS agents or their supervisors hesitated over how to proceed and sought guidance to ensure they were acting appropriately. In other instances, IRS agents made decisions on pending applications that, at times, produced inconsistent results, most easily seen in the cases involving Emerge America affiliates, which sought to help Democratic women candidates run for office. In 2011, different IRS agents approved tax exempt status for five Emerge organizations, and denied tax exempt status for three Emerge organizations, exposing the confusion and subjective decisionmaking over how to process those cases; in 2012, the IRS revoked the tax exempt status of the five groups previously approved. The evidence indicates that the facts and circumstances test, when applied to 501(c)(4) applications, led to lengthy delays, intrusive questions, subjective analysis regarding the relative importance of various factors, and inconsistent results. Given the sensitivities surrounding IRS treatment of politically active groups, the ongoing management problems, and the public distrust of IRS actions in this area, the evidence indicates that the facts and circumstances test should be replaced with more objective standards and bright line rules to produce more predictable and trustworthy results.

IV. TIGTA AUDIT

The audit conducted by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) was initiated in March 2012, in the midst of negative media reports about IRS treatment of 501(c)(4) applications filed by organizations engaged in campaign activity, in particular groups aligned with the Tea Party. TIGTA's Office of Audit undertook the audit at the request of the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. The work was conducted over the following year, and a final audit report was issued in May 2013.

The official TIGTA audit engagement letter stated that the audit's "overall objective" was to "assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function's identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues." It also stated: "Several accusations of inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups have been made." Despite being charged with examining the "consistency" of the IRS' actions, TIGTA auditors examined how the IRS handled applications filed by conservative groups, but did not perform any comparative analysis of how the IRS handled applications filed by liberal groups. In response to later media inquiries about why information about liberal groups was excluded, a TIGTA spokeswoman initially said, "we were asked to narrowly focus on Tea Party organizations," but later indicated she had been given incorrect information.

During the audit, TIGTA auditors focused on actions taken by IRS screeners to identify applications filed by groups whose names or application materials contained the phrases, "Tea Party," "9-12," or "Patriot," noting that the selection criteria focused on the groups' names or political views, rather than on their participation in campaign activities. The TIGTA auditors also focused on a single entry in a broader "Be-on-the-Lookout" (BOLO) list whose wording changed over time, moving from language which urged IRS personnel to identify applications filed by groups affiliated with the "Tea Party movement," to language urging them to identify applications containing "indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention." While the IRS admitted the earlier selection criteria were inappropriate, IRS personnel also attempted to demonstrate the criteria were not the result of political bias, by showing TIGTA that the IRS used similar BOLO listings for liberal groups, with screening criteria using the phrases "Progressive," "ACORN," and "Occupy" to identify applications of interest. Despite the IRS' repeatedly drawing attention to those BOLO entries, the TIGTA auditors failed to examine either how the IRS used those BOLO entries or how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups in comparison to applications filed by conservative groups.

In February 2013, after receiving an allegation that an IRS email had directed IRS employees to “target” Tea Party groups, the Assistant Inspector General responsible for exempt organization issues, Gregory Kutz, asked the TIGTA Office of Investigations to conduct an email search of certain IRS employees. The Office of Investigations then searched over 2,200 emails and other documents from the email accounts of five IRS employees involved with processing 501(c)(4) applications. After conducting a thorough review, the Office of Investigations concluded that the 2,200 IRS emails and other documents contained “no indication” that the pulling of Tea Party applications for additional scrutiny by IRS personnel was “politically motivated,” advising that the IRS actions were instead the result of inadequate guidance on how to process them. Even though that finding by the TIGTA Office of Investigations analysis directly addressed the central issue TIGTA was auditing, whether there was political bias at the IRS, the documentary analysis performed by the Office of Investigations was not included in TIGTA’s audit report.

In February 2013, the audit team submitted a draft audit report to the TIGTA Chief Counsel and Office of Audit head. The Chief Counsel suggested removing the word “targeted” from the report, because “targeted has a connotation of improper motivation that does not seem to be supported by the information presented in the audit report.” The audit team removed the word from the report except when describing the allegations that led to the audit. Later that month, TIGTA provided a draft of the report to the IRS.

As the release date for the TIGTA audit report neared, Acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller decided to try to preempt news coverage of the negative audit results by having the head of the Exempt Organizations division, Lois Lerner, disclose the audit before it was released and apologize for the agency’s conduct during a conference she was scheduled to address. On May 10, 2013, at the Acting IRS Commissioner’s direction and in response to a planted question, Ms. Lerner apologized for the IRS’ having used “Tea Party” to identify 501(c)(4) applications subjected to heightened review. Her apology triggered a public firestorm centered on the allegation that the IRS had shown political bias against conservative groups seeking tax exempt status. The Acting IRS Commissioner and other senior IRS officials were required to resign.

The apology generated intense interest in the TIGTA audit report which was released the following week, on May 14, 2013. The audit report found that the IRS had used “inappropriate criteria” to flag 501(c)(4) applications for heightened review, and “ineffective management” had caused delays and subjected applicants to burdensome information requests. TIGTA Inspector General Russell George was asked to testify at multiple Congressional hearings about the audit findings. When pressed about whether the IRS had unfairly targeted conservative groups, Mr. George testified that TIGTA had found no sign of political bias at the IRS, but offered as evidence only the denials of the IRS officials involved. He made no mention of the email review conducted by the TIGTA Office of Investigations or its conclusion that the documents contained “no indication” that the IRS’ actions were “politically motivated,” even though that investigative finding directly addressed the issue of political bias at the IRS. Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he did not mention the Office of Investigations’ finding, because no one on his staff had told him about it. On June 6, 2014, Mr. George wrote in a letter to the Subcommittee that the TIGTA audit had “found no evidence of political bias,” also stating “it is important to note that the matter is being further reviewed.”

On May 21, 2013, the night before the third Congressional hearing at which the Inspector General testified about the audit, the TIGTA Chief Counsel decided to review the IRS BOLOs before providing copies to Congress. During his review, he saw, for the first time, BOLO entries naming two liberal groups, ACORN and Occupy. He promptly informed Inspector General George and Assistant Inspector General Kutz, both of whom told the Subcommittee they had previously been unaware of any BOLO listings for liberal groups, even though the IRS had provided copies and repeatedly informed the TIGTA audit team about them. Even after learning about them, the senior TIGTA officials remained silent for weeks about the BOLO entries for liberal groups, and provided incomplete and inaccurate testimony about them at Congressional hearings. When the BOLO listings for liberal groups were finally disclosed by Members of Congress and the media, senior TIGTA officials insisted that the IRS had not disclosed those listings during the TIGTA audit, despite ample evidence to the contrary.

During their Subcommittee interviews, Mr. George and Mr. Kutz indicated they had since reconsidered how the TIGTA audit report treated 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups. Mr. George told the Subcommittee that the audit report should have acknowledged the existence of the other BOLO entries and the auditors should have looked into the other groups; Mr. Kutz indicated TIGTA potentially should have included the Progressive, ACORN, and Occupy BOLO listings in its analysis, although he thought it might have delayed completion of the audit for another year. TIGTA has since initiated an audit into how those and other BOLO entries were used, but has put that audit on hold pending other law enforcement investigative efforts related to Lois Lerner and the IRS.

A. TIGTA In General

The office of the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA), first established in 1999, is charged with overseeing the IRS.⁷⁶⁴ TIGTA's stated mission is to "[p]rovide quality professional audit, investigative, and inspections and evaluations services that promote integrity, economy, and efficiency in the administration of the Nation's tax system."⁷⁶⁵ While the TIGTA office is organizationally part of the U.S. Department of the Treasury, the TIGTA Inspector General has authority to act independently in its audits.⁷⁶⁶

The current TIGTA Inspector General is J. Russell George, who has been in office since November 2004.⁷⁶⁷ Mr. George oversees a staff of about 960 employees, including auditors, investigators, attorneys, and support staff.⁷⁶⁸ Two key TIGTA subdivisions are the Office of Audit and the Office of Investigations.⁷⁶⁹ The Office of Audit is charged with conducting "performance and financial audits of IRS programs, operations, and activities" to identify "opportunities to improve the administration of the nation's tax laws," while the Office of Investigations is charged with conducting investigations to combat "fraud, waste, abuse and mismanagement" in IRS activities as well as attempts to "corrupt or threaten" IRS personnel.⁷⁷⁰

During the three-year period reviewed by this Report, 2010 to 2013, the Office of Audit was led first by Deputy Inspector General for Audit Michael Phillips and then, starting in June 2012, by Deputy Inspector General for Audit Michael McKenney. Within the office, five Assistant Inspectors General oversaw various aspects of the IRS, including an Assistant Inspector General for Audit, Management Services, and Exempt Organizations, a position which Gregory Kutz assumed in 2012.⁷⁷¹ The Office of Investigations was led by Deputy Inspector General for Investigations Timothy Camus.⁷⁷² A third Deputy Inspector General in charge of Inspections and Evaluations was David

TIGTA Audit Plans. Each year, the TIGTA Office of Audit develops and publishes an Annual Audit Plan.⁷⁷⁴ As part of that plan, TIGTA identifies major management and performance challenges confronting the IRS, and develops audits to focus on those concerns.⁷⁷⁵ In addition, TIGTA performs audits mandated by statute or regulation, as well as audits requested by Congress, the IRS, or the IRS Oversight Board.⁷⁷⁶ TIGTA uses the Annual Audit Plan as a guide, but may modify its audit plans in response to staffing needs or unforeseen risk areas that require immediate attention.⁷⁷⁷ In recent years, TIGTA has allocated roughly 10% of its staff days to suggested audits, 14% to mandatory audits, and the remaining 76% to risk-based audits.⁷⁷⁸

B. Requesting the Audit

The TIGTA audit of how the IRS processed 501(c)(4) applications filed by groups associated with the Tea Party was initiated at the request of the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight and Government Reform (OGR). On March 8, 2012, three senior TIGTA officials, Matthew Sutphen, Counselor to the Inspector General, Nancy Nakamura, Assistant Inspector General for Audit, Management Services, and Exempt Organizations, and Troy Paterson, an Audit Director in the TIGTA Office of Audit, traveled to Capitol Hill and met with OGR staff.⁷⁷⁹ The Committee staff expressed concern “that the IRS is biased in how it is processing 501(c)(4) applications from Tea Parties versus other organizations.”⁷⁸⁰ OGR staff highlighted, in particular, concerns that the IRS was targeting Tea Party organizations by asking inappropriate, burdensome, and intrusive questions.⁷⁸¹

After the March 8, 2012 meeting, TIGTA personnel in the Office of Audit began looking into the concerns raised by the OGR Committee. A June 2012 letter signed by OGR Committee Chairman Darrell Issa and Subcommittee Chairman Jim Jordan acknowledged those inquiries at the time and described them as a result of the March meeting.⁷⁸² A letter by the TIGTA Inspector General in response noted: “As stated in your letter, after our meeting with the Committee staff, our Office of Audit recently began work on this issue.”⁷⁸³ The TIGTA audit report also stated: “TIGTA initiated this audit based on concerns expressed by members of Congress,”⁷⁸⁴ without mentioning OGR Committee Chairman Issa or Subcommittee Chairman Jordan. At another point, the audit report stated TIGTA had initiated the audit “based on concerns expressed by Congress and reported in the media regarding the IRS’s treatment of organizations applying for tax-exempt status.”⁷⁸⁵ In testimony before that Committee, TIGTA Inspector General George testified that the audit was initiated as a result of Chairman Issa’s concerns.⁷⁸⁶

Although the OGR Committee allegations appear to have been the primary motivator for the TIGTA audit, the Landmark Legal Foundation also asked TIGTA to look into the allegations that Tea Party groups were being unfairly targeted.⁷⁸⁷ According to TIGTA, its decision to initiate the audit was also influenced by negative media reports on the IRS' handling of Tea Party applications.⁷⁸⁸ TIGTA told the Subcommittee that none of the Tea Party groups themselves requested an audit of the IRS.⁷⁸⁹

In addition to inducing the TIGTA audit, OGR Committee staff apparently asked the TIGTA audit team to provide regular briefings about the status of its work, but TIGTA told the Subcommittee that it declined to provide those briefings. As the director of the TIGTA 501(c) audit, Troy Paterson, noted in an email to his supervisor, Russell Martin:

"Hmm ... I've never provided regular updates on audits where we have not issued a report. Are we allowed to say what we are finding to outside stakeholders, such as staffers, without issuing a report? I've never heard of us doing that before. From our previous meeting with Mr. Hixon and other staffers, I'm certain the first question in the meeting will be 'Have you found any indications that the IRS is targeting Tea Party groups?' If we are not prepared to provide an answer to that question without issuing a report, I think we should limit the request to providing a briefing on the scope of our review and providing a copy of the final report."⁷⁹⁰

Mr. Paterson told the Subcommittee that TIGTA decided not to provide ongoing briefings to the OGR Committee staff on the audit work, but to wait until the audit was complete and a report prepared.⁷⁹¹ When asked about a TIGTA audit log entry stating: "Office of Audit agreed to brief the Government Oversight Sub-committee by September 2012,⁷⁹² Mr. Paterson stated that the proposed briefing did not occur.⁷⁹³

C. Conducting the Audit

Troy Paterson, one of three senior directors in the Office of Audit's division of Audit, Management Services, and Exempt Organizations, was given responsibility for heading up the 501(c) audit effort.⁷⁹⁴ He asked four TIGTA employees to conduct the audit, Thomas Seidell who served as the "Audit Manager"; Cheryl Medina who served as the "Lead Auditor"; and Michael McGovern and Evan Close who served as the "Auditors."⁷⁹⁵

According to Mr. Paterson, the TIGTA auditors began by conducting general research into 501(c)(4) issues, and then focused on the allegations of unfair treatment of Tea Party groups, which had been made by the OGR Committee and were also the subject of ongoing media reports.⁷⁹⁶ On March 19, 2012, in one of the earliest emails TIGTA produced to the Subcommittee, Mr. Paterson circulated a report to his team and recommended their reading it for background, with the following explanation:

"Proving that there is nothing new under the sun, here is a March 2000 report from the Joint Committee on Taxation regarding allegations that the IRS was biased when reviewing applications and conducting examinations of politically active organizations that were tax-exempt or applying to be tax-exempt. Sound familiar? I haven't read this yet, but I'm thinking we might be able to glean some bits of wisdom from an investigation that has already been down the path we are heading."⁷⁹⁷

The report circulated by Mr. Paterson described an extensive investigation by the Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) into allegations of "politically motivated treatment" of 501(c) applications by the IRS; after an examination that included reviews of organizations across the political spectrum, the JCT found “no credible evidence” of political bias at the IRS.⁷⁹⁸

On March 29, 2012, Ms. Medina sent Mr. Paterson and Mr. Seidell a press article noting that, while conservatives were denouncing the IRS for targeting Tea Party organizations, progressive groups were complaining about similar experiences. The article stated in part:

“Conservative activists and some Republican lawmakers are up in arms about what they describe as the Internal Revenue Service conducting a partisan and ideologically driven campaign against tea party groups around the country. They claim that progressive organizations are not experiencing the same level of scrutiny. However, some progressive groups say they have had similar experiences with the IRS, and at least one expert dismisses the notion that the government is engaged in an ideological witch hunt.”⁷⁹⁹

Ms. Medina commented: “Here is the first article I’ve seen that actually compares letters from the IRS to both conservative and progressive groups – letters ask similar questions.”⁸⁰⁰ This email indicates that, from the inception of the audit, the TIGTA audit team was aware that a factual question at issue was whether liberal groups had experienced the same treatment as conservative groups and that at least some evidence suggested they had.

(1) Determining the Audit Focus

Mr. Paterson told the Subcommittee that he originally recommended conducting two audits, one looking at how the IRS managed the 501(c)(4) application process and the other looking at how the IRS monitored tax exempt groups engaged in campaign activity, but was given approval for only the audit of the application process.⁸⁰¹ On March 22, 2012, Mr. Paterson sent the following email to his supervisor, Russell Martin:

“Nancy [Nakamura] and I were up on the hill about a week and a half ago to discuss concerns one of the House Ways and Means subcommittees had with the way the IRS is processing requests from tax exemption from potential section 501(c)(4) organizations related to the Tea Party. Basically, the staffers we met with allege that the IRS has been sitting on requests for a long time and, during an election year, asking a massive amount of unreasonable questions before deciding on whether to grant tax exemption to Tea Party-related groups. At the same time, the IRS is getting a lot of heat from the Democrat side who allege that the IRS is not cracking down hard enough on organizations funneling money to super PACS that are masquerading as tax-exempt social welfare organizations (section 501(c)(4) organizations). In response, we've decided to look at both sides of it (how the IRS is processing applications for tax exemption by potential 501(c)(4) organizations and how the IRS is overseeing 501(c)(4) organizations that are already in business and filing information returns).”⁸⁰²

The TIGTA Audit Plan for Fiscal Year 2013 included an entry indicating that TIGTA planned to conduct both audits.⁸⁰³ According to Mr. Paterson, however, due to resource constraints and concern that the audit scope would be too large if the issues were combined, Nancy Nakamura, then Assistant Inspector General for Audit, Management Services, and Exempt Organizations, actually approved only the audit focusing on the application process.⁸⁰⁴ TIGTA's subsequent “engagement letter” providing official internal notice of the audit, its scope, and what the auditors hoped to accomplish, stated in part:

“Our overall objective is to assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function's identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues. ... Several accusations of inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups have been made.”⁸⁰⁵

After the audit report was released more than a year later, in May 2013, media questions arose regarding the scope of the audit, which examined only 501(c)(4) organizations associated with the Tea Party and did not consider 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups, despite information indicating that some liberal groups may have experienced the same treatment as some conservative organizations.

As part of TIGTA's effort to respond to those media questions, on June 25, 2013, TIGTA's Director of Communications, Karen Kraushaar and her staff sent emails to some reporters stating that "TIGTA was asked to narrowly focus on Tea Party organizations."⁸⁰⁶ When pressed by a Washington Post reporter to explain who asked TIGTA to focus narrowly on Tea Party organizations, Ms. Kraushaar responded by email that her statement had been based on "erroneous information."⁸⁰⁷ Ms. Kraushaar told the Subcommittee that she had made her original statement after asking the TIGTA auditors how to respond to a question concerning the scope of the audit, and the auditors told her they had been asked to look at Tea Party organizations and the delays those groups encountered.⁸⁰⁸ Ms. Kraushaar told Subcommittee that, in hindsight, the information she received from the auditors was not erroneous but "imprecise."⁸⁰⁹ Ms. Kraushaar stated that when she said "narrowly," she meant "intensively," and that the word "narrowly" had been misconstrued, adding that she had not intended for "narrowly" to be interpreted as "exclusively."⁸¹⁰ On July 18, 2013, at a Congressional hearing, TIGTA Inspector General Russell George testified that Ms. Kraushaar's original statement had been "incorrect" and that she "misspoke."⁸¹¹

(2) Initiating the Audit

On March 29, 2012, Mr. Paterson sent an email to the IRS informing it of TIGTA's plan to audit the application process. The email stated that the audit would examine "the IRS's process for reviewing applications for tax exemption by potential section 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations."⁸¹² Holly Paz, who was by then head of the Exempt Organization's Rulings and Agreements Unit, described herself as the "point person" at the IRS for the TIGTA audit, with responsibility to provide TIGTA with the documents and information it requested.⁸¹³

On May 1, 2012, three TIGTA auditors, Thomas Seidell, Cheryl Medina, and Michael McGovern, began the 501(c) audit by conducting what they described as a "walkthrough" of the Cincinnati IRS office to better understand the process by which the IRS reviews 501(c) applications for tax exempt status.⁸¹⁴ According to Mr. Seidell, as part of the site visit to the Cincinnati office, senior EO personnel, including Holly Paz, Cindy Thomas, and John Shafer, explained the application process.⁸¹⁵ The auditors also reviewed the relevant law, regulations, court rulings, and a draft "guidesheet" that the EO Technical Unit had been working on. After the site visit, the auditors prepared a memorandum summarizing what they had learned.⁸¹⁶ who said, and I quote, that Darrell Issa had specifically requested that investigators, 'narrowly focus on Tea Party organizations,' so they did just that, according to Kraushaar, that is an inaccurate statement? Although Mr. Paterson indicated that the audit would examine applications filed by 501(c)(5) and (6) organizations, TIGTA did not review any of those applications during the audit.

On May 4, 2012, in response to the auditors' request, Ms. Paz provided a copy of the BOLO list then being used to identify 501(c)

applications of interest.⁸¹⁷ At that time, the BOLO did not include the phrase “Tea Party”; instead it asked screeners to look for “[p]olitical action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the constitution and bill of rights, Social economic reform / movement.”⁸¹⁸ The BOLO also included listings asking IRS screeners to look for applications filed by “progressive” groups, “ACORN successors,” “Occupy” groups, “Medical Marijuana” groups, and “Green Energy Organizations,” among others.⁸¹⁹ Later, some TIGTA officials claimed that the IRS had failed to disclose to the TIGTA auditors the BOLO entries for liberal groups; this email and the BOLO attachment show that the IRS provided copies of those entries from the beginning of the audit.

After receiving the BOLO, the TIGTA auditors asked the IRS for earlier versions of the BOLO listings and received, among others, the original August 2010 BOLO asking screeners to be on the lookout for “organizations in the Tea Party movement.”⁸²⁰ The TIGTA auditors examined that original BOLO entry, and traced the changes in its wording over time. As explained earlier, that BOLO entry was changed four times in three years, from the original version in August 2010, to a more generic version in June 2011, then a January 2012 version using the language in the BOLO that was first provided to TIGTA on May 4, and finally to another generic version that began to be circulated in June 2012.⁸²¹ The TIGTA documentation contains no evidence that the auditors conducted a similar analysis of any other BOLO entries, despite being aware the BOLO had multiple sections with entries asking screeners to be on the lookout for a variety of applications and organizations, including liberal groups.

On May 17, 2012, the TIGTA auditors held a conference call with the IRS to discuss possible audit issues, including the BOLO entries related to the Tea Party.⁸²² The participants were Thomas Seidell and Cheryl Medina from TIGTA, and Holly Paz and David Fish from the IRS. A summary of the conference call, prepared by TIGTA lead auditor, Ms. Medina, stated:

“AM [Audit Manager] Seidell then turned to our concerns with the nature of the criteria in the briefing paper. Based upon this criteria, it appears the complaints being made in the media by certain groups are valid. In addition, it appears to contradict the testimony of the Commissioner before Congress. Ms. Paz agreed that the initial criteria was not a good way to identify advocacy cases. However, it is common to refer to certain groups by name for identification purposes in Determinations. For example, the ‘Occupy’ and [REDACTED BY TIGTA] groups are listed specifically on the BOLO.”⁸²³

This summary indicates, in the words of TIGTA’s own lead auditor, that on May 17, 2012, IRS personnel explicitly drew the attention of TIGTA auditors to the liberal groups identified in the BOLOs that had been provided to the audit team, explained that names of both conservative and liberal groups were used to flag applications for heightened scrutiny, and pointed out that the BOLOs had not singled out only conservative groups. While senior TIGTA officials later claimed that the IRS had not disclosed the BOLO entries for liberal groups to the audit team during the audit period, this conference call summary shows that the IRS identified those BOLO entries to the audit team in the earliest stages of the audit process.

On May 22, 2012, the director of the TIGTA 501(c) audit, Troy Paterson, called EO head Lois Lerner to inform her that the audit team viewed the BOLO entries related to the Tea Party and other conservative groups as a concern, because they “targeted” those groups for added scrutiny. In his notes of the conversation, Mr. Paterson wrote that he told Ms. Lerner the following:

“I’m just calling to let you know that we will be raising an issue to our IG [Inspector General] regarding § 501(c)(4) applications. We have received documentation showing that certain organizations (Tea Party, organizations criticizing how the country is being run) were targeted for additional scrutiny in part of the EO function.”⁸²⁴

Mr. Paterson's notes contained no acknowledgement of the existence of the BOLO entries for liberal groups or of the contention made by the IRS that the BOLO's many entries demonstrated the IRS was not singling out conservative groups.

On May 30, 2012, the auditors gave Russell Martin, who had become Acting Assistant Inspector General for Audit, Management Services, and Exempt Organizations after Ms. Nakamura took another position, a briefing paper discussing the key audit issues that had been identified and describing the audit's objective as focusing on "the process used by the IRS when reviewing applications for tax-exempt status by §501 (c)(4) organizations."⁸²⁵ The briefing paper did not mention 501(c)(5) or (c)(6) organizations, even though they had been part of the initial audit planning.

On June 22, 2012, the then acting head of the TIGTA Office of Audit, Michael McKenney, issued the official engagement letter for the 501(c)(4) audit.⁸²⁶ The two-page engagement letter stated that the audit's "overall objective" was "to assess the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Exempt Organizations function's consistency in the identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues."⁸²⁷ The engagement letter also stated: "Several accusations of inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups have been made."⁸²⁸ By focusing on "consistency" and "inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups," the engagement letter seemed to indicate that the audit would focus on how conservative groups were treated compared to non-conservative groups, although it contained no explicit direction to gather comparative data.

In July 2012, according to TIGTA's official audit log, the auditors held an "opening conference" with IRS officials to outline the steps the Office of Audit planned to take to complete the audit.⁸²⁹ By then, however, the TIGTA auditors had already conducted a site visit, obtained key documents, and identified the key issues of concern.

(3) Collecting and Analyzing Information

For a one-year period, from May 2012 until May 2013, the TIGTA auditors collected and analyzed information in connection with the 501(c) audit.⁸³⁰ Among other steps, the auditors obtained from the IRS a list of 298 501(c)(4) applications that had been referred for heightened scrutiny over a two-year period, reviewed two groups of closed 501(c)(4) cases to determine whether they should have been referred for heightened scrutiny, conducted multiple interviews of IRS personnel, and submitted written questions to the IRS. Throughout the audit period, IRS personnel repeatedly pointed out to the TIGTA auditors that the Exempt Organizations Determinations (EOD) Unit subjected both conservative and liberal groups to heightened review, and did not single out Tea Party organizations, but the TIGTA auditors failed to provide any audit analysis focused on how the IRS processed applications filed by non-conservative groups.

Analysis of 298 Cases. An early step taken by the TIGTA audit team during the audit period was to ask the IRS for a list of all of the advocacy cases that were subjected to heightened scrutiny by EOD determinations specialists over the prior two years. On June 1, 2012, TIGTA lead auditor Cheryl Medina sent an email to Determinations Unit head Cindy Thomas requesting “an updated copy of the advocacy case tracking sheet used by the advocacy team.”⁸³¹ In response, the IRS supplied a list of 298 advocacy cases with 501(c)(4) and (c)(3) applications that had been flagged under the “Emerging Issues” section of the BOLO as of May 2012.⁸³² At other times, as indicated above and below, IRS personnel asked the TIGTA auditors also to consider cases involving liberal groups, such as the ACORN successor and Occupy groups, but TIGTA failed to do so, and the IRS did not supply a list of those additional advocacy cases.

TIGTA examined all 298 cases on the Emerging Issues list to determine their status as open or closed, and how long each case took to be processed. In addition, of those 298 cases, TIGTA determined that 96, or about one-third of the cases, involved applications filed by organizations with “Tea Party,” “9-12,” or “Patriot” in their names.⁸³³ The audit report did not categorize or characterize the remaining 202 cases, however, explain how they were selected, or acknowledge that they included non-conservative groups. When asked why, Mr. Paterson told the Subcommittee that TIGTA concentrated on the cases that were flagged using what looked to be inappropriate selection criteria using the three names, and did not characterize the other 200 cases.⁸³⁴ Mr. Seidell told the Subcommittee that the auditors were uncertain why the other cases had been flagged for heightened scrutiny, couldn’t tell much from their names, and so did not analyze them, other than to determine their status and how long each case took to be processed.⁸³⁵ At a hearing, Inspector General George said that the “vast majority of the other organizations” had names that “were so innocuous that we did not deem it possible to determine whether or not they were conservative groups, or whether or not they were groups that might be on the other side of the political spectrum.”⁸³⁶

Six months later, when drafting the audit report, two senior TIGTA officials noted the audit team’s lack of knowledge about why the category of 298 advocacy cases included 202 groups that did not have “Tea Party,” “9-12,” or “Patriot” in their names. In an internal draft of the audit report, TIGTA Assistant Inspector General Gregory Kutz wrote a comment that the team needed “to discuss whether the other 200 (100 tea party/9/12/patriot) and other 200 – how the ‘other 200’ were selected?”⁸³⁷ TIGTA audit director Troy Paterson responded:

“We do not know. Either the IRS was using ‘Tea Party’ as shorthand and selecting any organization that was involved in political campaign intervention or the other 200 had something to do with the ‘values’ in the criteria. We could not determine either way.”⁸³⁸

This exchange indicates that, after spending nearly a year on the audit, two of the senior TIGTA officials realized the IRS was using “Tea Party” as “shorthand” for a broader category of groups, but still had no clear idea why many of those other groups had been selected for heightened scrutiny.

The final version of the audit report explicitly acknowledged that IRS personnel used the “Tea Party” phrase as “shorthand” for a broader category of cases.⁸³⁹ The report also observed that, according to the IRS, “the fact that the team of specialists worked applications that did not involve the Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 groups demonstrated that the IRS was not politically biased in its identification of applications for processing by the team of specialists.”⁸⁴⁰ The TIGTA audit team did not take the next step, however, and present an analysis of the remaining 202 cases, explain how they were selected, or acknowledge that they likely included liberal groups.

A later outside analysis shed more light on the composition of the 298 advocacy cases. In May 2013, the IRS released a list of 176 501(c)(4) organizations that had been approved for tax exempt status since 2010.⁸⁴¹ Tax Analysts, a publication specializing in tax issues, reasoned that, given the time period covered and number of groups included, the list of 176 organizations likely substantially overlapped with the list of 298 cases analyzed by TIGTA.⁸⁴² Tax Analysts then analyzed the 176 groups and concluded that, while most involved conservative groups, nearly one third did not.⁸⁴³ It found that, of the 176 groups, only 46 had Tea Party, Patriot, or 9/12 in their names; 76 were associated with other conservative organizations; 48 were non-conservative – including liberal – organizations; and 6 were organizations about which no determination could be made.⁸⁴⁴ The analysis also showed that the IRS had granted tax exempt status to groups across the political spectrum.⁸⁴⁵ Had TIGTA done a similar analysis as part of its audit, the audit would have found that the IRS had not singled out only conservative groups for heightened scrutiny.

<http://www.irs.gov/PUP/newsroom/Approved%20Tax%20Exempt%20Applications%20For%20Advocacy%20Organizations%20through%20May%209%202013.pdf>. The IRS has interpreted the law as allowing it to release the names of 501(c) applicants that have been approved for tax exempt status, but not the names of those denied tax exemption. For that reason, the IRS has never released the names of all of the 298 groups reviewed by the IRS from May 2010 to May 2012, since some of them may have been denied tax exempt status or are still pending resolution.

In addition, had TIGTA researched the issue, it might have determined that the list of 298 cases contained more conservative than liberal groups, not because conservative groups were being singled out, but because during the relevant time period, more conservative 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations were being formed and applying for tax exempt status. The list of 176 organizations released by the IRS showed that twice as many conservative organizations as non-conservative organizations obtained tax exempt status from 2010 to May 2013.⁸⁴⁶ A later analysis by the House Committee on Ways and Means determined that, of the 298 cases provided to TIGTA, by September 2013, 111 “right-leaning” groups had received tax exempt status, while only 20 “left-leaning” groups did, meaning more than five times as many conservative as liberal groups had gained tax exemption.⁸⁴⁷ Rather than demonstrate IRS favoritism of conservative groups, however, those disparate numbers likely reflect the fact that many more conservative than liberal groups had requested tax exempt status.

limited government generally. But a substantial minority – almost one-third of the subset – did not fit that description.”).

⁸⁴⁴ Id. TIGTA later acknowledged that six of the 298 cases subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS had the word “progress” or “progressive” in their names. See 6/26/2013 letter from TIGTA to Congressman Sander Levin, at 1-2, <http://online.wsj.com/public/resources/documents/TIGTAFinalResponseToRepLevin06262013.pdf>. TIGTA justified ignoring those cases in its analysis, by asserting that the audit did not find evidence that the term “Progressives,” was actually used by the IRS to select cases for heightened review during the 2010 to 2012 timeframe, even though the term was included in the BOLOs and groups with “progress” or “progressive” in their names were included in the 298 cases. Id. TIGTA admitted that it “did not audit” the Progressives entry to determine how that entry was developed, whether it included inappropriate criteria, or whether the affected groups were subjected to the same delays and intrusive questioning as the conservative groups. In addition to the data on the groups that obtained tax exempt status, several IRS employees told the Subcommittee that the IRS saw a surge in applications from conservative groups from 2010 to 2013.⁸⁴⁸ Spending data in FEC filings showing that, in 2010 and 2012, conservative groups spent almost ten times as much as liberal groups, also suggest conservative groups may have outnumbered their liberal counterparts during that time period.⁸⁴⁹ In addition, media reports depicted conservative groups as the leaders in the 501(c)(4) area at the time, with liberal groups working to catch up.⁸⁵⁰ TIGTA did not, however, look into whether more conservative groups versus liberal groups had filed applications with the IRS.⁸⁵¹

It is difficult to understand why TIGTA did not, when it was provided with a list of 298 cases, create a randomly selected, statistically valid subset containing both conservative and non-conservative groups, which it could have then used to develop comparative data on how the two groups were handled by the IRS. TIGTA could have used those cases to meet the stated audit objective of determining whether “conservative groups” experienced “inconsistent treatment.” Instead, TIGTA failed to analyze IRS treatment of any non-conservative cases.

Statistical Analysis of Closed Cases. TIGTA also conducted an analysis of two sets of closed 501(c)(4) cases to test whether the IRS had accurately identified applications with “indications of significant political campaign intervention” that should have been subjected to heightened review.⁸⁵² TIGTA found that the IRS should have but failed to identify 2 out of 94 cases in one statistical sample and 14 out of 244

In 2012, the Center determined that conservative 501(c)(4) spending was $265.2 million (85.3%), liberal spending was $34.7 million (11.2%) and “other” spending was $10.9 million (3.5%). “2010 Outside Spending, by Group,” and “2012 Outside Spending, by Group,” Center for Responsive Politics, <http://www.opensecrets.org/outsidespending/summ.php?cycle=2010&chrt=V&disp=O&type=U>, <http://www.opensecrets.org/outsidespending/summ.php?cycle=2012&chrt=V&disp=O&type=U> cases in a second sample as cases warranting heightened scrutiny, while noting that none of the cases that avoided scrutiny involved groups with the words “Tea Party,” “9/12,” or “Patriot” in their names.⁸⁵³ The audit report also determined that 91 out of the 298 advocacy cases, about one-third, that had been subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS should not have been, because, in TIGTA’s view, their application materials did not contain “indications of significant political campaign intervention.”⁸⁵⁴ Of those 91 cases, the audit report noted that 17 “involved Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organizations,” which meant that 74 of the cases did not.

The report did not explain how TIGTA determined which applications contained or did not contain evidence of “significant political campaign intervention,” in light of the facts and circumstances test requiring activities to be evaluated on a fact-intensive, case-by-case basis. In January 2013, EO head Lois Lerner sent an email to TIGTA challenging TIGTA’s methodology and legal analysis of cases that allegedly did not require heightened scrutiny, explaining:

“Because the legal analysis of whether specific advocacy is political intervention requires analyzing all the facts and circumstances surround that advocacy in light of the formal guidance provided in this area, we included all organizations indicating they were engaged in potentially problematic advocacy, so that they would be worked by specialists who have a better understanding of the facts and circumstances to be considered, and who would be able to analyze the cases in a consistent manner.”⁸⁵⁵

⁸⁵³ Id. at 8, 9, footnotes 21 and 23. In its audit report and in a later letter to Ways and Means Ranking Member Sander Levin, TIGTA asserted that all groups with “Tea Party,” “9/12,” or “Patriot” in their names were subjected to heightened IRS review. See TIGTA Audit Report, at 8; 6/26/2013 letter from TIGTA to Congressman Sander Levin, at 2, <http://online.wsj.com/public/resources/documents/TIGTAFinalResponseToRepLevin06262013.pdf> (“[O]ur audit found that 100 percent of the tax-exempt applications with Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in their names were processed as potential political cases during the timeframe of our audit.”). Those assertions, however, were incorrect. A subsequent analysis by the IRS Chief Risk Officer identified a dozen instances in which groups with the words “Tea Party,” “9/12” or “Patriot” were not referred to an IRS specialist for heightened review, including two groups with “Tea Party” in their names, three groups with “9/12,” “9-12,” “9 12,” or “912” in their names, and seven groups with “patriot” in their names. ⁸⁵⁵ 1/14/2013 email from Lois Lerner to Troy Paterson, with copies to Holly Paz and Dawn Marx, “Advocacy discussion,” IRSR0000441700 - 701.

The next day, Mr. Paterson responded that, to facilitate the discussion of the cases, he was forwarding the criteria used by the audit team to analyze whether the closed cases should have been treated as advocacy cases and subjected to heightened scrutiny.⁸⁵⁶ According to the TIGTA auditors, to analyze the closed cases, they had gone through the hard copy file for each application as well as any supporting documentation.⁸⁵⁷ In his email, Mr. Paterson provided what appeared to be essentially a checklist of nine factors that the audit team had taken into consideration when evaluating a group's application materials. Most posed factual questions, such as whether or not a particular activity, such as a voter drive, voter guide, or candidate forum, had failed to state that it was nonpartisan; whether the group's funds had been commingled with funds from a political organization; and whether the group had answered certain tax return or application questions with a "yes," "no," or a blank. The ninth and final factor was whether the audit team had determined that the group had engaged in "[a]ny political campaign activity that totals 35 percent or more," with no further explanation of how specific activity was identified as campaign related or how expenditures were determined.⁸⁵⁸ If at the end of the review of each case, the auditors could not determine how the IRS had decided that the application presented indications of "significant political campaign intervention," the auditors concluded it had not been properly forwarded to IRS personnel for enhanced scrutiny.

Neither the TIGTA email nor audit report acknowledged that, under IRS regulations, finding "significant political campaign intervention" was a complex determination that did not permit the decisionmaker to use a checklist of objective factors. Nevertheless, using its own checklist criteria, the TIGTA Audit Report concluded that the IRS had made a number of incorrect decisions on which applications should have been subjected to enhanced scrutiny, while noting IRS disagreement with its analysis.⁸⁵⁹ The audit report did not offer any comparative analysis of how the IRS treated the 17 "Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organizations" that the audit team concluded should not have been subjected to heightened review versus the 74 other organizations that were also, in TIGTA's view, incorrectly selected for heightened review. Nor did the audit report acknowledge or offer any explanation of why four times as many groups were allegedly incorrectly subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS compared to groups with "Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12" in their names.

TIGTA Interviews of IRS Personnel. In addition to its statistical analyses, in July and August 2012, TIGTA auditors interviewed a number of IRS employees in both Cincinnati and Washington, regarding why the BOLO entries had been changed over time, how 501(c)(4) cases were selected for heightened review, and whether political bias at the IRS had motivated its decisionmaking with respect to Tea Party cases.⁸⁶⁰ During the course of those interviews, several IRS employees told the TIGTA auditors that the BOLOs sought to identify all types of advocacy groups suspected of involvement with campaign activity, not just Tea Party groups. For example, in his interview with TIGTA auditors, Stephen Seok, who became the advocacy case coordinator in late 2011, pointed out that the BOLO identifying advocacy groups contained both Tea Party groups and Occupy organizations, which were liberal groups.⁸⁶¹ The head of the Rulings and Agreements Unit Holly Paz told the Subcommittee that, on several occasions, she told TIGTA auditors Thomas Seidell and Cheryl Medina that ACORN and other liberal groups were also subjected to specialist reviews.⁸⁶² Both Ms. Paz and EOT specialist Judith Kindell told the Subcommittee that during the course of the audit, TIGTA auditors even acknowledged that the cases contained both conservative and liberal organizations.⁸⁶³

According to Ms. Paz, she asked the TIGTA auditors outright whether they would be reporting that liberal groups and organizations with all kinds of political leanings were subjected to heightened scrutiny by IRS personnel, and was told by the auditors that wasn't the focus of the audit and that the auditors were not in a position to determine what groups were conservative or liberal.⁸⁶⁴ Mr. Seidell told the Subcommittee that he recalled discussing liberal groups with Ms. Paz, but did not recall specifically what was discussed.⁸⁶⁵

During its interviews, the TIGTA auditors did not inquire into the political leanings of the IRS personnel and so failed to discover that self-declared Republicans played key roles in the review of Tea Party and other advocacy cases. For example, the manager of the IRS screening group in Cincinnati that conducted the initial screenings of 501(c)(4) applications was a self-described “conservative Republican” who said there was no bias in the IRS treatment of Tea Party cases.⁸⁶⁶ The senior IRS screener who took the lead role in identifying applications filed by Tea Party and other conservative groups described himself as aligned politically with the Tea Party.⁸⁶⁷ The EO Technical Unit attorney who conducted a 2011 assessment of the advocacy cases was a registered Republican.⁸⁶⁸ Still another IRS attorney in the Chief Counsel’s office told the Subcommittee there was no reason to believe one side was being singled out over the other because, from 2010 to 2013, he was asked to work on seven 501(c) cases, and four involved groups associated with the Democratic party.⁸⁶⁹

Another Set of BOLOs. During July and August 2012, Ms. Paz sent TIGTA additional copies of the BOLOs used by the EOD to flag applications for heightened scrutiny, from the earliest BOLO in August 2010, through the latest in July 2012.⁸⁷⁰ As mentioned earlier, those BOLOs included entries for not only Tea Party organizations, but also progressive, ACORN, and Occupy groups, offering concrete evidence that the IRS was using screening criteria to flag both conservative and liberal groups. TIGTA officials later claimed the IRS had not alerted its audit team to the BOLO entries for liberal groups included in those lists, but even a cursory review of the BOLOs would have provided notice of those entries.

On July 23, 2012, TIGTA audit director Troy Paterson forwarded his audit team a press article recounting how a “watchdog” group was urging TIGTA to investigate two ACORN successor groups in Texas,⁸⁷¹ demonstrating again the auditors’ awareness of issues related to liberal groups filing 501(c)(4) applications. The next day, July 24, 2012, Ms. Paz forwarded to the audit team an email she had written two months earlier, in May 2012, showing that she had insisted on the use of generic language in the BOLO entry to identify advocacy cases and that the generic entry was intended to include both conservative and liberal groups, referring to ACORN successor and Occupy groups by name.⁸⁷² Her email again provided the audit team with documentary evidence that the EOD was flagging applications filed by both conservative and liberal groups, and again attempted to draw their attention to the BOLO entries for liberal groups.

Briefing New Audit Leadership. In August 2012, Gregory Kutz joined the TIGTA Audit Office as the new Assistant Inspector General for Audit handling Management Services and Exempt Organizations, replacing Russell Martin.⁸⁷³ Soon after, Troy Paterson briefed Mr. Kutz on the status of the 501(c) audit. In an email to Mr. Martin, Mr. Paterson summarized his discussion with Mr. Kutz as follows:

“Greg called me this morning to introduce himself. ... He also asked if there was anything ‘big’ going on that he should know about right away. I told him that the biggest thing on the horizon in our directorate had to do with a commitment we made to meet with congressional staff before September 30th on the political advocacy applications job. I gave him some background on the job and suggested that we would need to get together and determine the timing of the briefing and what we would like to discuss. He agreed that this would be something we would need to plan in advance due to the political sensitivity of the issue and the fact that we are in fieldwork.”⁸⁷⁴

In September 2012, the TIGTA auditors met with Mr. Kutz to discuss the audit and a plan to issue an interim report.⁸⁷⁵ The meeting participants were Mr. Kutz and audit team members Troy Paterson, Thomas Seidell, Cheryl Medina, Michael McGovern, and Evan Close.⁸⁷⁶ Among other issues, the meeting discussed whether the interim report should include information on liberal groups as well as Tea Party organizations in its analysis. A meeting summary described the discussion as follows:

“Director Paterson mentioned the interim report we plan on issuing. It would include information on whether the IRS targeted Tea Party organizations, whether more liberal organizations were referred to the advocacy group. A discussion on how to word issues in the report was had. It was decided we need to state the facts – other organizations with political campaign intervention issues were not sent to the advocacy group (objective IIIA and IIIB). We cannot definitively identify liberal vs. conservative organizations, so we want to stay away from using ‘heated’ jargon.”⁸⁷⁷

This meeting summary indicates that the TIGTA auditors were not only aware of, but also discussed, the issue of whether liberal groups were being referred to the advocacy group for heightened review. The summary also suggests that the auditors may have decided not to discuss liberal groups in the audit report, to avoid having to label certain groups as liberal or conservative.

In October 2012, Mr. Kutz wrote directly to the TIGTA Inspector General about the sensitivity of the ongoing audit. He wrote: “[G]iven the highly sensitive nature of this ongoing audit (politically active non-profits) a more in depth discussion would be useful for you.”⁸⁷⁸

Written Questions and Answers. In November 2012, EO head Lois Lerner provided written responses to questions posed by the TIGTA auditors.⁸⁷⁹ In response to a question about why the BOLO entries had been changed over time, Ms. Lerner explained what happened, while also reminding the TIGTA auditors once more that the BOLO lists had included entries for liberal groups as well as conservative groups: “The separate entries for Occupy groups and ACORN successors were deleted and the advocacy organization description was revised”⁸⁸⁰ She also wrote:

“In addition, in light of the diversity of applications selected under this ‘tea party’ label (e.g., some had ‘tea party’ in their name but others did not, some stated that they were affiliated with the ‘tea party’ movement while others stated they were affiliated with the Democratic or Republican party, etc.), the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements sought clarification as to the criteria being used to identify these cases.”⁸⁸¹

Ms. Lerner asked TIGTA to include that information in the audit report, but TIGTA declined.⁸⁸²

TIGTA Failure to Examine Liberal Groups. During the audit period, TIGTA auditors were repeatedly exposed to issues related to whether liberal groups, such as the Progressive, ACORN, and Occupy organizations, were subjected to the same heightened scrutiny as Tea Party and other conservative groups. The TIGTA auditors failed, however, to examine any BOLO entry that named a group other than the one that named the Tea Party.⁸⁸³ The TIGTA auditors also failed to acknowledge that groups in the 298 cases with “Progressive” or “Progress” in their names were subjected to inappropriate selection criteria and other improper treatment.

When asked why, the TIGTA auditors offered a number of reasons. The TIGTA audit director, Troy Paterson, told the Subcommittee that the auditors did not actually make a decision not to analyze the progressive, ACORN, and Occupy BOLO entries, but briefed the Inspector General about the audit in January 2013. Subcommittee interviews of Gregory Kutz (3/26/2014) and Troy Paterson (3/21/2014).

viewed them as not relevant to the audit.⁸⁸⁴ He did not explain, however, why BOLO entries with overtly political search terms were seen as irrelevant to an audit designed to “assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function’s identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues.”⁸⁸⁵

The BOLO entry for “progressive” organizations urged EOD personnel to be on the lookout for groups with “progressive political activities” that “appear to lean towards a new political party. Activities are partisan and appear anti-Republican. You see references to ‘blue’ as being ‘progressive.’”⁸⁸⁶ The BOLO entry for Occupy groups urged EOD personnel to be on the lookout for groups claiming “social injustices due to ‘big money’ influence” or concerns that “the democratic process is controlled by wall street/banks/multinational corporations.”⁸⁸⁷ While the IRS redacted most of the wording of the BOLO entry for ACORN successor groups, a 2010 email indicated that EOD personnel were looking for groups called “Neighborhoods for Social Justice” or “Communities Organizing for Change,” as well as groups advocating for “Voter Mobilization of the Low-Income/Disenfranchised” or “Housing Justice for the poor.”⁸⁸⁸ IRS personnel repeatedly urged the audit team to examine those BOLO entries, since they would have helped demonstrate that the IRS was not unfairly singling out conservative groups, but TIGTA failed to do so.

Several of the TIGTA auditors told the Subcommittee staff that the audit team had simply examined the BOLO entries that the IRS advised them to examine.⁸⁸⁹ That explanation ignores the evidence cited above, however, showing that the IRS also asked the auditors to examine the BOLO entries for Progressive, Occupy, and ACORN groups. One auditor told the Subcommittee that the audit team did not look at the BOLO entries for liberal groups because no organizations had pending applications.⁸⁹⁰ In fact, as shown earlier, applications were pending from both ACORN successor and Progressive groups during the entire period Tea Party groups were under review, and the first Occupy group application was filed in February 2012, more than one year before the release of the TIGTA audit.⁸⁹¹

Two of the auditors told the Subcommittee that the Tea Party cases were the only groups with potentially problematic screening criteria used to search for additional cases.⁸⁹² But IRS screeners named liberal groups, including Progressive, ACORN and Occupy groups, in the BOLO entries just as they had named the Tea Party groups. They also used screening criteria for ACORN successor organizations which cited the groups' political positions in ways that both the TIGTA auditor director and TIGTA Chief Counsel acknowledged looked similar to the criteria used for Tea Party groups.⁸⁹³ The Occupy and Progressive criteria also used phrases taken from the groups' political views. The TIGTA auditors told the Subcommittee that they had not seen the ACORN screening criteria during the audit, nor had they looked for any screening criteria other than what was used for the Tea Party groups,⁸⁹⁴ even though one key focus of the audit had been to identify problematic screening criteria.⁸⁹⁵

The TIGTA auditors took one year to collect and analyze information related to the IRS review of 501(c)(4) applications. They did not examine how the IRS processed applications filed by liberal organizations engaged in advocacy activities, despite being continually asked by the IRS to do so. Since the audit was designed to identify and review how the IRS handled “applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues,” sought to evaluate the “consistency” of IRS actions, and was undertaken amid allegations that the IRS had unfairly targeted Tea Party groups, TIGTA’s failure to obtain and examine comparative data related to how the IRS handled liberal groups is inexplicable.

(4) Looking for Political Bias

In February 2013, Assistant Inspector General Gregory Kutz in the TIGTA Office of Audit asked the TIGTA Office of Investigations to search the email of ten IRS employees in the EOD Unit to look for an email that allegedly directed IRS employees to “target” Tea Party groups. The Office of Investigations declined to conduct the search, until directed to do so by the TIGTA Inspector General who also caused Mr. Kutz to reduce the number of IRS employees subject to the email search to five individuals. After a subsequent search of over 2,200 IRS emails and other documents, the Office of Investigations concluded that the documents contained “no indication” that the pulling of the Tea Party applications for additional scrutiny by IRS personnel was “politically motivated,” advising that they instead appeared to be the result of inadequate guidance on how to process the cases. That conclusion by the Office of Investigations was not mentioned in TIGTA’s audit report, however, even though it was directly relevant to the issue of political bias at the IRS and was based on a documentary review of key emails.

Involving the Office of Investigations. At some point during early 2013, a TIGTA auditor was told that an email existed at the IRS directing IRS employees to “target” Tea Party organizations; the auditor passed on that information to Gregory Kutz, the Assistant Inspector General.⁸⁹⁶ In response, Mr. Kutz took action to try to find the alleged “smoking gun” email.⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁶ Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that either Mr. Seidell or Mr. Paterson had been told about the email. Subcommittee interview of Gregory Kutz, TIGTA (3/26/2014). See also 5/3/2013 email from Timothy Camus to Gregory Kutz, and others, “Review of E-mails,” PSI-IRS-37-000001 (stating that the Office of Investigations had been asked to determine “[i]f an e-mail existed that directed the [IRS] staff to ‘target’ Tea Party and other political organizations”).

⁸⁹⁷ Both TIGTA Inspector General Russell George and Office of Investigations head Timothy Camus told the Subcommittee that Mr. Kutz had described the email as a “smoking gun” email. Subcommittee interviews of Russell George, TIGTA (4/22/2014) and Timothy Camus, TIGTA (4/7/2014). See also testimony of J. Russell George, “The IRS’s Systematic Delay and Scrutiny of Tea Party Applications,” hearing before the House Committee on Oversight and Government

On February 13, 2013, Mr. Kutz sent a memorandum to Timothy Camus, head of the TIGTA Office of Investigations, the agency's law enforcement arm, asking for assistance in looking for the email.⁸⁹⁸ He sought Mr. Camus' assistance, because the Office of Audit did not have the authority to retrieve IRS emails from the agency's servers that had not been produced to it by the IRS.⁸⁹⁹ The memorandum provided ten names of IRS personnel and specific search terms that Mr. Kutz wanted the Office of Investigations to use to search and retrieve the IRS employee emails.⁹⁰⁰

Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that he had felt "uncomfortable" conducting the type of IRS email search, retrieval, and review that Mr. Kutz wanted, describing it as a "fishing expedition."⁹⁰¹ Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that, at the time, he responded to Mr. Kutz by indicating that he did not feel comfortable using law enforcement tools to search and retrieve the emails of ten IRS employees, until Mr. Kutz provided more specificity as to who wrote or received the "smoking gun" email.⁹⁰² Mr. Camus indicated that Mr. Kutz was unable to provide the name of any IRS employee who was suspected of writing or receiving the email.⁹⁰³ When asked about Mr. Camus' reaction, Mr. Kutz disagreed that the request was a "fishing expedition," explaining that it was "prudent to look through emails for the reasons stated in the February referral letter."⁹⁰⁴

In early April 2013, Mr. Kutz set up a meeting with Inspector General Russell George and Mr. Camus to discuss his request for the Office of Investigations email review.⁹⁰⁵ According to Mr. Camus, at the meeting, he expressed his concern about using law enforcement tools to search and retrieve IRS employee emails without the knowledge or consent of the IRS, and his hesitance to act without getting additional specificity regarding who and what to search for from Mr. Kutz.⁹⁰⁶ Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that Inspector General George directed the Office of Investigations to conduct the requested email review, but also brokered a “compromise” in which Mr. Kutz agreed to narrow the list of IRS employees whose emails would be searched from ten to five individuals.⁹⁰⁷ When asked about the meeting, the TIGTA Inspector General told the Subcommittee that he did not recall a disagreement between the Office of Audit and the Office of Investigations over the matter, but did recall asking the Office of Investigations to undertake the review.⁹⁰⁸ Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that he was not pleased with having to conduct the review, but felt it had been narrowed so that it was “not a broad fishing expedition.”⁹⁰⁹

Conducting the Review. Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that he tasked one of his technical experts, James Jackson, with conducting the search, retrieval, and review of the specified emails from the five IRS employees.⁹¹⁰ According to Mr. Jackson, Mr. Camus instructed him to review the IRS employees’ emails, using the key search terms provided by Mr. Kutz, and look for any political direction related to delaying or targeting the processing of 501(c) applications, for example, in response to direction from the White House.⁹¹¹ Using Mr. Kutz’s search terms of “Tea,” “Patriots,” “9/12,” and “(c)(4),” Mr. Jackson’s email search produced 5,617 total hits involving 2,277 emails and other documents.⁹¹² Mr. Jackson told the Subcommittee that he personally reviewed all 2,277 emails and documents, but did not find a “smoking gun” email.⁹¹³ He said that, instead, he found the emails and documents demonstrated a great deal of confusion about the application process, with IRS employees “begging for guidance” as to how to determine whether organizations were engaged in campaign activity.⁹¹⁴

Mr. Jackson told the Subcommittee that he found no evidence of political bias in the IRS’ processing of the 501(c)(4) applications.⁹¹⁵ Mr. Jackson summarized his findings in a memorandum dated May 3, 2013, which he prepared after concluding his review and emailed to Mr. Camus, head of the Office of Investigations:

“This review revealed that there was a lot of discussion between the employees identified above, as well as other EO employees on how to process ‘Tea Party’ and other political organization’s tax exempt applications. The search also revealed that there was a Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list specifically naming these groups; however, the e-mails indicated the organizations needed to be pulled because the group charged with reviewing these applications was not sure how to process them, not because they wanted to stall or hinder the application process. There was no indication from this electronic mail review that the pulling of these selected applications was politically motivated. The electronic mail traffic available indicated that there were unclear processing directions and the group wanted to make sure they had guidance on processing the applications, so they pulled them in order to ensure they were all processed in a consistent manner.”⁹¹⁶

Conveying the Review Results. That same day, May 3, 2013, Mr. Camus summarized the findings of the review in an email he sent to other senior TIGTA executives, Gregory Kutz, Michael McCarthy, Michael Phillips, and Michael McKenney:

“As a result of our meeting with Russell [George] a couple of weeks ago, we agreed to pull e-mails from identified staff members of the EO organization in Cincinnati to find out 1). If an e-mail existed that directed the staff to ‘target’ Tea Party and other political organizations and 2). If there was a conspiracy or effort to hide e-mails about the alleged directive. ... Review of these e-mails revealed that there was a lot of discussion between the employees on how to process the Tea Party and other political organization applications. There was a Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list specifically naming these groups; however, the e-mails indicated the organizations needed to be pulled because the IRS employees were not sure how to process them, not because they wanted to stall or hinder the application. There was no indication that pulling these selected applications was politically motivated. The e-mail traffic indicated there were unclear processing directions and the group wanted to make sure they had guidance on processing the applications so they pulled them. This is a very important nuance.”⁹¹⁷

The Camus email was sent eleven days before the audit report was released to the public. According to TIGTA Inspector General George, none of the senior TIGTA managers who received the email forwarded it to him or informed him of the review's results.⁹¹⁸

Excluding the Finding from the Audit Report. Although the Office of Investigations found in its review that “there was no indication that pulling these selected applications was politically motivated,” addressing an issue that was central to the TIGTA audit, its finding was not included in the TIGTA audit report. When asked why, Mr. Kutz told Subcommittee that the TIGTA report had already shown there was no evidence of political bias in the application process, and the Office of Investigations had simply confirmed the audit results, so there was no need to include its finding in the report.⁹¹⁹

The TIGTA audit report did not contain, however, an explicit finding that there was no political bias in the IRS application process. When the Subcommittee examined the part of the audit report which Mr. Kutz indicated already showed there was no political bias at the IRS in the application process, it consisted of a description by TIGTA of statements made by IRS employees regarding the absence of political bias, rather than an analysis or statement by TIGTA itself concluding that no political bias had been present.⁹²⁰

When asked about the issue in Congressional hearings, TIGTA Inspector General George repeatedly testified that the audit had found no evidence of political bias at the IRS.⁹²¹ At the same time, he cited little or no evidence to support that conclusion. Had TIGTA included the TIGTA Office of Investigations finding in the audit report, it would have included information directly relevant to the audit and provided

And we didn’t say something in addition to what we already said, because we’d already said what he found.”).

⁹²⁰ Mr. Kutz referred the Subcommittee to the following statements in the TIGTA audit report as showing the lack of political bias at the IRS:

“We asked the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division; the Director, EO; and Determinations Unit personnel if the criteria were influenced by any individual or organization outside the IRS. All of these officials stated that the criteria were not influenced by any individual or organization outside the IRS. ... According to the Director, Rulings and Agreements, the fact that the team of specialists worked applications that did not involve the Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 groups demonstrated that the IRS was not politically biased in its identification of applications for processing by the team of specialists.”

important additional evidence to support TIGTA's conclusion regarding the absence of political bias at the IRS. Given that the Office of Investigations finding was among the strongest evidence developed by the audit on the issue of whether the IRS had shown political bias in processing 501(c)(4) applications, it is difficult to understand why it was excluded from the report.⁹²²

Documents reviewed by the Subcommittee show that an earlier draft of the TIGTA audit report, a copy of which was sent to EO head Lois Lerner and IRS Chief Counsel William Wilkins in early April 2013, had included two references to the Office of Investigations review.⁹²³ Since the draft was sent to the IRS before that review had concluded, neither reference described what the Office of Investigations had found. In an email, Ms. Lerner expressed concern to TIGTA personnel about what she thought were two separate referrals to the Office of Investigations described in the draft report.⁹²⁴ Mr. Camus told the Subcommittee that he had asked that the final audit report remove any reference to an Office of Investigations referral, because he viewed any reference to be misleading, since his office had not conducted a formal investigation in connection with the audit.⁹²⁵ The footnotes referencing the Office of Investigations were removed from the final report.⁹²⁶ ⁹²² The Minority Staff's Dissenting Views state at one point that the email review was "a limited search of only five employees' emails," "did not include a search of any emails from any DC based employees," and "was not a general search for evidence of political bias." Dissenting Views at 230 (emphasis in original). That reasoning, however, misses the point of TIGTA's explanation for omitting the review from the audit report, which is not that the email review was too limited, but that it reached the same conclusion that the Office of Audit had already reached after considering all of the available information – that there was no evidence of political bias in how the IRS treated the 501(c)(4) applications. Subsequent broader email productions have not changed TIGTA's view. In June 2014, TIGTA sent a letter to the Subcommittee confirming Mr. George's testimony that the TIGTA audit "found no evidence of political bias" at the IRS. 6/6/2014 letter from TIGTA to the Subcommittee, PSI-TIGTA-22-000001 - 004, at 001.

Since EO function officials could not locate a copy of this e-mail, we requested assistance from our Office of Investigations in the matter. EO function officials later determined that an e-mail was not distributed to Determinations Unit specialists in May 2010. ... During interviews with Determinations Unit specialists and managers, we could not specifically determine who had been involved in creating the criteria. EO function officials later clarified that the expanded criteria were a compilation of various Determinations Unit specialist responses on how they were identifying Tea Party cases. Since we could not determine specifically who was involved in creating the expanded criteria, we referred this matter to our Office of Investigations.").

Making the Investigative Results Public. The existence of the Office of Investigations review and its conclusion were finally made public, not by TIGTA, but by a Member of Congress. On July 12, 2013, Congressman Elijah Cummings, Ranking Member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, released a letter disclosing that the Committee had received new TIGTA documents, and those documents had disclosed that TIGTA's Office of Investigations had conducted an email review of IRS employees and found "no indication" that the pulling of 501(c)(4) applications was "politically motivated."⁹²⁷

By that time, TIGTA Inspector General George had testified at four Congressional hearings about the audit's results, but had not disclosed the existence of the Office of Investigations email review or the conclusion it had reached.⁹²⁸ Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he had not brought it up in his testimony, because while he was aware of the email review, he had been unaware that the Office of Investigations had reached a conclusion that the IRS documents showed the IRS had not been politically motivated when it subjected applications from conservative groups to additional review, until Congressman Cummings released the key TIGTA email.⁹²⁹ Mr. George told the Subcommittee that no one on his staff had informed him of the Office of Investigations conclusion or forwarded the Camus email to him, even though the

Mr. Kutz also provided the Subcommittee with another reason the Office of Investigations' finding was not included in the final audit report. His memorandum requesting the Office of Investigations review indicated that, if the review discovered "material" evidence, that information might be disclosed in the audit report. See 2/13/2013 memorandum from Gregory Kutz, TIGTA, "Memorandum for Deputy Assistant Inspector General for Investigations," PSI-IRS-37-000002 - 003 ("If you identify evidence material to our audit report before it is issued, we will work with you on any additional disclosures we should make."). Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that he did not view the Office of Investigations' finding regarding a lack of evidence of politically motivated actions by the IRS to be material evidence, since he believed it simply confirmed what the audit report already said, and so did not include it in the audit report for that reason. Subcommittee interview of Gregory Kutz, TIGTA (3/26/2014).

New documents also indicate that all references to work conducted by this official and his team of investigators were scrubbed from an earlier draft of the Inspector General's report.").

⁹²⁸ TIGTA Inspector General Russell George had testified on 5/17/2013 before the House Ways and Means Committee, on 5/21/2013 before the Senate Finance Committee, on 5/22/2013 before the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, and on 6/3/2013 before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Financial Services and General Government.

finding directly addressed an issue central to the TIGTA audit, whether there had been political bias at the IRS.⁹³⁰

The TIGTA personnel who knew about the Office of Investigations finding, not only excluded the finding from the May 2013 audit report and failed to inform the Inspector General about the finding, they remained silent about the review's results for another two months, despite mounting public and Congressional concern about allegations that the IRS had showed political bias in the processing of tax-exempt applications. Had TIGTA personnel briefed Inspector General George during his hearing preparation about the Office of Investigations' finding, Mr. George could have used it to buttress TIGTA's conclusion about a lack of political bias at the IRS. For example, on May 21, 2013, at a Senate Finance hearing, when asked whether TIGTA was basing its conclusion that "there was no political motivation" in how the IRS processed Tea Party applications on "simply the statement of those engaging in the conduct," the Inspector General responded, "yes."⁹³¹ According to Mr. George, he did not also cite the TIGTA Office of Investigation's email review that found no indication of political bias, because his staff had not informed him of that conclusion. Mr. George also told the Subcommittee that, when he finally reviewed Mr. Camus' email, he had been "very disappointed" with it.⁹³² He indicated that, in his view, the email contained a conclusion that Mr. Camus should not have reached; instead, Mr. George indicated that the documentary review should have confined itself to determining whether or not a "smoking gun" email existed at the IRS.⁹³³

(5) Communicating the Audit Results

By January 2013, the TIGTA auditors had tentatively concluded that, when the EO Determinations Unit used "Tea Party," "9/12," "Patriot," or phrases reflecting the political views of those organizations, the IRS used inappropriate criteria to identify applications that were then subjected to heightened scrutiny.⁹³⁴ The auditors had also analyzed several groups of applications and reached a preliminary conclusion that the IRS had failed to identify some applications that should have been treated as advocacy cases, and treated others as advocacy cases when they should not have been. The TIGTA auditors informed IRS officials of their preliminary conclusions and discussed those and other audit issues in a series of meetings.

On January 14, 2013, EO head Lois Lerner sent an email to TIGTA audit director Troy Paterson expressing concern about some of the preliminary audit results and urging that the discussion include more senior personnel.⁹³⁵ On January 25, 2013, TIGTA auditors Troy Paterson, Thomas Seidell, and Cheryl Medina met with IRS officials Holly Paz, Judith Kindell, and Hilary Goehausen to discuss the audit.⁹³⁶ Six days later, on January 31, 2013, TIGTA auditors Thomas Seidell and Cheryl Medina met with IRS officials Lois Lerner, Holly Paz, Judith Kindell and Hilary Goehausen.

IRS personnel were taken aback by TIGTA's analysis which they interpreted as indicating that IRS personnel had shown political "bias" against Tea Party organizations by "targeting" them for heightened scrutiny. According to contemporaneous notes of the January 31 meeting taken by IRS personnel, Ms. Lerner objected to that characterization of IRS actions:

"[T]here was never institutional IRS bias. There was never direction from anyone in management to target anyone. She said it was less targeting than not providing them [EOD personnel] with the tools needed early on."⁹³⁷

That same day, January 31, 2013, Ms. Lerner sent a long email to Audit Director Troy Paterson, who wasn't present at the January 31 meeting she had attended. Her email described the audit as "the toughest one you and I have worked on together," and asserted that the TIGTA auditors could not explain how they defined "targeting" or what they meant by saying that the targeting under review “wasn’t necessarily political.”⁹³⁸ Ms. Lerner wrote:

“We feel your folks are being too narrow in their view and have decided that because of the language on the earlier BOLO list regarding Tea Party, everything that followed was tainted. They seem to believe that if a case was initially sent to the advocacy group, but ultimately determined to be an approval, that our action in putting it into the advocacy group in the first place is incorrect, and illustrates ‘targeting.’ I think they remain confused about the purpose of screening vs. bucketing – and we have tried to explain several time[s]. They also don’t seem to be taking a big picture look at what we have done. That is, we’ve already owned up to the fact that we recognized in mid-process that Cincinnati was struggling with the issues. That is why we sent our experts in this area to Cincinnati for 3 weeks to work hand in hand with the Determining folks to train them and then walk through their post training assessments to ensure they understood and we were getting the right treatment for the cases. When we describe that process, they acknowledge that that approach sounds reasonable, but seem to be saying that reasonableness is overshadowed by the fact that the criteria look bad to folks on the outside, so there is no way we could cure the initial bad impression. ...

“I met with the group today and asked your folks what they thought the TIGTA audit was all about. The response was that they were here because there were allegations that the IRS was ‘targeting.’ When asked, they didn’t seem able to provide me with a clear definition of what they meant by targeting, and they confused me when they said it wasn’t necessarily political. I told them my understanding is that the audit was to determine whether the IRS was acting in a politically motivated manner – not whether the earlier articulation of the criteria looked bad. However, that doesn’t seem to be the focus. They have said they aren’t looking at whether the organizations are conservative or liberal because that is too difficult to figure out. They have also acknowledged that there are both conservative and liberal organizations on the list of advocacy cases.

“So, I’m not sure how they are looking at whether we were politically motivated, or what they are looking for with regard to targeting. They didn’t seem to understand the difference between IRS acting in a politically motivated manner and front line staff people using less than stellar judgment. I am willing to take the blame for not having provided sufficient direction initially, which may have resulted in front line staff doing things that appeared to be politically motivated, but I am not on board that anything that occurred here shows that the IRS was politically motivated in the actions taken.”⁹³⁹

This January 2013 email shows that the IRS again brought its treatment of liberal groups to the attention of senior TIGTA personnel, noting that the TIGTA auditors had “acknowledged that there are both conservative and liberal organizations on the list of advocacy cases.”⁹⁴⁰

The same day that TIGTA auditors met with the IRS, on January 31, 2013, Mr. Kutz and Mr. Paterson briefed the TIGTA Inspector General about the audit. Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that he and Mr. Paterson personally met with Inspector General George and described the audit findings, including the changes in the wording of the BOLO entries used to flag applications filed by the Tea Party and other conservative groups.⁹⁴¹

On February 5, 2013, Ms. Lerner sent an email about the TIGTA audit to senior EO officials, including Joseph Grant, then head of the Tax Exempt and Government Entities division, and Nikole Flax, Chief of Staff to then Acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller, warning them about the audit outcome. Ms. Lerner wrote:

“We have met with TIGTA on this several times. ... I think we have a basic difference in our view of their audit. We thought it was to determine whether IRS has a biased program, which would include looking at every aspect. [T]hey seem to think the question is narrower — did we ‘target based on the articulation of the BOLO?’⁹⁴²

Her email indicates that, by early February 2013, the Acting IRS Commissioner’s office had been alerted to the potentially negative audit report.

⁹⁴⁰ Id. at 815. The Minority Staff’s Dissenting Views state that, when given opportunities to comment on drafts of the audit report, the IRS “did not assert that it had impartially targeted both conservative and liberal groups,” Dissenting Views at 226, but in this email to the senior TIGTA auditor as well as in other instances recounted earlier, the IRS did make that assertion, only to be told that the TIGTA auditors were not “looking at whether the organizations are conservative or liberal.” This email as well as other evidence showed that the IRS clearly and repeatedly objected to the failure of the TIGTA audit to mention the inclusion of liberal organizations in the list of advocacy cases.

⁹⁴¹ According to Mr. Kutz, the issue of whether liberal groups were also identified using inappropriate criteria and then subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS did not come up at the meeting. (6) Drafting the Audit Report

By February, the TIGTA audit team had prepared a draft audit report. On February 25, 2013, Audit Director Troy Paterson wrote to a colleague: “Everyone is a bit anxious about this report due to its subject matter.”⁹⁴³ Due to the perceived sensitivity regarding the report, TIGTA asked the TIGTA Chief Counsel to review the draft prior to providing it to the IRS, which was not generally done, and later provided the IRS with the opportunity to comment on three different drafts of the audit report prior to its issuance, instead of the usual two.⁹⁴⁴

TIGTA Chief Counsel Comments. On February 25, 2013, Mr. Paterson sent the draft audit report to TIGTA Chief Counsel Michael McCarthy and the head of the Office of Audit, Assistant Inspector General Michael McKenney, explaining: “Greg [Kutz] mentioned that, due to the sensitivity of the attached report, he would like for us to obtain your feedback before we issue a discussion draft report to the IRS.”⁹⁴⁵

After reading the draft audit report, TIGTA’s Chief Counsel Michael McCarthy wrote to Mr. Kutz and Mr. Paterson expressing several concerns.⁹⁴⁶ First, Mr. McCarthy counseled against the draft’s using the word “targeted,” explaining: “[T]argeted has a connotation of improper motivation that does not seem to be supported by the information presented in the audit report.”⁹⁴⁷ Mr. McCarthy was also curious about why TIGTA made the claim that the IRS “used inappropriate criteria,” since without using some type of identifier: “[t]hat would seem to make it difficult for the IRS to identify potential political applications for referral to the specialized unit.”⁹⁴⁸ Mr. McCarthy recommended that TIGTA focus more attention on the fact that the IRS used identifying names for non-political groups as well as political ones, “since it suggests both that the IRS was not politically motivated in this case, and that our recommendation might need to be broader.”⁹⁴⁹ Finally, Mr. McCarthy expressed concern about whether the TIGTA auditors had looked at whether the IRS had named “similarly situated groups from the left side of the political spectrum.”⁹⁵⁰ Mr.

McCarthy told the Subcommittee that when he asked the auditors if the IRS had used any BOLO entries that named liberal groups, the auditors told him there were none,⁹⁵¹ which was inaccurate.

On March 8, 2013, the TIGTA auditors met with the TIGTA Chief Counsel to discuss his concerns with the draft report.⁹⁵² Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that the meeting was “part of the iterative process of a report.”⁹⁵³ Auditor Thomas Seidell told the Subcommittee that he recalled the TIGTA Chief Counsel asking about whether the IRS looked at liberal groups, but did not recall how the matter was resolved.⁹⁵⁴ TIGTA Inspector General George told the Subcommittee that the Chief Counsel’s comments on the report and his concern about whether the IRS also looked at “similarly situated groups from the left side of the political spectrum” were not made known to him at the time.⁹⁵⁵

Ten days later, on March 18, 2013, the TIGTA Chief Counsel signed off on the report. Lori Creswell of Mr. McCarthy’s staff sent an email to Troy Paterson thanking the audit team for making requested changes:

“We wanted to thank you all for meeting with us to discuss Counsel’s comments concerning the draft audit report pertaining to applications for tax-exempt status. We have reviewed the revised draft that you provided to our office last week and appreciate the changes that have been made to the draft report. We believe that the revisions address and/or resolve the comments and concerns that we have offered. At this time, we have no further comments to offer concerning this matter.”⁹⁵⁶

One key change made to the draft was to remove the word “targeted” from the text, except when describing the allegations made by the initiators of the report who thought Tea Party groups were being names of other political groups with different policies should have also been included? If that is the rationale, do we have evidence that similarly situated groups from the left side of the political spectrum should have been included by name in the criteria, but were not? The later sections of the report seem to suggest this, but it is not clear.” Id.

Three days later, Mr. Paterson wrote to his auditors: “I reviewed the revised report over the weekend and have some minor revisions throughout and a few questions. targeted.⁹⁵⁷ Mr. McCarthy told the Subcommittee that he signed off on the report, because his concerns had been addressed.⁹⁵⁸

Draft Provided to IRS. On March 19, 2013, TIGTA provided copies of the revised draft audit report to the IRS.⁹⁵⁹ On March 25, 2013, EO Rulings and Agreements Head Holly Paz sent an email to EO head Lois Lerner criticizing the draft:

“The report lacks any reference to or information regarding the broader context (such as how difficult it is to determine what constitutes political activity and whether political activity is a c4’s primary activity). Without this broader context, the report could appear slanted in one direction.”⁹⁶⁰

That same day, March 25, 2013, Ms. Lerner and Meghan Biss, a Technical Advisor at the IRS, met with Mr. Kutz, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Seidell, and Ms. Medina from TIGTA to discuss the draft.⁹⁶¹ Later that day, Ms. Lerner described the meeting to Ms. Paz, who was unable to attend. Ms. Lerner wrote:

“I asked Greg [Kutz] and [T]roy [Paterson] to stay on afterwards. I told them flat out the report felt politically motivated with some of the inflammatory descriptions. ... Greg and I had a longer conversation in general, and I think he gets what’s been going on and where this sits in the middle of things. Not sure he can do a whole lot, but I did feel like he was going to go back and think about this. All we can ask for.”⁹⁶²

The next day, March 26, 2013, Ms. Lerner sent an email to the Acting IRS Commissioner’s Chief of Staff Nikole Flax warning her about the draft:

“I’ll send the draft – don’t freak out because we had a good talk and I believe there will be another draft to comment on – we had a higher up guy this time. I told him that there were several areas where the way they had provided the information made the report look political. He said it isn’t political. I said, I didn’t think it was, but they may want to take another look because it was coming across that way. We talked a bit about the larger context of what was going on in the world – I think he got it, but we’ll have to see.”⁹⁶³

On April 2, 2013, Ms. Lerner sent a lengthy email to the TIGTA auditors expressing concerns about the draft report.⁹⁶⁴ Among other matters, she expressed concern about references to apparent referrals to TIGTA’s Office of Investigations. She also forwarded a presentation that included a smiling picture of an acorn – a reference to ACORN successor groups – providing TIGTA with another document showing that the IRS was looking at liberal as well as conservative groups.⁹⁶⁵

Concealing the Audit. During the first quarter of 2013, TIGTA informed the IRS about the negative 501(c) audit results and provided a copy of the draft audit report. In the meantime, the IRS continued to struggle with how to process the 501(c)(4) applications amid negative press reports and Congressional inquiries. On April 30, 2013, a team of eight IRS EO employees, led by Lois Lerner, met with Subcommittee staff for six hours to discuss the 501(c)(4) application process, how the IRS determined when activities qualified as campaign intervention and when a group was engaged primarily in social welfare activities, and how the IRS enforced the legal constraints on tax exempt groups.⁹⁶⁶ During the meeting, neither Ms. Lerner nor her staff mentioned the Tea Party, the TIGTA audit, or the upcoming TIGTA audit report.

Ms. Lerner and her staff also downplayed the ongoing problems with the 501(c)(4) cases. When Subcommittee staff asked about how the IRS analyzed campaign activity by 501(c)(4) groups and determined whether groups were engaged primarily in social welfare activities, Ms. Lerner told the Subcommittee that additional guidance in those areas was not necessary, because additional training had been provided to the IRS employees. She dismissed the value of bright line rules, stating: “If I have 10 bright line rules, someone will come up with 11.”⁹⁶⁷ Yet three weeks earlier, in an April 4, 2013 email to the EO Technical Unit, Mr. Lerner had written: “We need guidance on c4, we need guidance on c4, we need guidance on c4 ... IRS is getting hammered!”⁹⁶⁸ A year earlier, in March 2012, Ms. Lerner pleaded with the Chief Counsel’s attorneys to complete work on a draft guidesheet: “[M]y staff can’t wait for formal guidance to do their jobs. ... (7) Apologizing for IRS Conduct

As the release date for the TIGTA audit report neared, Acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller decided to try to preempt news coverage of the negative audit results by having Lois Lerner disclose the audit before it was released and apologize for the agency’s conduct during a conference she was scheduled to address. On May 10, 2013, at the direction of Mr. Miller and in response to a planted question, Ms. Lerner apologized for the IRS’ having used “Tea Party” to identify 501(c)(4) applications that were then subjected to heightened scrutiny. Her apology triggered a firestorm of criticism centered on the concern that the IRS may have shown political bias against conservative groups seeking tax exempt status. The Acting IRS Commissioner was asked to resign and most of the EO senior leadership was replaced. The apology also generated intense interest in the TIGTA audit report which was released the following week.

Planning the Apology. Acting IRS Commissioner Miller was given a copy of the draft TIGTA audit report in April 2013.⁹⁷⁰ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he wanted to release information about the audit results before the TIGTA report was actually issued, because he knew it would be a negative report and he wanted the IRS to get out in front of the report.⁹⁷¹ He said that, at the time, although the report seemed to suggest that the IRS had been targeting Tea Party groups when it wasn’t, he did not fully recognize the “toxic nature” of the report and the impact it would have on the reputation of the IRS.⁹⁷²

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he knew Ms. Lerner was speaking at a conference sponsored by the American Bar Association (ABA) on May 10, 2013, and he thought it might make sense to plant a question for her at the conference which she could use to mention the audit report and apologize for agency missteps.⁹⁷³ According to Mr. Miller, he realized that the Lerner apology was “not my best management performance.”⁹⁷⁴

⁹⁷⁴ Subcommittee interview of Steven Miller, IRS (12/11/2013).

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he spent several weeks prior to the ABA conference working on the apology language with senior level IRS officials. Mr. Miller indicated that he discussed the apology with members of his staff, including his Chief of Staff Nikole Flax, EO head Lois Lerner, Director of Legislative Affairs Catherine Barre, and Chief of IRS National Media Relations Michelle Eldridge, and did not receive any negative feedback.⁹⁷⁵ He said that Ms. Lerner suggested having tax attorney, Celia Roady, ask the planted question.⁹⁷⁶

IRS documents indicate that, in the three weeks leading up to the conference, several IRS officials worked on the apology language. For example, on April 21, 2013, draft apology language was circulated among Chief of Staff Nikole Flax, Director of Specialty Operations Jennifer Vozne, and Chief of the Communications and Liaison office Terry Lemons. Mr. Lemons wrote at the time: “So it’s close But I don’t think it’s quite there.”⁹⁷⁷ On May 9, 2013, the day before the conference, Mr. Miller sent another version of the apology to his staff for their review.⁹⁷⁸ The final apology given by Ms. Lerner was similar to the final draft.⁹⁷⁹ According to Holly Paz, Ms. Lerner told her about the apology prior to the conference, and Ms. Paz advised against it.⁹⁸⁰

IRS Chief Counsel, William Wilkins, told the Subcommittee that Mr. Miller informed him that Ms. Lerner would be making an apology at the upcoming ABA conference.⁹⁸¹ Mr. Wilkins told the Subcommittee that Mr. Miller had indicated to him that a controversial TIGTA audit report would be issued concerning “a provocative subject matter that would portray the IRS in a bad light.”⁹⁸² According to Mr. Wilkins, a few days before the ABA conference, Mr. Miller told Mr. Wilkins he was going to tell Congressman Boustany’s staff about the TIGTA report on the same day as the Lerner apology.⁹⁸³ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that, while he had intended the IRS to inform key Congressional committees at the same time the information was released at the ABA conference, that did not happen, which he attributed to having not provided his staff with enough time to contact the committees.⁹⁸⁴

The email provided the following draft statement: “Between 2010 and 2012, the IRS saw the number of applications for section 501(c)(4) status double. As a result, local career employees in Cincinnati sought to centralize work and assign cases to designated employees in an effort to promote consistency and quality. This approach has worked in other areas. However, the IRS recognizes we should have done a better job of handling the influx of advocacy applications. While centralizing cases for consistency made sense, the way we centralized did not. Mistakes were made, but they were in no way due to any political or partisan rationale. We have fixed the situation and worked to move the centralized cases through the system.” Id. at 908. This draft did not mention the Tea Party by name.

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that, at some point prior to May 10, 2013, he also spoke by telephone with Mark Patterson, the Chief of Staff to the Secretary of the Treasury, alerting him to the upcoming TIGTA report and indicating his plan to release information about the report prior to its issuance.⁹⁸⁵ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he asked Mr. Patterson for his reaction to the idea of a planted question at the ABA conference, and read to Mr. Patterson over the telephone a draft question and possible answer.⁹⁸⁶ Mr. Miller said that Mr. Patterson did not give him a reaction, but told him he wanted to think about it, and the two did not discuss the matter again.⁹⁸⁷

Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he also talked to Mark Mazur, Treasury Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy, about the upcoming TIGTA report and his idea of planting a question at the ABA conference, but Mr. Mazur did not give Mr. Miller a reaction to the idea.⁹⁸⁸ Mr. Miller acknowledged that, as Acting IRS Commissioner, he did not need the approval of Mr. Mazur or Mr. Patterson, but he said that had they objected, he probably would not have gone forward with his plan.⁹⁸⁹ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that he did not speak with anyone at the White House about the planned apology.⁹⁹⁰

Giving the Apology. On May 10, 2013, EO head Lois Lerner spoke before the Exempt Organizations Committee of the Tax Section of the American Bar Association in Washington, D.C. After her remarks, as planned, a member of the audience asked her the following question:

“Lois, a few months ago there was some concern about IRS review of 501(c)(4) organizations, 501(c)(4) applications by Tea Party organizations. And I’m just wondering if you can provide any update on any of that.”⁹⁹¹

Ms. Lerner responded as follows:

“So our line people in Cincinnati that handle the applications did what we call centralization of these cases. They centralized work on these in one particular group. ... So centralization was perfectly fine. However, in this case the way they did the centralization was not so fine. Instead of referring to the cases as advocacy cases, they actually used case names on this list. They used names like Tea Party, or Patriots. They selected cases simply because the application had those names in the title. That was wrong, that was absolutely incorrect, it was insensitive, and it was inappropriate. That’s not how we go about selecting cases for further review. We select them for further review because they need further review, not because they have a particular name. ... So I guess my bottom line here is, we, I think the IRS, would like to apologize for that. It was not intentional.”⁹⁹²

Reacting to the Apology. Ms. Lerner’s apology generated an immediate press reaction, with numerous negative press stories written about the IRS’ inappropriate scrutiny of Tea Party organizations.

In addition, the Subcommittee was told that many IRS employees in the Cincinnati office were furious at Ms. Lerner’s apology, believing she sought to blame lower level workers instead of management for the agency’s missteps.⁹⁹³ A few hours after the apology, Determinations head Cindy Thomas sent the following email to Ms. Lerner:

⁹⁹¹ “Transcript of the May 2010, 2013, ABA Tax Section’s Exempt Organizations Committee Meeting,” Exempt Organization Tax Review, August 2013 Vol. 9, No. 2, Tax Analysts, http://meetings.abanet.org/webupload/commupload/TX319000/sitesofinterest_files/may_2013_aba.pdf. The question was asked by Celia Rody, a Washington tax attorney. After the conference, Ms. Rody released the following statement: “On May 9, I received a call from Lois Lerner, who told me that she wanted to address an issue after her prepared remarks at the ABA Tax Section’s Exempt Organizations Committee Meeting, and asked if I would pose a question to her after her remarks. I agreed to do so, and she then gave me the question that I asked at the meeting the next day. We had no discussion thereafter on the topic of the question, nor had we spoken about any of this before I received her call. She did not tell me, and I did not know, how she would answer the question.”

⁹⁹³ EOD employees Ronald Bell, Elizabeth Hofacre, Gary Muthert, Stephen Seok, John Shafer, and Cindy Thomas all reported deep disappointment with the Lerner apology. Subcommittee

“As you can imagine, employees and managers in EO Determinations are furious. ... [I]t appears as though all the blame is being placed on Cincinnati. Joseph Grant and others who came to Cincinnati last year specially told the low-level workers in Cincinnati that no one would be ‘thrown under the bus.’ Based on the articles, Cincinnati wasn’t publicly ‘thrown under the bus’ instead was hit by a convoy of mack trucks.”⁹⁹⁴

Ms. Thomas told the Subcommittee that she also spoke with Ms. Lerner to convey her anger, but Ms. Lerner did not express regret at giving the apology.⁹⁹⁵

On the day of the apology, May 10, 2013, Ms. Lerner sent an email to senior IRS officials about the negative press coverage:

“As you both know, we are getting beaten up in the press for all the wrong reasons. Not sure there is much we can do about it – other than hang in and ride it through. When the report comes out, it will start all over again. We need to keep remembering, we did not do what they are alleging.”⁹⁹⁶

On May 12, 2013, prior to leaving for a previously scheduled trip to Canada, Ms. Lerner wrote to a colleague: “I’m afraid I have little confidence that most folks making the stink care about what is true. They’ve already decided they know without regard to the facts.”⁹⁹⁷

TIGTA personnel had a mixed reaction to the apology that had been arranged by Acting IRS Commissioner Miller. At least some at TIGTA initially believed the apology represented a well designed response to the audit report. On May 10, 2013, after the apology, David Holmgren, then TIGTA Deputy Inspector General for Inspections and Evaluations, wrote to a colleague: “Mike, this is a brilliant preemptive strike by the IRS; when we release next week it will be old news.”⁹⁹⁸ On May 12, 2013, TIGTA’s Communications Director Karen Kraushaar

“I have not responded to any reporters this weekend. At this point I do not see the merit in engaging with reporters until we have something concrete to share, such as a date and time for a media briefing. I am hopeful that TIGTA may be able to offer that tomorrow or Tuesday, and have suggested expedited disclosure review so that we can schedule briefings on the final report in an orderly fashion for congressionals and media as soon as possible. By jumping the gun with its public apology, the IRS created some confusion and inaccuracy about the nature of our report and findings, which we can set straight by releasing the final report without delay. Should be an interesting week!”⁹⁹⁹

The next day, after receiving a request for Mr. George to appear on a television show, Ms. Kraushaar wrote: “I recommend a strategy of politely declining until such time as we are ready to release our report. I think it is important that you be able to remain above the political fray until then.” Mr. George responded: “I agree with you.”¹⁰⁰⁰

Dismissing IRS Leadership. On May 15, 2013, Acting IRS Commissioner Miller met with Congressional staff on Capitol Hill, and blamed what was becoming a full-blown scandal on two “rogue agents” in the IRS Cincinnati office, whom he said had been disciplined.¹⁰⁰¹ Mr. Miller told the Subcommittee that, in hindsight, it was a mistake to have tried to blame lower level IRS employees.¹⁰⁰² He also said that, in retrospect, the IRS should not have mentioned only conservative groups in its apology, since liberal groups had been subjected to heightened scrutiny in the same ways.¹⁰⁰³

Later on May 15, 2013, President Obama announced Mr. Miller’s resignation.¹⁰⁰⁴ That evening, President Obama addressed the nation on television, calling the IRS’ actions “inexcusable.” He stated: “Americans are right to be angry about it, and I’m angry about it,” adding that he “will not tolerate this kind of behavior in any agency, but

(8) Releasing the Audit Report

On May 14, 2013, TIGTA released its 501(c)(4) audit report, “Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review.” The report’s primary findings were as follows:

“The IRS used inappropriate criteria that identified for review Tea Party and other organizations applying for tax-exempt status based upon their names or policy positions instead of indications of potential political campaign intervention. Ineffective management 1) allowed inappropriate criteria to be developed and stay in place for more than 18 months, 2) resulted in substantial delays in processing certain applications, and 3) allowed unnecessary information requests to be issued.”¹⁰⁰⁹

The audit report noted that some 501(c) applications had been pending for more than three years.¹⁰¹⁰ It also found that, while the IRS had failed to subject some applications to heightened scrutiny when it should have, the IRS had also subjected others to heightened scrutiny when it should not have.¹⁰¹¹ In addition, the audit report observed that “there appeared to be some confusion by Determinations Unit specialists and applicants on what activities are allowed by I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organizations ... due to the lack of specific guidance on how to determine the ‘primary activity’ of an I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organization.”¹⁰¹²

Although the TIGTA audit engagement letter had indicated that the audit’s “overall objective” was to “assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function's identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues," including whether "conservative groups" experienced "inconsistent treatment," the audit report did not contain any explicit finding on whether political bias had influenced the IRS' actions.¹⁰¹³ In a June 6, 2014 letter responding to a Subcommittee question asking about political bias, TIGTA Inspector General George wrote: "I also testified before Congress that TIGTA found no evidence of political bias during this audit. However, it is important to note that the matter is being further reviewed."¹⁰¹⁴ Despite that determination by TIGTA addressing the most important issue under examination, the TIGTA audit report inexplicably failed to include that finding.

The report did contain a number of recommendations to remedy problems with the 501(c) application process, which TIGTA summarized as follows:

"TIGTA recommended that the IRS finalize the interim actions taken, better document the reasons why applications potentially involving political campaign intervention are chosen for review, develop a process to track requests for assistance, finalize and publish guidance, develop and provide training to employees before each election cycle, expeditiously resolve remaining political campaign intervention cases (some of which have been in process for three years), and request that social welfare activity guidance be developed by the Department of the Treasury."¹⁰¹⁵

After its release, the TIGTA audit report was the subject of thousands of media reports, most critical of the IRS. Many media reports indicated that the TIGTA audit report had found that the IRS had targeted conservative groups and subjected them to harsher treatment than other groups, even though the TIGTA personnel interviewed by the Subcommittee uniformly stated that the report had found no evidence of political bias or politically motivated actions at the IRS.¹⁰¹⁶

¹⁰¹³ TIGTA's failure to provide an explicit finding on political bias stood in sharp contrast to the 2000 report on the same subject prepared by the Joint Committee on Taxation, which TIGTA's auditors had consulted prior to conducting their work. (9) Testifying on the Audit Results

After the audit report was released, TIGTA Inspector General George was asked to testify at six Congressional hearings about its findings. He testified on May 17, 2013, before the House Committee on Ways and Means;¹⁰¹⁷ on May 21, 2013, before the Senate Committee on Finance;¹⁰¹⁸ on May 22, 2013, before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform;¹⁰¹⁹ and on June 3, 2013, before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Financial Services and General Government.¹⁰²⁰ He testified a second time before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on July 18, 2013,¹⁰²¹ and a second time before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Financial Services and General Government on February 26, 2014.¹⁰²²

No Political Bias. One of the key issues raised in the hearings was whether IRS personnel had unfairly targeted Tea Party groups for special scrutiny and did so because of political bias against conservative groups. TIGTA Inspector General repeatedly testified that the audit had found no evidence of IRS political bias. As explained earlier, however, he made no mention of the strongest evidence of IRS impartiality, the finding made by the TIGTA Office of Investigations that thousands of IRS emails and other documents contained “no indication” that IRS actions had been “politically motivated,” because, according to Mr. George, no one on his staff had informed him of that finding.

At his first Congressional hearing about the audit report, which took place before the House Committee on Ways and Means on May 17, 2013, the Inspector General offered this unqualified testimony:

“Congressman Sander Levin: Did you find any evidence of political motivation in the selection of the tax exemption applications?”

(3/26/2014). Mr. George also expressed regret that the report had been misinterpreted.

Mr. George: We did not, sir.”¹⁰²³

Later in the hearing, Mr. George offered a more qualified statement:

“Congressman Reed: [Y]ou made some comments in your testimony about the partisanship determination. You kept referencing [w]hat I've seen many times in my legal career, ‘at this time.’ That implies to me that there are additional investigations coming down the – the pipeline that potentially could uncover such information. Isn't that correct?”

Mr. George: That is an accurate statement, sir.”¹⁰²⁴

Four days later, at a hearing before the Senate Committee on Finance on May 21, 2013, the Inspector General implied that the audit report's finding was based solely on denials of political bias made by the IRS personnel involved with the 501(c)(4) application process:

“Senator Crapo: Mr. George – is it seems that there is an argument being made that there was no political motivation in these actions. Is that a conclusion that you have reached?

Mr. George: In the review that we conducted thus far, Senator, that is the conclusion that we have reached.

Senator Crapo: And how do you reach that kind of a conclusion?

Mr. George: In this instance, it was as a result of the interviews that were conducted

Senator Crapo: So, in other words, you have simply the statements of those who were engaging in the conduct saying they were not politically motivated?

Mr. George: That is correct, sir.

Senator Crapo: And based on that, and statements not under oath, you have reached the conclusion there was no political motivation.

Mr. George: Yes.

Senator Crapo: Now, have you reached the conclusion that there was none, or that you have not found it?

Mr. George: It is the latter, that we have not found any, sir.”¹⁰²⁵

In his testimony, Inspector General George began by saying TIGTA had reached the conclusion that there was no political motivation behind the IRS' actions, but then qualified that finding by stating it was based on the TIGTA review "conducted thus far," and relied "simply" on denials made by IRS personnel. In four Congressional appearances, the Inspector General made no mention of the documentary review that had been conducted by the TIGTA Office of Investigation of over 2,200 internal IRS emails and other documents, and its finding that the documents contained "no indication" that IRS actions in pulling 501(c)(4) applications for heightened review had been "politically motivated." Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he did not mention the documentary review, because no one on his staff had informed him of the TIGTA Office of Investigations finding, even though it addressed a central issue in the audit, whether the IRS had shown political bias in handling 501(c)(4) applications.

BOLO Entries for Liberal Groups. A related issue at the hearings involved the question of whether the IRS had used BOLOs to flag 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups in addition to conservative groups. Evidence recited earlier shows that the IRS had repeatedly brought the BOLO entries for liberal groups to the attention of the TIGTA auditors to demonstrate that the agency had treated all groups in the same way.¹⁰²⁶ The Subcommittee was told by senior TIGTA officials, however, that the TIGTA auditors had failed to convey that information to TIGTA senior management until after the release of the report. In fact, as indicated earlier, TIGTA Chief Counsel Michael McCarthy told the Subcommittee that when he had explicitly asked about BOLO entries for liberal groups during his review of the draft audit report in February 2013, the TIGTA auditors had told him none existed.¹⁰²⁷

The Subcommittee was told that the senior TIGTA officials first learned of the BOLO entries for liberal groups after the Congressional hearings were already underway. The key event took place on May 21, 2013, after the Inspector General had testified earlier in the day before a Congressional committee about the audit report, and before he was due to testify a third time before a different committee on the following day.¹⁰²⁸ Mr. McCarthy told the Subcommittee that, because there had been a Congressional request for copies of the BOLOs, he had decided to personally review the documents to ensure appropriate information had been redacted. He indicated that, about 7 p.m. on the evening of

May 21, 2013, he opened the BOLO document on his computer screen at the office, and began to review the individual excel spreadsheets used for the various BOLO sections, including the spreadsheet for the Watch List section. He told the Subcommittee that when he reviewed the Watch List section and saw for the first time the BOLO entries for ACORN and Occupy groups, he was “surprised and confused.”¹⁰²⁹

Inspector General George told the Subcommittee that Mr. McCarthy informed him about the two liberal group BOLO entries that same night, which was the night before he was supposed to testify before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform.¹⁰³⁰ The Inspector General indicated that Mr. McCarthy had approached him, said “you’d better sit down for this,” and then relayed that the IRS had two BOLO listings naming liberal groups in addition to the one naming Tea Party groups.¹⁰³¹ Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he asked Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Kutz, who was also present, how the IRS had used those entries to identify 501(c)(4) applications, and both responded that they didn’t know the answer.¹⁰³² The Inspector General said that he immediately told Mr. Kutz to look into those BOLO entries and how they were used by the IRS.¹⁰³³

Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that, like Mr. McCarthy and the Inspector General, he first learned of the two BOLO listings naming liberal groups on the evening of May 21, 2013.¹⁰³⁴ Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that after he was directed by the Inspector General to find out more, he immediately asked his audit team about the BOLO entries for the liberal groups and was told by his team that those entries had not come up during the audit.¹⁰³⁵ That assertion is at odds, however, with the evidence presented earlier showing that, from the beginning of the audit, TIGTA personnel were aware of issues related to IRS treatment of liberal groups and, throughout the audit, IRS personnel repeatedly drew the attention of the TIGTA auditors to the BOLO entries listing ACORN, Occupy, and Progressive groups.¹⁰³⁶

Mr. George told the Subcommittee that, at the Congressional hearing the next day, May 22, 2013, he did not disclose the existence of the BOLO entries naming the ACORN and Occupy groups, due to concerns that he didn't know how those BOLO entries had been used by the IRS and might violate Section 6103, the tax code provision barring IRS disclosure of individual taxpayer information.¹⁰³⁷ At the hearing, when asked about BOLO listings for liberal groups, Mr. George testified that TIGTA had "recently identified some other BOLOs that raised concerns about political factors," but declined to provide specific information about them:

"Chairman Issa. Were there any BOLOs issued for progressive groups, liberal groups? Because I'm assuming that your investigation – we can't see them – but your investigation showed liberal groups that flew right through during the same time and got their 501(c)(4)s. They were not stopped; isn't that correct?"

Mr. George. Sir, this is a very important question. Please, I beg your indulgence.

Chairman Issa. Of course.

Mr. George. The only 'be on the lookout,' that is, BOLO, used to refer cases for political review were the ones that we described within our report. There were other BOLOs used for other purposes. For example, there were lookouts for indicators of known fraud schemes so that they could be referred to the group that handles those issues. For nationwide organizations, there were notes to refer State and local chapters to the same reviewers. As we continue our review of this matter, we have recently identified some other BOLOs that raised concerns about political factors. I can't get into more detail at this time as to the information that is ¹⁰³⁶ See Report section on Conducting the Audit. For example, as documented in that section, the BOLOs containing entries for liberal groups were provided to the TIGTA auditors in March 2012, and again in the summer of 2012. At the same time, the documentation does not demonstrate that the auditors conveyed the information about the BOLO entries for liberal groups to senior TIGTA officials. One TIGTA summary of a September 2012 meeting between Mr. Kutz and the TIGTA auditors indicated that they discussed the issue of 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups, but did not indicate that they discussed, in particular, the BOLO entries for liberal groups. See 9/25/2012 "Memo of Contact," prepared by TIGTA, "Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-exempt Status Involving Political Advocacy Cases," TIGTA Bates No. 003084 (indicating Mr. Kutz and the auditors discussed "whether more liberal organizations were referred to the advocacy group" at IRS, and the difficulty of distinguishing between conservative and liberal groups).

¹⁰³⁷ Subcommittee interview of Russell George, TIGTA (4/22/2014). Unlike the IRS, TIGTA has taken the position that disclosing IRS actions related to "ACORN successor" groups would violate Section 6103 of the tax code which requires the IRS to keep specific taxpayer information confidential, even though that phrase does not name any specific taxpayer.

Chairman Issa. Of course.

Mr. George. – involved here, too. I hope that provides context[.],¹⁰³⁸

Mr. George was then asked whether the IRS had a BOLO entry for “progressive” groups and if he was aware of any other group, other than the Tea Party, that had been “targeted politically” in a BOLO. After initially declining to answer and then being pressed for a response, Mr. George answered there were no such BOLO entries, which he should have known was inaccurate, given the BOLO entries he had learned about the night before:

“Chairman Issa. So, clearly, it's fair to say, though, that there was a BOLO for Tea Party but not a BOLO for MoveOn or Progressive?

Mr. George. I'm not in a position to give you a definitive response on that question at this time, Mr. Issa – Mr. Chairman.

Chairman Issa. So are you saying today that there were other 501(c)(4)s, not specific, so much as one other 501(c)(4) not previously identified during your IG audit that were, in fact, targeted and held in a similar way?

Mr. George. I cannot give you a definitive answer, sir, at this time. But I certainly will when –

Chairman Issa. I only asked you if there's at least one. Are you aware of at least one that was targeted using a BOLO that was a 501(c)(4) in which they were targeted politically but did not fall into this current report we have before us? I'm not asking for privileged information. I'm asking –

Mr. George. No, no, no.

Chairman Issa. – for one.

Mr. George. Under the report, the review – the purposes of the audit that we conducted, which was to determine whether they were looked for in the context of political campaign intervention, there were no others.”¹⁰³⁹

Mr. George testified that there were no other groups that had been “targeted politically” in a BOLO despite having learned the night before that the BOLO lists named ACORN and Occupy groups in the same manner as Tea Party groups. In addition, as indicated earlier, a BOLO entry for “progressive” groups had been included in the BOLO lists since 2010.¹⁰⁴⁰

Mr. George told the Subcommittee at the time of his testimony on May 22, 2013, he had become aware of the BOLO entries for the two liberal-leaning groups, ACORN and Occupy, but remained unaware of the BOLO entry for “progressive” groups.¹⁰⁴¹ TIGTA Chief Counsel Michael McCarthy told the Subcommittee that, at the time of the May 22, 2013 hearing, he was also unaware of the BOLO entry for Progressive groups, since during his review of the BOLO lists the evening before, he had not seen the specific spreadsheet containing that entry.¹⁰⁴² Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that he, too, was unaware of the Progressive BOLO entry at the time of the May 22 hearing.¹⁰⁴³ That all three senior TIGTA officials professed to the Subcommittee to have no knowledge of the BOLO entry for Progressive groups, despite its being listed in the BOLOs reviewed the night before, does not excuse the failure of Mr. George to disclose the existence of the BOLO listings for the two liberal-leaning groups, ACORN and Occupy, either at the hearing or to correct his testimony in the weeks that followed.

TIGTA’s silence about the BOLO listings for liberal groups continued for weeks after its senior leadership learned about them, despite ongoing media and Congressional inquiries and public consternation about possible political bias at the IRS. According to TIGTA, on May 28, 2013, the TIGTA Office of Audit asked the TIGTA Office of Investigations to examine how the IRS used BOLO listings on the Watch List section, which includes the ACORN and Occupy listings, but still did not reveal the existence of those BOLO entries to the public.¹⁰⁴⁴

Disclosure of BOLO Entries for Liberal Groups. Ultimately, the Progressive, ACORN, and Occupy BOLO listings were publicly disclosed by Members of Congress and the media, rather than TIGTA. On June 24, 2013, six weeks after the TIGTA audit report was released and a month after the House hearing at which the TIGTA Inspector General denied the existence of BOLO listings for liberal groups, Congressman Sander Levin, Ranking Member of the House Committee on Ways and Means, released a letter disclosing publicly, for the first time, the existence of the Progressive BOLO entry.¹⁰⁴⁵ TIGTA Chief Counsel Michael McCarthy told the Subcommittee that he learned about the Progressive BOLO entry from the Levin letter for the first time; he said it had not been disclosed to him by TIGTA's audit team, and he had missed it during his personal review of the BOLO listings.¹⁰⁴⁶ That same day, the Associated Press reported on a number of other BOLO listings, including one for Occupy groups.¹⁰⁴⁷ A month after that, on August 20, 2013, Congressman Sander Levin released documents disclosing the existence of the BOLO entry for ACORN successor groups.¹⁰⁴⁸

Each of these BOLO entries could have been easily found by the TIGTA audit team or TIGTA senior managers had they carefully

BOLO listings that were not related to potential political cases reviewed as part of our audit. TIGTA's Office of Audit requested the Office of Investigations investigate to determine: 1) whether cases meeting the criteria on the 'watch list' [a particular section of the BOLO listings] were routed for any additional or specialized review, or were simply referred to the same group for coordinated processing; 2) how many (if any) applications were affected by use of these criteria; 3) who was responsible for the inclusion of these criteria on the BOLO lists; and 4) whether these criteria were added to the BOLO for an improper purpose." Mr. Kutz told the Subcommittee that as part of this review, the Office of Investigations was asked to look at the "progressive" BOLO listing. Subcommittee interview of Gregory Kutz, TIGTA (3/26/2014). During the Subcommittee interviews, however, no one from TIGTA had any information about whether the referral had been accepted by the Office of Investigations or whether an investigation into IRS processing of applications filed by liberal groups was ongoing.

The IRS determined that information could be disclosed about "ACORN successor" groups without violating Section 6103 of the tax code which requires the IRS to keep specific taxpayer information confidential, since that phrase does not disclose the name of any specific taxpayer. In contrast, TIGTA has determined that disclosures related to ACORN successor groups would violate Section 6103 and has been unwilling to discuss those groups.

reviewed the BOLO lists already in their possession. Had the TIGTA Inspector General disclosed during his Congressional testimony the existence of the BOLO listings for two liberal-leaning groups – ACORN and Occupy – even without naming them, it would have addressed a central issue in the TIGTA audit, whether the IRS had shown political bias in the 501(c)(4) application process or was treating liberal groups the same way it treated conservative groups.

Instead, the TIGTA Inspector General continued to make statements implying that the IRS had unfairly singled out the Tea Party and other conservative groups in the 501(c)(4) application process. For example, at a June 3, 2013 hearing before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Financial Services and General Government, in response to a question about whether TIGTA had “found any political motivation in reviewing tax-exempt applications,” Mr. George testified:

“[B]ut in the instance of the political activity matter, we did not uncover instances of groups that could readily be identified as being liberal, for lack of a better term, that were treated in the manner that these Tea Party cases were.”¹⁰⁴⁹

The factual basis for his testimony is unclear, given that the TIGTA audit team deliberately chose not to audit how liberal groups were treated by the IRS in the 501(c)(4) application process; if that audit work had taken place, TIGTA would have discovered that liberal groups like ACORN, Occupy, and Emerge were subjected to the same types of inappropriate screening criteria, delays, and mismanagement as the conservative groups.

When asked about his testimony, the TIGTA Inspector General wrote the following in a letter to the Subcommittee:

“In the audit report, TIGTA did not characterize any organizations as liberal or conservative. Nor did we assess whether liberal groups were treated in a manner different than Tea Party groups. ... In my testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Financial Services and General Government, I was conveying that, in the audit report, we did not characterize the political views of any organizations. Many of the names of the organizations used terms not readily categorized on the political spectrum, and we did not identify any objective criteria that we could use to label these groups in a manner that meets government auditing standards.”¹⁰⁵⁰

Later in the June 3, 2013 hearing, when asked if he had been surprised by what the audit found, Inspector General George responded “very much so,” and then compared the IRS’ mishandling of 501(c)(4) applications filed by conservative groups to President Nixon’s misuse of the IRS to harm political opponents:

“This is unprecedented, Congressman. And again, during the Nixon administration, there were attempts to use the Internal Revenue Service in manners that might be comparable in terms of misusing it. I am not saying that what the actions that were taken are comparable, but I’m just saying that the misuse of the – causing a distrust of the system occurred sometime ago, but this is unprecedented.”¹⁰⁵¹

When asked about those comments, Mr. George told the Subcommittee that he was noting that the IRS had been abused in the past by the Nixon Administration, but did not equate that with the 501(c)(4) situation.¹⁰⁵² He also stated: “There is no connection between the White House and this.”¹⁰⁵³

On June 25, 2013, TIGTA’s “spokeswoman,” presumably TIGTA Communications Director Karen Kraushaar, told National Public Radio that TIGTA was “not aware of any BOLOs listing progressive organizations when it conducted its review.”¹⁰⁵⁴ That statement was, again, contrary to the documents cited earlier showing IRS personnel repeatedly brought information about the BOLO entries for liberal groups to the attention of TIGTA auditors.

For instance: Why wasn’t this mentioned sooner? The IRS inspector general’s report is clear: Tea Party groups were targeted by the IRS for extra scrutiny simply because they had ‘Tea Party’ or ‘patriot’ in their names. But the audit didn’t mention progressive groups.”).

On July 18, 2013, both Inspector General George and Assistant Inspector for Audit General Kutz testified before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform and denied that TIGTA had known about the BOLO entries for liberal groups during the audit period.¹⁰⁵⁵ In his opening statement, Inspector General George testified:

“I know you have questions and so do we on the other Be On the Look Out listings, but from the date of the May 17, 2012 document until we issued our report one year later, IRS staff at multiple levels concurred with our analysis citing Tea Party, Patriot, and 9/12 and certain policy positions as the criteria the IRS used to select potential political cases In fact, as previously noted, we provided IRS officials with several opportunities to comment on our findings and they consistently agreed that, ‘Tea Party,’ and related criteria described in our report were the criteria that the IRS used to select cases for review of potential political campaign intervention during the 2010 to 2012 time frame that we reviewed.”¹⁰⁵⁶

While the evidence shows that Mr. George was correct – the IRS did agree with TIGTA that it had used “Tea Party,” “Patriot,” and “9/12” as screening criteria – what he left out was that the IRS also repeatedly informed TIGTA auditors that it had used screening criteria for liberal groups as well, which demonstrated that the IRS had not singled out conservative groups or acted out of political bias. Since the July hearing took place nearly two months after Mr. George and Mr. Kutz were told by the TIGTA Chief Counsel about the BOLO listings for liberal groups, it is difficult to understand why TIGTA’s senior management had not conducted by then an intensive review of what their auditors had known about the BOLO entries for liberal groups. That type of review would have uncovered, for example, the May 17, 2012 meeting summary prepared by the lead TIGTA auditor, cited earlier, indicating that IRS personnel had drawn the auditors’ attention to the BOLO listings for liberal groups in the earliest stage of the audit.¹⁰⁵⁷

Nevertheless, during the July 18, 2013 hearing, Mr. Kutz insisted that the IRS had not told the TIGTA auditors about the BOLO entries for liberal groups, despite ample evidence to the contrary. Mr. Kutz testified:

“I just want to say, I mean, what Mr. George submitted at the beginning of the hearing is called the BOLO advocacy cases iterations. It was given to us May 17, 2012, and represented by the IRS to be the entire set of BOLOs that were used for political advocacy. We’re not making this up. We’ve submitted it for the record. If IRS was doing something beyond that, they never made it apparent to us in an entire year of doing an audit. So I just want to make that clear. If other people were misused, we’re very concerned about that, but IRS is the one that asserted to us in this email and a document Mr. George submitted for the record that the entire population of BOLOs used for political advocacy is on the document that says Tea Party until Lois Lerner changed it to advocacy in July of 2011.”¹⁰⁵⁸

The head of the EO Rulings and Agreements Unit at the IRS, Holly Paz, told the Subcommittee that when she heard Mr. Kutz’s testimony, she was “surprised,” given her repeated actions in bringing the BOLO entries for liberal groups to the attention of the TIGTA audit team.¹⁰⁵⁹

At times during the hearing, the TIGTA officials seemed to suggest that IRS personnel had deliberately withheld documents from TIGTA auditors about the BOLOs for liberal groups, even though the IRS had been urging TIGTA to consider those same BOLO entries:

“Congressman Jordan: I’m looking at your testimony, Mr. George. You said, ‘New documents from July 2010 listing the term, “progressive” were provided to TIGTA last week on July 9th, 2013.’ You’re disturbed that these weren’t provided earlier. I get that. ‘We are currently reviewing the issue.’ What can you tell us? Without violating 6103, what can you tell us?

Mr. George: Great question, sir. I don’t know whether they were withheld intentionally. I don’t know—I don’t know the circumstances. Again, I may defer to Mr. Kutz, if he has additional information on that. But I don’t know because I just learned about this.

Mr. Kutz: We don’t know. But, Congressman, throughout the entire audit, starting May 17, and the document Mr. George submitted to the record, we were given a listing of the BOLOs that were —

Congressman Jordan: ... So they had all kinds of opportunities to tell you this was there. They didn't tell you. Suddenly it appears, because the Democrats keep talking about it, appears out of nowhere. You're currently reviewing it. I mean, is there anything else you can tell us about the current review?

Mr. George: It tells me I'm concerned that there may be additional pieces of information that we don't have. I am very concerned about that, sir.”¹⁰⁶⁰

The testimony provided by Mr. George and Mr. Kutz implied that the IRS had attempted to conceal information from TIGTA about the BOLO entries for liberal groups when, in fact, the IRS had been pleading with TIGTA auditors for nearly a year to consider, not only those BOLO entries, but also IRS treatment of 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups, to show that conservative groups were not singled out for less favorable treatment. In response, the TIGTA auditors failed to investigate any information related to liberal groups.

TIGTA Reconsideration. Mr. George and Mr. Kutz indicated to the Subcommittee during their interviews that they had since reconsidered how the audit report treated 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups. During his interview, TIGTA Inspector General George told the Subcommittee that, although the TIGTA audit report contained a footnote noting that TIGTA did not review “the use of other named organizations on the BOLO listing to determine if their use was appropriate,” in hindsight, TIGTA should have elaborated on that footnote.¹⁰⁶¹ Mr. George told the Subcommittee that the failure to explain more about the decision to exclude other BOLO entries was a “judgment call” by the auditors, and that the report could have been “better.”¹⁰⁶² He indicated that the audit report should have acknowledged the existence of the other BOLO entries and the auditors should have looked into the other groups.¹⁰⁶³

During his interview, Mr. Kutz acknowledged to the Subcommittee that “now that we know the interest in it,” TIGTA should have potentially looked into or included the Progressive, ACORN, and Occupy BOLO listings in its analysis.¹⁰⁶⁴ He also noted, however, that to do so would have taken another year which would have delayed the report's issuance.¹⁰⁶⁵ Mr. Kutz also told the Subcommittee that the evidence indicated that all 501(c)(4) applications within the 298 cases provided by the IRS for the two-year period, May 2010 to May 2012, appeared to have been treated the same by IRS personnel, subjected to the same screening, delays, and problematic questions from the IRS, regardless of their politics.¹⁰⁶⁶

D. Analysis

By excluding information about how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups, the TIGTA audit report presented a distorted analysis of how the IRS processed 501(c)(4) applications. The audit determined that no political bias was involved in the IRS decisionmaking process, but the audit report contained no explicit finding on that central issue. The report discussed the BOLO listing naming the Tea Party and other conservative groups, but made no mention of the BOLO listings naming Progressive, ACORN, or Occupy groups. After receiving a pool of 298 501(c)(4) applications subjected to heightened scrutiny by the IRS over a two-year period, the report analyzed how many applications were filed by groups with the words "Tea Party," "9/12," or "Patriot" in their names, with no mention of cases filed by non-conservative or liberal groups. The audit report also made no mention of the Office of Investigations email review and its conclusion that IRS documents contained "no indication" that IRS decisions to select the 501(c)(4) applications for heightened review were politically motivated. Those omissions, as well as TIGTA's overall decision to exclude any comparative data on how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by liberal groups, resulted in a report that failed to present a full and fair picture of IRS actions.

After the audit report was issued, and senior TIGTA officials learned that it had omitted key information about BOLO entries for liberal groups, those TIGTA officials remained silent for weeks about the existence of those BOLO entries, until they were disclosed by Members of Congress or the media. Senior TIGTA officials also gave incomplete and inaccurate testimony at Congressional hearings about the BOLO entries for liberal groups, initially denying they existed despite having been informed of them prior to testifying, later denying TIGTA auditors had known about those BOLO entries, and at one point suggesting that the IRS may have deliberately withheld information about them when, in fact, the IRS had repeatedly supplied information about those BOLO entries to the TIGTA auditors.

TIGTA's failure to include an official finding in its audit report that the IRS showed no political bias and its failure to present information about how the IRS treated liberal as well as conservative groups filing 501(c)(4) applications damaged public confidence in a critical government agency, undermined public faith in IRS neutrality, and encouraged public suspicions about the IRS despite the absence of any evidence that the IRS or any of its employees engaged in politically motivated actions. Given public concerns about political bias and the potential damage to the reputation and standing of an important public agency, the TIGTA audit report should have provided a more balanced and comprehensive picture of how the IRS handled 501(c)(4) applications filed by both conservative and liberal groups.

One positive outcome from the TIGTA audit report is that it spurred a comprehensive review of the role of the IRS in processing 501(c)(4) applications for organizations involved with political advocacy and campaign activities. The audit report recommended and the IRS has responded by drafting proposed rules to revamp the agency's approach and provide the guidance needed to process applications in a more objective, transparent, consistent, and timely manner. The proposed rules should reduce IRS use of the facts and circumstances test, which is inherently time-consuming, intrusive, nontransparent, and subjective, and make greater use of objective standards and bright line rules to determine when an organization is engaged in campaign activities. The proposed rules should also reduce use of the facts and circumstances test to determine when an organization is engaged primarily in social welfare activities, moving closer toward the statutory requirement of exclusivity and using more objective standards that, among other measures, should establish a clearly defined percentage test. The IRS is now considering more than 150,000 public comments on how the proposed rules should be shaped and has indicated that it intends to continue to press forward to address the mismanagement and public distrust that now taint the 501(c)(4) applications process.

MINORITY STAFF DISSENTING VIEWS: IRS TARGETING TEA PARTY GROUPS

I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Majority staff on the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations has issued the foregoing report titled IRS and TIGTA Management Failures Related to 501(c)(4) Applicants Engaged in Campaign Activity. The primary conclusion of the Majority staff report is that, contrary to common understanding and widespread reporting, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) actually exhibited no bias in its review of conservative groups. The Majority staff report claims that the IRS targeted liberal and conservative groups equally and that a Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) report on the targeting of conservative groups was fundamentally flawed.

The Subcommittee Minority staff sharply disagrees with the conclusions reached by the Majority staff report. While some liberal groups were examined by the IRS from May 2010 to May 2012, there were far fewer such groups, they were systematically separate from the review of conservative groups, their questioning was far less intrusive, and, in some cases, the liberal groups were affiliates of specific organizations like ACORN that had behaved illegally in the past and could reasonably expect additional scrutiny. The inclusion of a scant few liberal groups by the IRS does not bear comparison to the targeting of conservative groups.

Although the Majority and Minority have profound differences and were unable to come to an agreement in their analysis of this matter, the Subcommittee conducted its investigation through joint interviews and document requests, and continued its tradition of in-depth fact-finding and frequent consultations that are the hallmark of the Subcommittee's oversight work and lead to a deepened understanding of key issues.

A. Question of Political Bias and Disparate Impact

The Majority report asserts that there was no political bias in the way the IRS selected groups for additional scrutiny and that conservative and liberal groups were treated equally. This is simply untrue. The IRS screening resulted in a clearly disparate impact on conservative group applications. Of the groups applying for tax-exempt status that were pulled from normal processing and received additional scrutiny by the IRS, 83% (or 248 out of 298) of the groups were “right leaning” organizations.¹⁰⁶⁷

On July 30, 2014, the House Committee on Ways and Means published a study detailing the number of questions posed to conservative and progressive applicants for tax-exempt status.¹⁰⁶⁸ The IRS asked conservative groups 1,552 questions, an average of 14.9 questions per group. Meanwhile, the 7 progressive groups were asked a mere 33 questions in total, or 4.7 per group.¹⁰⁶⁹ Conservative groups were asked on average more than triple the number of questions posed to progressive organizations.

In addition, the chart above shows that the progressive groups examined by the IRS were all approved, while less than half of the conservative groups were approved.

The Majority report further attempts to diminish the disparate impact of the IRS targeting on conservative groups by stating that “more conservative than liberal groups filed for 501(c)(4) tax exempt status from 2010 to 2013, underwent IRS scrutiny, and ultimately won tax exempt status.”¹⁰⁷⁰ The Majority report’s interpretation of the evidence fails, however, to accurately account for the impact of the targeting on conservative groups. The true impact on conservative groups becomes clear when comparing the percentage of liberal and conservative applicants ultimately approved for tax-exempt status. This analysis shows that 70% of liberal group applicants placed on a separate list and scrutinized by the IRS were approved, whereas only 45% of conservative group applicants were granted tax-exempt status.¹⁰⁷¹ When the vast disparity in the number of questions asked of and the far lower tax-exempt approval rate for conservative groups are considered, it is clear that conservative and liberal groups were not treated equally. In fact, it plainly evidences that there was a sharp disparate impact on conservative groups as a result of the targeting.

B. Unresolved Factual Issues Meriting Further Investigation

The Majority’s report claims to be able to draw definitive conclusions based on the available evidence. However, although the Subcommittee has spent over a year on this investigation, two major questions have yet to be resolved: whether there was political bias motivating the targeting and to what extent outside actors influenced the IRS’s actions. The Majority’s report purports to answer these questions, but does not take into account the recent release of Lois Lerner’s emails containing disparaging remarks about conservatives. Many relevant IRS emails are also still missing, key documents have not been produced, and Lois Lerner – the former Director of the IRS Office of Exempt Organizations and a key witness – continues to refuse to testify. These factual gaps indicate that this Subcommittee’s investigation is necessarily incomplete.

At the same time, in the Minority’s view, substantial evidence shows political bias was involved in this matter and further investigation is necessary to ascertain the precise extent of it and to find out who besides Ms. Lerner was involved in the targeting. Drawing any definitive conclusion before fully resolving all of the factual issues, at this point, is unwise.

Missing Sources of Information. The IRS learned in February 2014, that the IRS had lost two years of emails belonging to Ms. Lerner and six additional employees. These missing emails were from the time period when the IRS was targeting conservative group applications and would likely prove vital to the investigation. With critical information missing from the relevant time period the targeting occurred and from the head of the division responsible for the inappropriate targeting, the likelihood is more incriminating information will be found. Additionally, very recently produced emails demonstrate the presence of political bias by Ms. Lerner. Lerner revealed her animus towards conservatives in one of these recently released email exchanges from November 2012 with an unnamed sender. In the exchange, the sender complained about the “whacko wing of the GOP” and “scary” “right wing radio shows.”¹⁰⁷² The sender replied that conservative critics as being the reason that the “U.S. is through.”¹⁰⁷³ Ms. Lerner responded, “[G]reat. Maybe we are through if there are that many [redacted]holes.” Ms. Lerner called conservatives “our own crazies” and compared them to “teRrorists [sic].”¹⁰⁷⁴

The IRS allowed four months to pass before revealing the loss of two years of Ms. Lerner's emails to the House Ways and Means Committee. While the IRS revealed the loss of Ms. Lerner's emails on June 13, 2014, it took four more days until June 17 to inform the committee about the other missing emails.¹⁰⁷⁵

The day before the June 17 Ways and Means announcement, IRS Commissioner John Koskinen met with Senate Finance Committee Chair Ron Wyden and Ranking Member Orrin Hatch.¹⁰⁷⁶ During this meeting Commissioner Koskinen discussed Ms. Lerner's unrecoverable hard drive, but failed to inform them that additional employees' documents were also lost.¹⁰⁷⁷ Some of these unrecoverable emails belonged to three Washington, D.C.-based employees directly involved in the management and analysis of the Tea Party cases.¹⁰⁷⁸ These recent revelations and repeated failures to provide relevant information to congressional committees demonstrate an unacceptable culture of secrecy within the IRS. The investigation of these matters cannot be completed until all the facts about the supposed "lost" emails are uncovered.

The "lost" emails may still be recoverable, yielding important new facts. In mid-2011, Ms. Lerner's computer reportedly crashed and the information stored on her computer's hard drive was deemed unrecoverable.¹⁰⁷⁹ The IRS stated that any "email that was only stored on that computer's hard drive would have been lost," but some emails may have been stored on the IRS's central servers.¹⁰⁸⁰ It might be possible, therefore, to retrieve Ms. Lerner's emails from the IRS's network. TIGTA is currently investigating whether Ms. Lerner's emails can be recovered and produced to the relevant congressional committees.

Lack of Lerner's Testimony. Lois Lerner's refusal to testify represents a second crucial gap in information. Ms. Lerner is the former Director of the IRS Exempt Organizations division and a key figure in the scandal. groups. Without her testimony, drawing a definitive conclusion is a mistake.

Ongoing Litigation and Investigations. Additional relevant information may be made available through ongoing litigation brought by some of the targeted groups. One such group's case will soon begin the discovery process.¹⁰⁸¹ This process may lead to the production of additional documents the IRS has thus far resisted disclosing and may shed further light on other unanswered questions. One such question may involve the frequent trips by former IRS Commissioner Douglas Shulman and then-acting Commissioner Steven Miller to the White House.¹⁰⁸² Additionally, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Department of Justice have been conducting investigations with alacrity into the IRS targeting scandal.¹⁰⁸³ Their findings will likely provide further relevant information.

C. IRS Scrutiny of Liberal Groups Differed in Justification and Extent From Its Scrutiny of Conservative Groups

The Subcommittee Majority claims that the IRS targeted liberal groups and conservative groups equally.¹⁰⁸⁴ As shown in section A, that claim does not have statistical merit. In addition, liberal groups were targeted by the IRS for different reasons and in a different manner than conservative groups, which were placed on a separate listing for additional scrutiny.

The liberal groups mentioned on the "be-on-the-lookout" (BOLO) spreadsheet were selected for legitimate reasons. The BOLO spreadsheet was an IRS guidance document that alerted agents to potentially problematic types of cases. For example, the BOLO instructed IRS personnel to look out for groups associated with centrally-controlled organizations like ACORN.¹⁰⁸⁵ These organizations would also naturally be expected to undergo additional scrutiny because of previous controversies associated with their parent organizations.¹⁰⁸⁶ By contrast, the conservative groups in question were overwhelmingly independent and had no comparable history warranting heavy scrutiny.

The scrutiny endured by conservative groups also differed in kind from the scrutiny accorded to liberal groups. The IRS selected conservative groups out of normal processing, placed them on a separate list, stopped work on their applications completely, forced them to answer intrusive questions about their behavior and demeanor at meetings, and delayed their applications for multiple years. Our investigation has uncovered no evidence that liberal groups received the same expansive inappropriate treatment that conservative groups received.

Furthermore, had liberal groups been targeted in a similarly inappropriate manner, they would have likely voiced their concerns to the IRS and Congressional leaders. Instead, we have uncovered no evidence indicating that liberal groups were writing to their members of Congress to complain about targeting by the IRS during the relevant period. All of the known complaints regarding IRS targeting and burdensome treatment came from conservative groups. These concerns spurred the TIGTA audit¹⁰⁸⁷ and ultimately led to congressional investigations by four committees and subcommittees.¹⁰⁸⁸

The assertion that the IRS targeted liberal and conservative groups equally is further undermined by the IRS's response to the TIGTA audit. The TIGTA audit detailed the pervasive use of inappropriate criteria by the IRS that led to the targeting of conservative groups' applications. Prior to releasing its audit report, TIGTA provided multiple drafts to the IRS for comment. One would expect that, had the IRS been impartially targeting liberal and conservative groups equally, it would have raised that argument in its comments. In its official response, however, the IRS did not assert that it had impartially targeted both conservative and liberal groups. Instead, the IRS responded by accepting seven of the nine TIGTA recommendations.¹⁰⁸⁹ The IRS's tacit admission to targeting only conservative groups suggests that the liberal groups were not targeted in a similar manner.

To support its conjecture that the IRS targeted liberal groups, the Subcommittee Majority staff report offers the IRS's BOLO spreadsheet as evidence. Because the BOLO spreadsheet lists liberal groups such as ACORN, Progressive, and Occupy as well as "Tea Party" cases, the Majority staff report concludes that liberal and conservative groups were targeted equally. However, the liberal organizations were grouped in different parts of the BOLO spreadsheet, meaning that the agents responsible for screening were supposed to treat them differently than they did the "Tea Party" cases.

The criteria flagging "Tea Party" groups were included on the spreadsheet tab labeled "Emerging Issues." The Emerging Issues tab was the only spreadsheet on the BOLO associated with an actual, separate list of cases referred from the BOLO. IRS screeners pulled cases based on the criteria described and placed these applications on the Advocacy Case List. These applications were then referred to a specialist for additional scrutiny.

It was the "Emerging Issues" tab, and not any other BOLO tab, that IRS agents utilized to target tax-exempt applications for additional scrutiny; even though the BOLO spreadsheet had other criteria contained in different tabs.

Other BOLO entries, like those on the Watch List tab, included criteria for identifying ACORN successors. The BOLO Watch List tab contained recommendations for processing applications, not yet received, which might present concerns. ACORN successor cases were placed on the "Watch List" because of reports that ACORN successors (i.e., groups that had once been ACORN-affiliates and had spun off after the central organization closed in 2010) might file for 501(c)(3) or (c)(4) status following the breakup of the parent organization due to fraud and misconduct.¹⁰⁹⁰ That past conduct suggested a need to continue ¹⁰⁸⁹ See generally, TIGTA Report. The IRS agreed that it should: implement the memorandum requiring the Direct of Rulings and Agreements to approve all BOLO entries and changes prior to formalization; Develop training on proper identification of political activity in applications; develop a process for Determinations to formally request assistance from the Technical and Guidance Units; Provide oversight to ensure expedient approval or denial of political cases; Have IRS Chief Counsel and Treasury develop guidance on how to measure "primary activity". Two additionally accepted recommendations involved the specifics of what the training on proper identification and handling of political cases should entail.

monitoring affiliates applying for tax-exempt status to prevent a fraudulent scheme. The reference to ACORN on the “Watch List” also considered that organizations would be applying for both 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) status. Thus, the IRS needed to monitor incoming ACORN applications to prevent potential tax fraud and abuse.

The “Watch List” also contained a 2012 listing for “Occupy” organizations affiliated with the Occupy Wall Street movement. However, the “Occupy” criteria were not added until almost two years after the initial targeting of “Tea Party” groups began. TIGTA determined that, during the timeframe that was the scope of its audit, no Occupy cases ever made it onto a list of political advocacy cases. TIGTA found no evidence to show that Occupy groups ever received the same treatment or delay that conservative groups received.¹⁰⁹¹ Thus, it appears that the inclusion of Occupy organizations on the “Watch List” did not indicate similar targeting by the IRS.

Finally, the BOLO spreadsheet included a “Historical” tab representing types of cases that were no longer active and were thus “[h]istorical” for the purposes of IRS screening. “Progressive” was listed on the “Historical” tab, and the evidence shows that the listing was for 501(c)(3) cases only. While Progressive was still listed on the BOLO, the cases relating to this tab were inactive during the time period of the TIGTA audit.¹⁰⁹² The greatest likelihood is that the Progressive 501(c)(4) cases were targeted for inclusion in the Advocacy Case List due to potential political activities, not based on the applicant’s name.

Although the IRS was fully aware of the other BOLO tabs, it specifically directed TIGTA only to the relevant “Emerging Issues” tab and the corresponding applications during the audit of political targeting. The other BOLO spreadsheet entries did not fit the scope of TIGTA’s audit.¹⁰⁹³ ¹⁰⁹² IRS0000001354; Subcommittee interview of Troy Paterson, TIGTA (3/21/2014); Subcommittee interview of Thomas Seidell, TIGTA (3/19/2014). According to the interviews with TIGTA, the Progressive listing on the Historical Tab of the BOLO Spreadsheet was a reference to 501(c)(3) Progressive organizations that had applied for tax-exempt status pre-2010 and were no longer being received. It was determined that all of the Progressive cases listed on the Advocacy Case List were 501(c)(4) organizations and it can be inferred that those cases were selected after the Emerging Issue criteria for political advocacy cases was expanded in June 2011.

¹⁰⁹³ Subcommittee interview of Troy Paterson, TIGTA (3/21/2014); Letter from J. Russell George, Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration to Rep. Sander Levin, at 2 (6/26/2013) (“Our audit did not find evidence that the IRS used the “Progressives” identifier as selection criteria for potential political cases between May 2010 and May 2012.”).

How IRS employees used the BOLO spreadsheet shows the IRS's targeting had a disparate impact on conservative groups, and that liberal groups were not targeted in the same manner as conservative groups. Unlike the liberal groups that were selected out for non-political reasons or merely noted as historical, "Tea Party" cases were actively targeted inappropriately using political criteria. As a result, all "Tea Party" cases had their applications flagged for additional scrutiny by the IRS. Based on the directions of the political advocacy entry on the Emerging Issues tab, a few progressive groups were caught up in the predominately conservative list of advocacy cases. However, these progressive cases, unlike their Tea Party counterparts, were not selected for additional scrutiny because of the group's name.

D. The TIGTA Audit Accurately Represented the IRS's Mistreatment of Conservative Groups

The Subcommittee Majority staff report claims the TIGTA audit distorted the truth because it exclusively focused on conservative groups, not liberal groups. However, documentary evidence and Subcommittee interviews with TIGTA officials disprove this point. TIGTA officials did not consider the political leanings of the organization when they examined whether groups were inappropriately targeted.¹⁰⁹⁴ Instead, TIGTA audited the controls and procedures the IRS itself claimed it used when processing applications with political activity for 501(c)(4) tax-exempt status. The impartial audit validated the concerns raised by the media, members of Congress, and others that the IRS was using inappropriate criteria and targeting groups by name or policy position. Thus, the Majority report's claim that both liberal and conservative groups experienced the "same mistreatment" is clearly not supported by the evidence. It is incorrect to assert that the TIGTA audit was biased or factually flawed.

TIGTA auditors consulted the IRS to identify which, if any, cases received additional scrutiny through the IRS screening process. When asked by TIGTA if the IRS was tracking any cases separately, the IRS provided a list of applications identified as requiring "further scrutiny." For the purposes of this report, this new Excel spreadsheet will be referred to as the "Advocacy Case List." The Advocacy Case List consisted of applications singled-out according to criteria set out in the corresponding "Emerging Issues" BOLO tab. The scope of the TIGTA audit focused on those applications that the IRS identified as being set aside for further review based on perceived political intervention.¹⁰⁹⁵ The IRS directed TIGTA auditors only to the "Emerging Issues" tab and the corresponding Advocacy Case List. In doing so, the IRS deliberately declined to direct the auditors to the ACORN successors and “Progressive” references made on other BOLO tabs.¹⁰⁹⁶

In their interviews, TIGTA officials Gregory Kutz and Troy Paterson made it clear that they looked at the Advocacy Case List because those were the cases the IRS indicated were relevant to the audit.¹⁰⁹⁷ Additionally, Mr. Kutz said he did not think adding references to Occupy or ACORN in the report would have changed the outcome of the audit.¹⁰⁹⁸ Furthermore, the Advocacy Case List included only those cases active during the May 2010-May 2012 time period that TIGTA examined in its audit. The BOLO spreadsheet entry mentioning “Progressive” only referenced cases that were not active during the time period of the TIGTA audit. Thus, the TIGTA audit team concluded that the other BOLO spreadsheets were not relevant to its audit.¹⁰⁹⁹

The Subcommittee Majority report places extra emphasis on the fact that the TIGTA audit was initiated at the request of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform (OGR). However, the Majority report’s assertion fails to present the whole story. While OGR did make a request, this alone did not spur TIGTA to audit the targeting. TIGTA began its audit in response to several media reports, an audit request letter sent by the Landmark Legal Foundation, and the OGR request.¹¹⁰⁰ Moreover, the Subcommittee Majority staff report claims that TIGTA auditors only examined the treatment received by Tea Party and other conservative groups. In actuality, TIGTA audited the “actions taken by the EO function in response to the increase in applications” and “whether changes to procedures and controls” led to problems processing political advocacy cases.¹¹⁰¹

The Subcommittee Majority staff report suggests that TIGTA failed to examine liberal groups’ treatment even after the IRS made TIGTA aware of the liberal groups in BOLO listings. The reality is that the IRS had three opportunities to edit the TIGTA report and never urged the inclusion of the liberal groups referenced on the other BOLO listings.¹¹⁰² Also, TIGTA reviewed every hard copy application file for the 298 cases on the IRS's Advocacy Case List.¹¹⁰³

The Subcommittee Majority report places great weight on the email review conducted by TIGTA's Deputy Inspector General for Investigations, Timothy Camus. The review Mr. Camus conducted allegedly showed that IRS personnel were not politically motivated. The email review was a limited search of only five employees' emails designed to find a smoking gun email; it was not a general search for evidence of political bias. Furthermore, the email review did not include a search of any emails from any DC based employees. Therefore, the email review cannot be cited for the proposition that this very limited investigation proves that there was no political bias on the part of IRS officials. Also, denial of political motivation is not determinative of there being no political motivation. Finally, TIGTA Inspector General Russell George and Mr. Kutz have indicated they are conducting a new audit into the entire BOLO spreadsheet to determine if the IRS acted improperly in other respects, too.

II. CONSERVATIVE GROUPS TARGETED SIGNIFICANTLY MORE OFTEN AND PERVASIVELY THAN LIBERAL GROUPS

A. Conservative Groups on the BOLO Spreadsheet

The IRS, using a Microsoft Excel spreadsheet referred to as the “Be-On-the-Lookout” Spreadsheet (“BOLO”), flagged conservative groups applying for tax-exempt status for additional scrutiny. One of the main mistaken contentions in the Majority’s report is that liberal groups, especially those listed on the BOLO Spreadsheet were treated equally poorly as Tea Party and conservative groups.¹¹⁰⁴ In order to support this assertion, the Subcommittee Majority report attempts to draw tenuous comparisons between the different BOLO tabs. The evidence, however, strongly contradicts this finding. Instead, the evidence indicates that the systematic targeting of Tea Party and other conservative groups by the IRS was substantially different from the IRS’s treatment of liberal groups. The IRS’s treatment of Tea Party cases cannot be boiled down to an apples-to-apples comparison to liberal groups. Only one tab, labeled “Emerging Issues,” dealt with political advocacy groups under then-current review by the IRS for tax-exempt status. The other tabs with liberal groups listed were intended to alert IRS screeners only to watch out in the event they receive any tax-exempt status requests from groups like ACORN successors, Progressive or Occupy.

The Subcommittee Minority analyzed the way the IRS utilized the BOLO and found that groups in the “Emerging Issues” BOLO spreadsheet tab – most notably Tea Party groups – were treated differently than groups listed in other BOLO spreadsheet tabs.

In August 2010, IRS employees in Cincinnati created the BOLO spreadsheet to alert employees to certain cases.¹¹⁰⁵ The BOLO spreadsheet had five sheets or tabs. The sheets or tabs of the spreadsheet varied over time. The original five tabs were: “TAG,” “TAG Historical,” “Emerging Issues,” “Coordinated Processing,” and “BOLO List.”¹¹⁰⁶ TAG stands for “Touch-and-Go” and the cases referenced on the “TAG” tab indicated potential fraud, terrorism or other sensitive issues.¹¹⁰⁷ “TAG Historical” referenced cases that were no longer active in the IRS’s system and had similar indications of fraud, terrorism or other sensitive issues.¹¹⁰⁸ Later versions of the BOLO spreadsheet replaced “TAG” with “potential abusive” and “TAG Historical” with “potential abusive historical.”¹¹⁰⁹ The “BOLO List” tab was a precursor to the “Watch List” tab. The “Watch List” tab was designed to draw attention to cases not yet received by the IRS that agents should be watching for.¹¹¹⁰ The “Emerging Issues” tab was used to flag newly received cases on which there was no precedent.¹¹¹¹

The “Emerging Issues” tab explicitly referred to the “Tea Party” movement. The tab contained no mention of any other political organization.¹¹¹² In August 2010, the entry on the BOLO Spreadsheet for Tea Party read: “Tea Party: These case[s] involve various local organizations in the Tea Party movement are applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4).”¹¹¹³ The specific Tea Party reference was an umbrella term for conservative groups, designed to draw attention to a national movement that more often than not included organizations with Tea Party, Patriots, and 9/12 in the group name. On February 1, 2011, head of IRS Exempt Organizations, Lois Lerner emailed several of her employees and stated that the “Tea Party Matter [is] very dangerous.”¹¹¹⁴

The Tea Party description contained in the “Emerging Issues” tab was used by the IRS to flag cases from August 2010 until July 2011. In July 2011, the description of cases to flag was altered to state the following: “Advocacy Orgs: Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4).”¹¹¹⁵

(6/26/2013) (“The “Progressives” criteria appeared on a section . . . labeled ‘Historical,’ and, unlike other BOLO entries, did not include instruction on how to refer cases that met the criteria.” Also, TIGTA “found no indication in any of these materials that ‘Progressives’ was a term used to refer cases for scrutiny for political campaign intervention.”).

¹¹¹⁵ IRS0000001494 (it goes on to read: “Note: advocacy action type issues (e.g., lobbying) that are currently listed on the Case Assignment Guide (CAG) do not meet this criteria.”).

This change was requested by Lois Lerner, the Washington, D.C.-based Director of Exempt Organizations, in an attempt to broaden the criteria and prevent the inappropriate selection of cases based on their name only.¹¹¹⁶ Even after this effort, the IRS continued to target all Tea Party cases for heightened scrutiny.¹¹¹⁷ The “Emerging Issues” tab relating to political advocacy cases changed again in January 2012. The description was altered to read: “Current Political Issues: Political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the constitution and bill of rights, Social [sic] economic reform/movement.”¹¹¹⁸ The January 2012 change was initiated because IRS employees in the Cincinnati office found that the July 2011 broad criteria caused too many cases unrelated to political activity to be sent to the advocacy group for processing. Finally, in May 2012, the Emerging Issues tab entry was changed for a fourth time, back to a broader, more-inclusive set of criteria by IRS management in Washington, D.C.¹¹¹⁹

The active targeting of Tea Party applications began in February 2010.¹¹²⁰ At that time, revenue agents screening applications began forwarding every Tea Party application to a specialist group handling the Emerging Issue cases. The informal criteria created and used by revenue agents in Cincinnati screening applications related to the Tea Party Emerging Issue entry included:

- 1) “Tea Party, Patriots or 9/12 Project is referenced in the case file
- 2) Issues include government spending, government debt or taxes
- 3) Education of the public by advocacy/lobbying to ‘make America a better place to life’
- 4) Statement in the case file criticize how the country is being run”¹¹²¹

It is clear that all of these criteria were designed to scrutinize conservative applicants, especially considering the political climate of the time. Any application that fit these criteria was sent to the specialist group in Cincinnati handling Emerging Issues cases. Upon receipt of the first few Tea Party cases by the specialist group, a revenue agent created an entirely new Microsoft Excel spreadsheet to track progress on the applications. The spreadsheet, called the Advocacy Case List, recorded the organization's name, the date the IRS received the application, the IRS assigned tracking number, whether it was a 501(c)(3) or (4) application and other information about the case.¹¹²² The Advocacy Case List was separate and distinct from the BOLO Spreadsheet. Whereas the BOLO contained criteria for flagging applications, the Advocacy Case List consisted of the actual cases being scrutinized by the IRS as a result of its political targeting. Between May 2010 and May 2012, the IRS accumulated 298 applications for tax-exemption, all of which were placed on the Advocacy Case List.¹¹²³ This list of 298 cases was identified by the IRS as the cases the IRS itself had selected for further scrutiny and provided to TIGTA for its audit.¹¹²⁴

Although IRS employees in Cincinnati developed the Advocacy Case List, it was not the only IRS office ultimately involved. In March 2010, senior management in Washington, D.C. put the Tea Party cases on hold, while two Tea Party test cases were reviewed by the Washington, D.C. office. These cases were reviewed by the EO Technical department, which was overseen by Holly Paz at the time.¹¹²⁵ Both of these test cases were Tea Party groups.¹¹²⁶ While a total of 6 cases from the 298 on the Advocacy Case List were approved between May 2010 and May 2012, not a single one of the approved cases had Tea Party in their name.¹¹²⁷ The remaining 292 groups either withdrew their applications due to the lengthy delays or continued to await either an approval or denial.¹¹²⁸ By being kept in limbo, these groups were severely hampered in their ability to raise funds. The IRS's failure to provide decisions on the 292 remaining applications also functionally denied these groups the right to appeal their treatment in federal court.

B. Liberal Groups on the BOLO Spreadsheet

The Subcommittee's primary focus should be on the burdensome treatment of groups targeted via the Tea Party entry on the BOLO spreadsheet's "Emerging Issues" tab. The Majority report, however, attempts to draw attention away from the "Emerging Issues" tab by directing it toward unrelated tabs. It then attempts to draw tenuous similarities in the treatment of liberal organizations such as Progressive, ACORN, Occupy and Emerge to conservative groups by the IRS.¹¹²⁹ Based on evidence discovered during this investigation the Majority's assertion is completely unsubstantiated. The treatment of these four liberal groups was dramatically and fundamentally different from that of Tea Party, Patriot and 9/12 groups applying for tax-exempt status. Furthermore, the disparate impact on conservative groups far outweighed any impact that the IRS treatment may have had on liberal groups. The comparison chart below shows that the Tea Party groups were systematically selected-out by name by utilizing the Tea Party entry on the BOLO spreadsheet. After being selected-out, the cases were assigned to the Tea Party Coordinator to manage processing and placed on a separate Advocacy Case List. Additionally, during the period of review, two Tea Party test cases were singled out and sent to Washington, D.C. for review. These two cases were also eventually reviewed by the IRS legal counsel's office. Based on these test cases, a sensitive case report was developed to inform senior IRS management of the cases. As is shown below, these actions all happened to Tea Party groups while only sporadically occurring to liberal groups.

(1) Progressive and Progress Groups

In the original BOLO Spreadsheet, on the TAG Historical tab, there was an entry that read:

“Progressive: Political Activities: Common thread is the word ‘progressive’. Activities appear to lean toward a new political party. Activities are partisan and appear as anti-republican. You see references to ‘blue’ as being ‘progressive.’”¹¹³⁰

According to our interviews with TIGTA employees, this entry refers to the IRS's previous handling only of 501(c)(3) applications for tax-exempt status from groups with Progressive in their name.¹¹³¹ As a result, it is highly unlikely that this entry was used to select progressive 501(c)(4) groups for review. Instead, 501(c)(4) cases that contained the name progressive or progress were included in the Advocacy Case List only because they fit the expanded criteria for scrutiny articulated by Lois Lerner in June 2011.

¹¹³¹ Subcommittee interview of Thomas Seidell, TIGTA (3/19/2014). See also Subcommittee interview of Elizabeth Hofacre, IRS (10/25/2013) (Ms. Hofacre informed Subcommittee staff that EO technical had instructed her to send along 501(c)(3) applications and not (c)(4), as well as the fact that progressive cases were handled in a different manner than Tea party cases once flagged.)

The fact that the Progressive cases referenced on the Historical tab of the BOLO Spreadsheet related only to 501(c)(3) cases is an important distinction to the Tea Party entry on the BOLO that referenced 501(c)(3) and (4) cases. Applicants applying for 501(c)(3) charity status are held to a stricter standard under the law than 501(c)(4) groups. That status requires 501(c)(3) charity organizations to exclusively conduct themselves for their stated charitable purpose.¹¹³² On the other hand under IRS regulations, 501(c)(4) organizations must primarily operate for their social welfare purpose. The difference between exclusively and primarily allows 501(c)(4) organizations to participate in some political advocacy activities.¹¹³³ As such, the IRS must carefully examine all groups, including explicitly partisan groups, applying for 501(c)(3) status to determine if its activities are at all related to improper political advocacy. However, based on the evidence available, taken together, these facts indicate, and the Subcommittee's interviews confirm, there were no active cases relating to the Historical tab of the BOLO Spreadsheet Progressive entry at the time TIGTA completed its review.

According to the House Committee on Ways and Means, there were only seven applications with Progress or Progressive in the name included on the Advocacy Case List. This Subcommittee's investigation determined that of the seven groups, four groups included "progress" in the name and three groups included Progressive in the name. All seven were groups applying for 501(c)(4) tax-exempt status and all seven were eventually approved.¹¹³⁴ No Progressive 501(c)(3) cases ever made it onto the Advocacy Case List. There were also 14 organizations with Progressive or Progress in their name that were not sent to the Advocacy Case List.¹¹³⁵ Unlike the Progress or Progressive groups, all Tea Party cases filed between February 2010 and March 2012 were scrutinized and delayed.¹¹³⁶ Progressive cases were not identified specifically by name in the Emerging Issues tab of the BOLO Spreadsheets used by revenue agents. Further, it is unlikely that progressive cases appeared on the Advocacy Case List until after the Tea Party BOLO was expanded in July 2011. Fewer than 38 percent of applicants with Progress or Progressive in their name were sent to the Advocacy Case List.¹¹³⁷

The Subcommittee Majority report utilizes the existence of the seven total 501(c)(4) applications with either Progress or Progressive in the name to show that liberal groups were targeted and placed on the Advocacy Case List. The seven Progress or Progressive 501(c)(4) applications did not relate to the Progressive BOLO spreadsheet entry because they are not 501(c)(3) organizations. Also, all seven of these groups were likely not targeted for inclusion in the Advocacy Case List based on the applicant's name, but rather due to their potential political activities. Only Tea Party, 9/12 and Patriot groups were specifically targeted based on the applicant's name. Publicly available information released in a USA Today article revealed that the earliest a Progress or Progressive application was listed on the Advocacy Case List was after March 2011. Therefore, it very likely the case was not actually added to the Advocacy Case List until after the criteria were broadened to include all advocacy groups in July 2011, not just the Tea Party. While at least 33 "Tea Party," six "9/12," and 13 "Patriot" cases languished on the Advocacy Case List, nearly 18 months passed before a single "Progress" or "Progressive" case was added to the list.

Notes taken during a July 28, 2010 screening workshop held in the IRS EO Determinations unit in Cincinnati further underscore the distinction between the Tea Party cases and Progressive cases.¹¹³⁸ The workshop notes explicitly state Elizabeth Hofacre's role as the senior IRS revenue agent assigned the title Tea Party Coordinator/Reviewer, was only to process Tea Party groups. The notes even go so far as to explicitly exclude progressive groups from her jurisdiction.¹¹³⁹ ¹¹³⁷ PSI-IRS-37-000004 - 014 (Of the cases with the word Progress or Progressive in the applicant's name, seven cases were on the Advocacy Case List by May 2012 when TIGTA completed its analysis. Two additional Progress or Progressive cases were added to the December 2012 Advocacy Case List. Of the total 24 Progress or Progressive cases, 9 eventually ended up on the Advocacy Case List. Thus, 15 Progress or Progressive cases were not included on the Advocacy Case List.

The Subcommittee has identified no evidence to suggest the treatment and handling of Progressive cases was the same as the Tea Party cases. Unlike Tea Party cases, Progressive cases were not identified by name in the "Emerging Issue" criteria used by revenue agents nor were they likely to have appeared on the Advocacy Case List until July 2011. Finally, every single one of the mere seven cases with Progress or Progressive in their name was approved.¹¹⁴¹

(2) ACORN Successors

The BOLO spreadsheet also contained an entry referencing "ACORN successors" that appeared on the "Watch List" tab.¹¹⁴² The listing has been partially redacted by the IRS for 26 U.S.C. § 6103 protection, but it states "ACORN Successors: Following the breakup of ACORN [Redacted Information]."¹¹⁴³

Unlike Tea Party groups, ACORN successor organizations were properly on the BOLO Spreadsheet because ACORN itself had been involved in a number of fraudulent transactions assisting tax evasion.¹¹⁴⁴ After a series of scandals, which led to Congress revoking its funding of the organization, the national ACORN organization disbanded.¹¹⁴⁵ The ACORN groups were thus not flagged simply for their political activities, but also because of a specific association to a group known to have legal problems.¹¹⁴⁶ That rationale bears no relation to the Tea Party cases, which appear to have been singled out and targeted based solely on their name or political beliefs.

Based on the information available to the Subcommittee during its review, the IRS's concern about potential ACORN successors never materialized.¹¹⁴⁷ Documents show that of the initial four cases identified, the applications possibly came from only two groups applying for both 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) status.¹¹⁴⁸ This further indicates the focus of IRS agents was on whether new entities would attempt to succeed ACORN after the national organization disbanded and not the organization's name or policy positions.

(3) "Occupy" Groups

A third group, "Occupy," was only listed on the BOLO spreadsheet late in the processing of the Tea Party and Advocacy cases and related to the Occupy Wall Street movement.¹¹⁴⁹ "Occupy" was listed on the "Watch List" tab of the BOLO spreadsheet beginning on February 8, 2012.¹¹⁵⁰ IRS agents listed Occupy because media reports suggested this possible national movement might lead to applications by groups from various cities.¹¹⁵¹ At no point between May 2010 and May 2012 did the "Occupy" cases make it onto the Advocacy Case List. There is also no evidence suggesting that these cases were subjected to the same level of severe scrutiny as the Tea Party cases.¹¹⁵²

The first Occupy case was received in 2012, two years after the targeting of Tea Party groups had begun. The Occupy listing on the Watch List tab read as follows:

"Occupy Organizations: Involve organizations occupying public space protesting in various cities, call people to assemble (people's assemblies) claiming social injustices due to 'big money'" influence, claim the democratic process is controlled by was street/banks/multinational corporations, could be linked globally. Claim to represent the 99% of the public that are interested in separating money from politics and improving the infrastructure to fix everything from healthcare to the economy.”¹¹⁵³

The Occupy listing is substantially different than the Tea Party listing for a number of reasons. First, Occupy was listed on the “Watch List” entry, which meant that it served as an advance notification in the event a possible application came in. The listing was not used by IRS employees to screen and select out applications from a known “emerging issue.”¹¹⁵⁴ Also, unlike the then purely theoretical Occupy applications, the Tea Party cases were clearly already active. Although two Occupy groups eventually did apply for tax-exempt status, it was not until 2012; roughly two years after the Tea Party targeting began.¹¹⁵⁵

(4) Emerge

The final group cited by the Majority in support of the assertion that liberal groups were targeted by the IRS is “Emerge.”¹¹⁵⁶ Emerge America is a national organization dedicated to the election of Democrat women with affiliate state-based organizations.¹¹⁵⁷ The organization was explicitly a campaign organization for the private benefit of the Democratic Party.¹¹⁵⁸ Emerge groups therefore clearly and blatantly did not qualify for tax-exempt status. As a result, all eight applications filed by Emerge affiliates were ultimately and properly denied tax-exempt status. Three of the eight Emerge cases were denied after review by EO Technical in Washington, D.C. because of their clear participation in political campaigns to benefit the Democratic Party.¹¹⁵⁹ The other five cases were initially approved, but later had their tax-exempt status revoked by the IRS for the same reasons the other three groups were denied.¹¹⁶⁰

When the Emerge cases were received by the IRS, the cases were sent to the Washington office and IRS agents created a Sensitive Case Report (SCR) on the Emerge groups, similar to the SCR for Tea Party cases.¹¹⁶¹ That, however, is where the similarities end. Unlike the Tea Party groups, Emerge was never added to the BOLO Spreadsheet and it did not have a separate list in Cincinnati that held Emerge cases. On top of this, it was clear that all of the Emerge cases did not meet the requirement to primarily engage in the group's social welfare activity.

Any attempt to compare the severe scrutiny of conservative groups seeking tax-exempt status to these few liberal groups is untenable. Conservative groups were systematically targeted by the IRS, listed on a separate spreadsheet than the BOLO Spreadsheet, had their applications put on hold by IRS management, and asked obtrusive questions to a significantly greater degree.

C. Disparate Impact on Conservative Groups

TIGTA's report on the IRS's processing of advocacy cases provides an illuminating look at the extent of the IRS's disparate impact on conservative groups. According to TIGTA's analysis, between May 2010 and May 2012, the IRS removed a total of 298 applications from normal processing and placed them on a special Advocacy Case List for additional scrutiny.¹¹⁶² Of the 298 groups, 72 had Tea Party in their name, 11 had 9/12 in their name and 13 had Patriots in their name.¹¹⁶³ Thus, out of the 298 groups, 96 applications contained Tea Party, 9/12, or Patriot in their names and were placed on the Advocacy Case List as a result.¹¹⁶⁴ Of the 298 cases, TIGTA auditors looked at the entire, hard-copy application file for 296 applications because two cases were incomplete and could not be reviewed.¹¹⁶⁵

Although the Subcommittee does not have authority to view individual taxpayer data under 26 U.S.C. § 6103, the House Committee on Ways and Means does. It reviewed the 298 applications the IRS provided to TIGTA.¹¹⁶⁶ According to the Committee's analysis, 83 percent – 248 of the 298 groups – were “right leaning.”¹¹⁶⁷ In the same analysis, the Committee found that only 29 of the 298 groups, or 10 percent, were “left leaning.”¹¹⁶⁸

Breakdown 298 of the Political Advocacy Cases
(May 2010 - May 2012)

The full story becomes even clearer when the percentage of approvals is considered. The Committee on Ways and Means found that 45 percent, or 111 applications, of the 248 right-leaning groups were eventually approved.¹¹⁶⁹ Liberal groups, on the other hand, enjoyed a 70 percent approval rate. Thus, of 29 left-leaning groups, 20 groups were approved while 9 groups withdrew their application or the application is still pending.¹¹⁷⁰

Additionally, according to TIGTA's audit, only six cases from the Advocacy Case List were approved in the span of two years.¹¹⁷¹ Amazingly, after TIGTA initiated its audit, 102 applications were approved from May to December 2012.¹¹⁷²

¹¹⁷⁰ Id.

¹¹⁷¹ TIGTA Report at 14.

¹¹⁷² Id. at 14-15.

Of these “hastily approved applications,” the Ways and Means Committee determined that many “were flagged for IRS surveillance by Washington, D.C.”¹¹⁷³ As is consistent with the IRS’s treatment of conservative groups, “[o]f those flagged, more than eighty percent of the groups were right leaning.”¹¹⁷⁴ Moreover, Ways and Means determined that of the organizations sent to the IRS Exempt Organizations Examinations unit, 94 percent were right-leaning. That 94 percent of flagged groups being found to be right-leaning is certainly telling, but Ways and Means’ other discovery demonstrates the disparate impact on conservative groups even further. The Committee found that “of the organizations referred for audit from this process, 100 percent were right leaning.”¹¹⁷⁵

As it reviewed each of the applications, TIGTA attempted to discern whether an application had “indications of significant political campaign intervention,” the qualifier the IRS identified as the reason a case would need additional scrutiny.¹¹⁷⁶ TIGTA auditors determined that 91 applications, or 31 percent, of the 296 applications reviewed did not have “indications of significant political campaign intervention.”¹¹⁷⁷ This means that the auditors could not find any activities in the case file that suggested the group would participate in campaign-related events that may have disqualified them from 501(c)(4) status.¹¹⁷⁸

During the course of the audit, TIGTA determined that a number of groups received intrusive questions by the IRS in the form of development letters.¹¹⁷⁹ A development letter is drafted by the revenue agent processing the application to obtain additional information from the group prior to its approval or denial of tax-exempt status. According to the TIGTA report, 170 organizations in the Advocacy Case List received a development letter.¹¹⁸⁰ Of those 170, TIGTA found that 98 organizations, or 58 percent, received burdensome and unnecessary questions.¹¹⁸¹

One inappropriate question the IRS asked related to requesting an applicant’s list of donors. In all, 27 applicants received that request,¹¹⁸² of which TIGTA determined that “13 had Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in their names.”¹¹⁸³ Thus, 48 percent of organizations receiving inappropriate donor questions had been selected solely on the basis of having Tea Party, Patriot, or 9/12 in their name. The donor list questions are particularly disturbing because after a 501(c)(4) group is approved, it does not need to publicly disclose its donor list. The approved tax-exempt organization only needs to privately provide the IRS with this information in its tax returns and the IRS is obligated not to make this public. However, the IRS is required to make information that is part of an approved tax-exempt application publicly available.¹¹⁸⁴ As result, if a group submits its donor list and the IRS relies on this information to grant 501(c) status, then that otherwise nonpublic donor list is required to be publicly released.¹¹⁸⁵ Thus, the request for donor lists from these conservative groups could be used as an indirect means to force the release of the donor lists of these organizations to the public.

¹¹⁸⁵ TIGTA Report, at 18. According to the IRS, the requirement to disclose all information used to approve a tax-exempt organization’s application has changed. The new, current position is that the IRS has discretion to withhold sensitive information such as donor lists or social security numbers.

The IRS provided to the Subcommittee a document showing that all Tea Party applications submitted from February 2010 to June 2012, experienced delays in processing, were placed on the special Advocacy Case List for further scrutiny, and forced to linger in limbo.¹¹⁸⁶ By contrast, 24 applications with the word “Progressive” or “Progress” were filed with the IRS during the same time period, but only seven of those were added to the advocacy listing.¹¹⁸⁷

In September 2013, USA Today published the 2011 list of applications that IRS employees sent to advocacy specialists for additional scrutiny.¹¹⁸⁸ The USA Today analysis determined that beginning in March 2010, the IRS failed to approve any organizations with “Tea Party” in their name for 27 months.¹¹⁸⁹ Left-leaning groups, however, continued to gain tax-exempt status approvals during that time.¹¹⁹⁰

According to the Majority staff report’s analysis of the USA Today list, 11 of the 162 organizations listed are likely liberal groups.¹¹⁹¹ This fact is cited to suggest that liberal groups were also treated poorly by the IRS and thus no political bias could have occurred. However, even if 11 liberal groups were included on the list published by USA Today, it would still fail to show equal treatment by the IRS of conservative groups and liberal organizations. This is clearly shown by comparing the USA Today document to the tax news website, Tax Analysts, report of the 170 cases approved by the IRS between 2010 and 2013.¹¹⁹² This analysis showed that all of the liberal groups listed by the Majority were ultimately approved by the IRS for tax-exempt status. Further, that the number of “likely” liberal groups on the list represents just slightly more than 6 percent of the listed organizations only serves to further underline the disparate impact of the targeting on conservative groups.

In addition to using inappropriate criteria to identify Tea Party cases for increased review, the IRS also subjected these groups to invasive, unnecessary, and irrelevant questions. In fact, some groups preferred to remove their applications from consideration rather than comply with the burdensome requests for additional facts.¹¹⁹³ As has been detailed in the Ways and Means Committee analysis, 89 percent of the groups that were asked donor questions were “right leaning.”¹¹⁹⁴ One particularly inappropriate and invasive set of questions was directed to a pro-life group.¹¹⁹⁵ That group was asked to “please explain [if]...activities, including the prayer meetings held outside of Planned Parenthood, are considered educational,” as well as to explain the “activities at these prayer meetings” and to estimate the “percentage of time spent on prayer meetings as compared with other activities of the organization.”¹¹⁹⁶

The treatment of Catherine Englebrecht, by multiple agencies in response to her founding a tax-exempt organization, represents a specific example of an individual being subjected to excess enforcement and targeting. According to a Forbes article, Ms. Engelbrecht has seen:

“[t]he organization [she founded] has been questioned by the FBI on numerous occasions; she has had her personal tax returns audited by the IRS; and has also had her small manufacturing business tax returns audited by the IRS. In addition, her business has been subjected to two unscheduled audits by the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, and Tobacco and Firearms (BATF) and has undergone another unscheduled business audit by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).”¹¹⁹⁷

In another example of IRS overreach, Ms. Lerner, head of the Exempt Organizations division, took it upon herself to review referrals sent to the IRS by non-profit watchdog group, Democracy 21.¹¹⁹⁸ These referrals urged the IRS to examine a conservative group’s 501(c)(4) status.¹¹⁹⁹ After reviewing the Democracy 21 referral, she found that “the allegations in the documents [against the conservative group] were really damning, so [she] wondered why [the IRS] hadn’t done something with the org.”¹²⁰⁰

I had a meeting today with an organization that was asking us to consider guidance on the e4 issue. To get ready for the meeting, I asked for every document that had sent in over the last several years because I knew they had sent in several referrals. I reviewed the information last night and thought the allegations in the documents were really damning. So wondered why we hadn't done something with the org. The first complaint came in 2010 and there were additional ones in 2011 and 2012.

I asked Tom Miller whether he recalled seeing referral committee notes on the referrals when he and Judy went down to look at the referrals. He looked them up, and as you can see below, the referral committee unanimously non-selected the case twice. I don't know where we go with this--as I've told you before--I don't think your guys get it and the way they look at these cases is going to bite us some day.

Yet, twice we rejected the referrals for somewhat dubious reasons and never followed up once the 990s were filed.

As the email shows, Lerner agreed with the Democracy 21 complaint and was agitated that the conservative group had not been denied or revoked 501(c)(4) status. An IRS referral committee specifically set up to decide on the need for referrals to the Examinations Unit of Exempt Organizations unanimously found, in two separate reviews, the allegations from Democracy 21 were not sufficient for referral.¹²⁰² Nevertheless, despite acknowledging the committee's reviews, Ms. Lerner called for reexamination of the group in question. Ms. Lerner directly stepped in to seek additional scrutiny when the system designed to refer tax-exempt organizations for examination failed to reach the result she wanted. Ms. Lerner even went so far as to inform her senior advisor that "you should know that we are working on a denial of the application, which may solve the problem because we probably will say it isn't exempt."¹²⁰³ Ms. Lerner knew full well that a system was in place to handle referrals to the Examinations Unit. Instead of allowing the system to work, she made the decision to actively target a single group and push for additional scrutiny.¹²⁰⁴

By then, it was well known that Lerner had extensive knowledge of the scheme to target conservative groups.).

National Public Radio (NPR), on July 30, 2014, published a House Committee on Ways and Means study detailing the disparity in the number of questions posed to conservative applicants for tax exempt status versus the number posed to progressive organizations.¹²⁰⁵ What the House Committee found perfectly highlights the disparate impact that the IRS targeting had on conservative organizations. The analysis determined conservative groups were asked 1,552 questions, an average of 14.9 questions per group. Meanwhile, the seven progressive groups were asked a mere 33 questions in total or 4.7 per group.¹²⁰⁶ This means that conservative groups were asked on average more than three times the number of questions posed to progressive organizations. This tremendous discrepancy in the number of question posed to conservative and progressive groups emphasizes the difference in treatment that liberal and conservative groups' received at the hands of the IRS.

III. TIGTA AUDIT

A. Scope of the Audit

The Subcommittee Majority staff report raises concern that the scope of the TIGTA audit was inadequate. The Majority report asserts that the audit should have been broadened to include additional information, especially information related to the purported targeting of liberal groups.¹²⁰⁷ Based on its review, the Subcommittee Minority finds that the scope of the audit adequately covered the relevant material and the TIGTA findings are valid. The IRS raised no objection to the underlying scope of the audit,¹²⁰⁸ including accepting seven of the nine recommendations TIGTA made.¹²⁰⁹ Additionally, the audit followed standard auditing principles¹²¹⁰ and all members of the TIGTA audit team have stood by the accuracy of its findings.¹²¹¹

TIGTA initiated the IRS targeting audit for three reasons: (1) concerns articulated by members of Congress and the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform (OGR);¹²¹² (2) media reports alleging unfair treatment of certain organizations applying for tax-exempt status;¹²¹³ and (3) receipt of a letter from the Landmark Legal Foundation requesting an investigation to determine whether IRS ¹²⁰⁸ The IRS reviewed three drafts of the TIGTA report and never once raised the issue of scope. Additionally, the Subcommittee interviewed multiple witnesses from both the IRS and TIGTA and they all stated they did not have a problem with the audit’s scope. See Subcommittee interview of Troy Paterson, TIGTA (3/21/2014), Subcommittee interview of Gregory Kutz, TIGTA (3/26/2014).

employees acted inappropriately in their assessment of applications applying for tax-exempt status.¹²¹⁴

The scope of the audit focused on the internal controls the IRS used to review applications from organizations “potentially involved in political campaign intervention.”¹²¹⁵ With this focus in mind, the auditors requested all information from the IRS relating to the matter.¹²¹⁶ Russell George, Inspector General for TIGTA, stated in his testimony to multiple Congressional Committees, “[w]e focused our efforts on reviewing the processing of applications for tax exempt status and determining whether allegations made against the IRS were founded.”¹²¹⁷ TIGTA did not, as it has been suggested, look only at how “Tea Party” cases were treated.¹²¹⁸ In actuality, TIGTA looked at the entire group of cases the IRS selected for special review from the Emerging Issues tab and put on the Advocacy Case List.

The audit specifically focused on the IRS’s own criteria, which it directed TIGTA to use, that singled out “Tea Party,” “9/12,” and “Patriot” groups for special scrutiny.¹²¹⁹ TIGTA reviewed both open¹²²⁰ and closed¹²²¹ cases from the period of May 2010 through May 2012. TIGTA did so because this was the time period in which the IRS developed and implemented the “inappropriate criteria,” which “focused narrowly on the names and policy position of organizations.”¹²²² The criteria were modified from July 2011 to January 2012 and again in May 2012 to look at an organization’s political activities and not their names or policy positions.¹²²³

While the Subcommittee Majority staff report criticized TIGTA for only evaluating the “Emerging Issues” tab on the BOLO spreadsheet and not the other tabs such as “Watch List” or “TAG Historical,”¹²²⁴ the Subcommittee Minority has found that TIGTA’s actions were appropriate. Auditors reviewed the “Emerging Issues” tab on the BOLO spreadsheet because the IRS stated this was the only tab used to identify potential political cases for additional scrutiny.¹²²⁵ The Subcommittee Majority staff report points to an email from Lois Lerner to TIGTA officials, asserting that “the IRS again brought its treatment of liberal groups to the attention of senior TIGTA personnel.”¹²²⁶ The email, however, shows that Ms. Lerner did not feel that there is any political motivation and shows her misunderstanding of the purpose of the audit. In addition, the Majority conflates being on the BOLO list with being selected for additional scrutiny.¹²²⁷ The BOLO list itself does not signal any additional attention paid to a particular group.

The Lerner email referenced also shows that Ms. Lerner believed TIGTA’s audit related to the question whether the IRS was politically motivated, and that was her focus. TIGTA auditors attempted to persuade her that the audit was about whether certain groups were targeted by the IRS. Ms. Lerner ignored this and instilled her own view of the audit’s purpose into the conversation when the auditors explicitly stated they were not attempting to determine if groups were liberal or conservative.

The Subcommittee Majority staff report indicates that the TIGTA audit was done solely at the behest of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee to look into whether the IRS was specifically targeting “Tea Party” groups.¹²²⁸ That allegation is unfounded. Staffers from OGR met in early 2012 with TIGTA to discuss concerns raised by constituent “Tea Party” groups.¹²²⁹ Around the same time, the media aired multiple reports regarding the same issue.¹²³⁰ TIGTA then completed its standard preliminary review to

They have also acknowledged that there are both conservative and liberal organizations on the list of advocacy cases. determine the need for an audit and concluded it would begin a full audit into the IRS's handling of political cases.¹²³¹ During interviews with Subcommittee staff, every TIGTA employee stated that at no time was the audit done for, or at the directive of, OGR Chairman Issa, nor did he or his staff influence the audit process. During his interview, the Audit Director, Troy Paterson consistently rejected the idea that TIGTA's audit narrowly focused on processing of Tea Party groups.¹²³² Instead, Mr. Paterson stated that TIGTA's audit looked at the full history of the Tea Party/Advocacy Organization case listing.¹²³³ At no point during the audit process did TIGTA brief any congressional members or staffers as to the progress of the audit, including those staffers with the Oversight Committee.¹²³⁴

Multiple TIGTA officials confirmed the audit was completed and only released earlier than planned due to Lois Lerner's statement and apology at an American Bar Association conference on May 10, 2013.¹²³⁵ It was not due to pressure from OGR and Congressional Representatives.¹²³⁶ TIGTA has verified that the audit was complete and the report in the final editing stages for release in the next week or two.¹²³⁷ Moreover, prior to the report's release, TIGTA gave the IRS three opportunities to comment on the draft report to ensure its accuracy.¹²³⁸

Careful analysis of the TIGTA report proves that it properly found that the IRS's internal controls for processing political applications caused systematic delays and burdensome questioning of groups. The TIGTA audit was pursued based on standard procedures and completed at the time of its release.

B. Office of Investigations Email Review

One primary contention in the Subcommittee Majority report is that TIGTA's Deputy Inspector General for Investigations Timothy Camus's findings and analysis from a limited email review should have been included in the audit report.¹²³⁹ The Majority report erroneously believes that including this information would have definitively shown no explicit directive existed and no political bias was present. TIGTA's Assistant Inspector General for Audit Gregory Kutz and Mr. Camus, however, both agreed that the email search only confirmed the findings in the report and did not add anything new.¹²⁴⁰

During the audit of the IRS's controls and procedures for processing 501(c)(4) applications, TIGTA's Office of Investigations (OI) played a very minor role. In spite of this, the Subcommittee Majority report relies heavily on the Office of Investigation's supposed email search findings. Mr. Kutz stated in an interview with the Subcommittee that at some point during the audit process, an IRS employee told the auditors about an email that could be a "smoking gun" directive to target specific political organizations.¹²⁴¹ Since the TIGTA auditors had previously requested all relevant emails from IRS employees and could not locate this particular email in the produced documents, Mr. Kutz was concerned his team was not receiving all relevant emails.¹²⁴²

In an attempt to locate the possible "smoking gun" email, Mr. Kutz requested that Mr. Camus use OI's technical capabilities to perform a keyword search of relevant employee emails in order to locate this email.¹²⁴³ The request for assistance from the investigative division was necessary because auditors do not have the ability to retrieve emails not voluntarily provided to them by the IRS.¹²⁴⁴ After discussions between Inspector General George, Mr. Camus, and Mr. Kutz, OI pulled the emails from the actual IRS servers for five IRS employees and ran a ¹²³⁹ See Majority Report at 186 ("it is difficult to understand why [the Office of Investigations review] was excluded from the report."). It has been suggested that Mr. Camus's statements are definitively conclusive that there was no political motivation in the selection of applications. The Subcommittee Minority cannot conclude the same as this was a very narrow review of a very few email accounts. Moreover, the Subcommittee Minority believes that if there were a political directive, it is unlikely that it would have been put in an email.

keyword search to narrow the total number of documents and emails. The review pulled 2,277 emails or documents that had a keyword “hit”. These pulled emails were then reviewed by a member of Mr. Camus’s team.¹²⁴⁵ No email containing an explicit directive was found.¹²⁴⁶ After the review was completed, Mr. Camus detailed his findings and provided an analysis on the content of the emails.¹²⁴⁷ As mentioned above, Mr. Camus believed the email search results did not add anything new to the TIGTA report and did not require inclusion in the report.

One additional point of concern was the removal of a footnote in the draft report that referenced the referral to OI by the audit team.¹²⁴⁸ According to witness testimony, the footnote was removed at the request of Mr. Camus.¹²⁴⁹ He sought removal because this was not an official investigation request and, typically, it is inappropriate to disclose law enforcement practices.¹²⁵⁰ Overall, the email search that was conducted was a limited search of only four keywords and five IRS employee email accounts, none of which were employees in Washington, D.C.¹²⁵¹ According to former TIGTA Chief Counsel, Michael McCarthy, the OI email search was not a “definitive statement,” but instead was a very limited review to locate a purported document.¹²⁵² This limited search, combined with recent news of the loss of Lois Lerner’s emails from 2009 to 2011 and the loss of six other IRS employee’s hard drives, further underscores the inability to conclude no political bias was involved in the IRS’s targeting of conservative groups.¹²⁵³

C. Advocacy Case List

According to the Majority report, “TIGTA failed to analyze IRS treatment of any non-conservative cases.”¹²⁵⁴ This assertion is misleading for a number of reasons. During the audit, TIGTA requested the IRS provide all applications for 501(c)(4) tax-exempt status that the IRS sent off for additional scrutiny for the period in which the improper criteria were in place. In response, the IRS provided TIGTA the list of all “potential political cases” selected for heightened scrutiny from the period of May 2010 to May 2012.¹²⁵⁵ The 298 cases contained in the list, although referred to as “Advocacy Cases” by the time of the audit, had been referred to as “Tea Party Cases” until July 2011.¹²⁵⁶ Of these 298 cases, 72 included “Tea Party” in their name, 11 included “9/12” in their name, and 13 included “Patriots” in their name. The remaining 202 applications were listed as “other” and two applications were incomplete.¹²⁵⁷ The criteria that caused an application to be routed to an IRS specialists group for processing these applications related only to the “Emerging Issues” tab on the BOLO spreadsheet.¹²⁵⁸ Cases identified as using these criteria then went on to receive a heightened review by a team of specialists to determine whether or not the organization was engaged in “significant political campaign intervention.”¹²⁵⁹

TIGTA first reviewed the hard copy application for every case listed in the Advocacy Case List, a total of 298 applications. TIGTA categorized the 298 applications based on the exact same criteria used by the IRS.¹²⁶⁰ The IRS specifically stated that it looked for the names “Tea Party,” “9/12,” and “Patriots” to determine whether or not a case was “potentially political.”¹²⁶¹ The IRS did not explicitly use any other names to select applications for additional scrutiny.¹²⁶² The IRS also used criteria related to an applicant’s policy positions, including: “issues include government spending, government debt or taxes” and “statement in the case file criticize how the country is being run.”¹²⁶³ After categorizing the cases using the specific names, TIGTA placed the remaining cases in the “other” category.¹²⁶⁴ ¹²⁶⁴ Subcommittee interviews of TIGTA employees.

TIGTA did not identify, by name, the 202 “other” cases in the report for good reason.¹²⁶⁵ First, given the IRS criteria, TIGTA would have had to subjectively decide how to potentially list the 202 different names. It opted instead to objectively use only the IRS’s own criteria. Second, 26 U.S.C. § 6103 prevents TIGTA from releasing individual taxpayer information. Thus any group with a name that, if released would violate Section 6103 protections, TIGTA would have had to redact or withhold.¹²⁶⁶ Third, it was too difficult to break the groups out by policy positions. During interviews with the Subcommittee, TIGTA auditors explained that the IRS revenue agents often failed to indicate why an application was forwarded to the Advocacy Case List.¹²⁶⁷ This made it difficult for TIGTA to objectively provide a further breakdown of the remaining 202 other applications.

The Subcommittee Majority staff report argues that TIGTA did not have the resources to complete a review of all 298 cases.¹²⁶⁸ That conclusion is inconsistent with the available facts. TIGTA was able to and did in fact review all 298 applications that were found on the Advocacy Case List. On top of reviewing the 298 cases, TIGTA reviewed an additional 331 cases to determine if the IRS failed to identify cases for additional review.¹²⁶⁹ Again, TIGTA reviewed the entire application for each of the 298 cases and discussed these cases with the IRS.

D. Conclusion of TIGTA Section: Audit Was Accurate and Proper

TIGTA’s audit was a focused review of whether “the IRS targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, delayed the processing of targeted groups’ applications, and requested unnecessary information from targeted groups.”¹²⁷⁰ TIGTA’s auditors looked at the IRS’s processing of potential political cases to determine if IRS personnel improperly forwarded cases for review. The auditors found that the IRS used inappropriate criteria to select certain groups by using a group’s name or policy position. In doing so, the IRS improperly forwarded their applications for review. Simply stated, the IRS treated these conservative and Tea Party groups differently from other non-conservative groups.

The Subcommittee Majority report draws a false equivalency. The Majority report alleges that had TIGTA looked into the IRS's treatment of liberal groups, TIGTA would have found that liberal groups were treated the same or similarly as conservative groups. The evidence, however, points to the contrary.¹²⁷¹ Only conservative groups were inappropriately selected for additional scrutiny solely by their name or policy positions. A selection that often occurred irrespective of the activities listed in the group's application. Finally, the ratio of conservative groups to liberal groups selected for scrutiny, plus the absence of complaints by liberal groups to TIGTA and elected officials, demonstrates that these groups were not targeted en masse or treated unfairly.¹²⁷²

Overall, Subcommittee staff interviewed eight people from TIGTA regarding the audit and reviewed 20,000 pages of documents produced by TIGTA. It is clear that the TIGTA audit was unbiased, proper and, most importantly, accurate. The audit in this case has withstood all of the criticisms to remain an accurate depiction of the faulty processes used by the IRS.

¹²⁷¹ See e.g., Letter from J. Russell George, Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration to Rep. Sander Levin (6/26/2013) at 2-3 ("Progressive" was found in TAG Historical section of BOLO and no evidence was found that this section was used as selection criteria between May 2010 and May 2012).

¹²⁷² Subcommittee interview of Russell George, TIGTA (4/22/2014); Subcommittee interview of Troy Paterson, TIGTA (3/21/2014).

IV. CONCLUSION OF SUBCOMMITTEE MINORITY STAFF REPORT

Based on the facts identified in the Subcommittee's investigation, the IRS used inappropriate criteria to target specific conservative groups for increased scrutiny and delay. While the Majority report attempts to draw similarities between the IRS's treatment of liberal and conservative groups, the vast distinctions in treatment prove that conservative groups received the bulk of unfair and burdensome treatment. The IRS failed to use its own "facts and circumstances" test, leading IRS employees to focus on a group's name or policy positions instead of the group's potential political activities. This significant bias created a disparate impact on conservative groups. As shown above, the numbers and analysis by TIGTA and others clearly demonstrate that TIGTA's conclusions were proper and the objections raised by numerous conservative groups valid. TIGTA's audit provided a prudent statistical analysis of the inappropriate treatment of conservative groups by the IRS.

Subject: Advocacy Questions - NEED INFO ASAP Importance: High

Stephen,

Were the attached questions given out to team members to use? If not, were other questions given to them? If other questions were given to them, please forward those questions to me. If other questions weren't given to them, what was, i.e., just the guide sheet from EOT?

I need this information ASAP. I'm on the phone with Lois Lerner. Thanks election. HHH said that III was much the same as UUU but JJJ's opponent is a big liberal. That would be KKK." You also stated that you "put together 10 questions for the candidates running for City Counsel. They will be e-mailed to candidates and then printed on the pamphlets that we are going to distribute before the election."

- s. Describe in detail how you effectuated your "strategy for the election" and submit copies of the 10 questions posed to the candidates and their replies.
- t. Submit copies of the pamphlets you printed, explain how they were distributed, and when they were distributed in relation to the election.

13. The letter you published in DDD, Issue A, Number A, dated Date, states on page 19: "L.L.L. is bad for NNN (actually for all the States that voted it in) and we should encourage our Legislators to repeal it. MMM Noon lists all of the NNN Legislators that voted FOR this bad legislation (SB XXX). PPP instigated this bill and Senator introduced the bill in the Legislature." State the reasons for the list, where it was published, and when and how it was distributed.
14. State whether you engage in business dealings with any candidate(s) for public office or an organization associated with the candidate, such as renting office space or providing access to a membership list. If so, describe in relationship in detail, including any contracts or other agreements documenting the business relationship.
15. Describe in detail your relationship to the OOO School.
16. Provide a copy of the board of directors' meeting minutes from formation to date.
17. Provide copies of any other materials, including but not limited to program guides, rules, regulations, and guidelines that will assist us in better understanding you and your activities.

Forgot something--you need to look at the guidesheet and tell us whether any bits and pieces are salvageable. Judy thought it was not the correct format but you need to tell us what you want it to look like and whether we could use parts of what we have.

This is separate and apart from bucketing the existing cases (which also should be part of that conversation).

Based on feedback received, the document won't work in its present form. I think we need to work with DeTerms to make it a usable document.

Mike will check with Hilary on clarifying the cases that can be approved, etc.

This is the follow-up on my e-mail I sent to you a few minutes ago. I read through the list, and I like to have Hilary to make the list a bit more clear on which cases need to be developed, the type of development needed, whether a particular case can be approved without further development and whether the organization is not an advocacy organization (therefore not needed to be included on the list).

Report Exhibits - Page 000017

The check/guide sheet is with David, Tom Miller and Judy Kindell for review. I can send you a draft copy. Let me know. I think we may have to clear the check/guide sheet with Lois, but I will check with David.

Mike,

It was my understanding from Holly that the cases were going to be put into buckets, i.e., those that can be approved as is, those that require additional development, and those that appear to be denials. Based on the email below from Hillary, it sounds as though all of those with "General Advocacy" only can be approved as is. Is this your understanding? If so, we can go ahead and get those cases approved right away.

I'm not sure what the hold is on the document/guidance EOT is supposed to be providing for us, but I've received a phone call from an individual who was previously an EO Determinations specialist. He is working with one of these organizations [REDACTED] and is threatening to go to his Congressional Office regarding this organization and others. That is only going to create even more work for us and we need to get letters out to these organizations ASAP.

Please let me know when we can expect to get the document from EOT. Thanks

Importance: High

Hi Cindy,

Below are comments that I made explaining some of my notations on the cases in Excel. My understanding from speaking with Mike was that I was to review the cases to determine whether the cases were clearly lobbying or engaging in political campaign activities, or if an organization was not engaged in either and therefore was simply engaging in general advocacy (educational/issue advocacy activities etc). Where I had concerns about whether the c3s and c4s were actually engaging in good c3/c4 activities – and not just making inflammatory, emotionally charged statements without any factual support or educational aspect to their activities – I made notes reflecting such. Where it simply states "general advocacy" or "general advocacy/legislative advocacy" (or lobbying), without comments, those organizations appeared to be fine (no development).

If you would like me to provide a definitive answer on what organizations can go Favorable, I can do that (these would be the cases where I noted "general advocacy." However, many appear to need more information (as noted in the comments in Excel).

-- I have marked asterisk (*) c3's that based on their Form 1023 and/or website are engaging in prohibited political campaign activities.
-- I use political activities/political campaign intervention/candidate election activities interchangeably to denote political activities.
-- While many of the c4 organizations appear to be engaging in general advocacy (issue advocacy/educational activities), many of these "social welfare activities" may need further development because their websites include substantial inflammatory/strong emotional rhetoric, articles, etc. that really do not appear to be educational in most or any aspect, provide any factual background for the viewpoints expressed, and therefore may not qualify as good c4 activities (promotion of social welfare, common good, etc.). Where there are questions relating to this and concerns about the activities (ie development would be needed), I have made comments.

Report Exhibits - Page 000018

-- Where I commented that a website needs to be verified means that the org didn't provide their website address on their Form 1023/1024 but I located it during a web search and it would need to be confirmed by the taxpayer.

-- Where I denoted the activity of the org as "general advocacy," this means I didn't find any indication the org was engaging in political activities or lobbying at all. However, as mentioned above in #3, I made additional notations on such organizations and whether they were even educational, issue advocacy, etc., or whether the activities appear to be propaganda, based on personal emotions, inflammatory, and without any or little factual basis for statements made (ie generally bad c3/c4 activities).

If there are any questions, please let me know. Also, we are in the process of drafting the Advocacy Org Guidelines and it is circulating for review among our group currently. I don't have a date on when we can get that to you, but will speak with Mike and Justin.

Thanks,
Hilary

Ted/Mike,

Not sure where this leaves us and I'm unclear as to what action is being suggested for some of these cases. Specifically, if the comment indicates "general advocacy," what does that mean --- additional development or what?

Also, where do we stand with the document Justin Lowe or others from D.C. were putting together with lessons learned, suggested developmental questions for those applying under c3 and for those applying under c4, sample denial letter, etc.? We're starting to get a lot of heat from the public on these cases sitting idle and now have Congressionals on some of these. What is the plan of action and estimated completion date? Thanks.

Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet

Many different types of exempt organizations engage in advocacy in compliance with the applicable tax laws. However, it can be challenging to distinguish between permissible and impermissible types of advocacy; analyzing cases involving these issues is extremely fact-intensive.

This guide sheet aids agents working these cases in differentiating between types of advocacy, reminds them of the advocacy rules pertaining to various categories of exempt organizations, and provides a checklist of facts to gather and indicators of various types of advocacy.

PART 1: THREE TYPES OF ADVOCACY:

This guide sheet breaks down the broad concept of advocacy into three categories: political campaign intervention, lobbying, and general advocacy. They are defined as follows.

1) Political Campaign Intervention:

An organization engages in political campaign intervention when it participates or intervenes in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office. This includes attempts to influence political campaigns through both direct and indirect support of, or opposition to, a candidate.

2) Lobbying:

An organization engages in lobbying, or legislative activities, when it attempts to influence specific legislation by directly contacting members of a legislative body (federal, state, or local), or encouraging the public to contact those members, regarding that legislation. An organization also engages in lobbying when it encourages the public to take a position on a referendum. Lobbying is distinguished from political campaign intervention because lobbying does not involve attempts to influence the election of candidates for public office.

3) General Advocacy:

An organization engages in general advocacy when it attempts to (1) influence public opinion on issues germane to the organization's exempt purposes, (2) influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch, regulatory agencies), or (3) encourage voter participation through get out the vote drives, voter guides, and candidate debates in a nonpartisan, neutral manner. General advocacy generally includes all other types of advocacy other than political campaign activity and lobbying.

Part 2: TYPES OF ADVOCACY ORGANIZATIONS:

The organizations that most commonly engage in advocacy are 501(c)(3), (4), (5), and (6) organizations and 527 organizations. Below are the rules governing which types of advocacy these organizations can engage in, along with a chart summarizing that information.

1) IRC 501(c)(3) organizations:

- Organizations described in 501(c)(3) are organized and operated exclusively for charitable, religious, educational, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or to foster national or international amateur sports competition, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.
- They can engage in an insubstantial amount of lobbying.
- They are absolutely prohibited from engaging in any type of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general advocacy as long as it is educational.

2) IRC 501(c)(4) organizations:

- Social welfare organizations described in IRC 501(c)(4) are organized and operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare, which involves promoting the common good and general welfare of people in the community.
- They can not be operated for profit.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(4) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(4) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.
- They can engage in lobbying as their primary activity if their legislative activities are related to their specific exempt purposes.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general educational advocacy as long as the activities are related to their exempt purposes.

3) IRC 501(c)(5) organizations:

- Organizations described in IRC 501(c)(5) must be organized and operated for the purpose of bettering the conditions of those engaged in labor, agricultural, or horticultural pursuits.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is conducted with regard to issues that are related to their exempt purpose.

Report Exhibits - Page 000021

- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(5) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(5) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.

4) IRC 501(c)(6) organizations:

- Business league organizations described in 501(c)(6) are associations of persons with a common business interest and their purposes must be to promote this common interest.
- They can not conduct a regular trade or business for profit.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is on issues related to their exempt purpose.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(6) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(6) activities, cannot make up the organization's primary activity.

5) IRC 527 organizations:

- Political organizations described in 527 are organized and operated for the primary purpose of engaging in political campaign intervention, including influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any Federal, State, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of Presidential or Vice-Presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in lobbying, but would be taxed on that activity.
- They can engage in general advocacy, but would be taxed on that activity.

Part 3: ADVOCACY INDICATORS:

Distinguishing between types of advocacy requires knowledge of all the pertinent facts and circumstances. Therefore, careful and full development of a case is often required to gather very specific facts. The following are facts about an organization's activities that can be helpful in distinguishing between different types of advocacy:

- What does the organization consider to be its exempt purpose(s)?
 - How much time is devoted to each purpose?
 - How many financial resources are devoted to each purpose?
 - In what order of importance does the organization consider its exempt purpose? From most important to least important?
- What are the sources of the organization's income?
- Does the organization engage in fundraising activities? If so, what are the specific details, including:
 - Copies of all solicitations the organization has made regarding fundraising, including fundraising that occurs in an election year and non-election year.
 - Copies of all documents related to the organization's fundraising events, including pamphlets, flyers, brochures, webpage solicitations.
 - How much of the organization's budget is spent on fundraising? Determine the sources of fundraising expenses.
- How does the organization use its income? Are there detailed break-downs of these expenses?
- How many employees does the organization have? How many volunteers?
 - Are employees full-time, part-time, or seasonal? Explain.
 - If employees are part-time, when did/do they work?
 - If employees are seasonal, during what season (months) did/do they work?
- How many employees and volunteers are/were devoted to each activity of the organization throughout the year?
- How many and what sort of resources are devoted to volunteer activities?
- Does the organization conduct educational events, discussion groups or similar events? If so, what are the specific details, including:
 - Copies of all materials distributed with regards to the event.
 - When have the events taken place or plan to take place?
 - How much of the organization's resources and budget are devoted to these activities? What is the breakdown of expenses?

Report Exhibits - Page 000023

- Does the organization publish or distribute materials or conduct other communications that are prepared by or reviewed by another organization?
- Is the organization associated with any other IRC 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4) or 527 organizations? If so, describe in detail the nature of the relationship(s).
 - Does the organization work with those organization(s) regularly? Describe the nature of the contacts.
 - Do you share employees, volunteers, resources, office space, etc. with the organization(s)?
- Does the organization conduct candidate forums or other events at which candidates for public office are invited to speak? If so, what are the details, including the nature of the forums, the candidates invited to participate, the candidates that did participate, the issues discussed, the time and location of the event.
 - Are there copies of all materials distributed regarding the forum and provided at the forum, including any internet material discussing or advertising the forum?
- Have any candidates for public office spoken at a function of the organization? If so, what are the names of the candidates, the functions at which they spoke, any materials distributed or published with regard to their appearance and the event, any video or audio recordings of the event, and a transcript of any speeches given by the candidate(s)?
- Does the organization, or has it ever, conducted voter education activities, including voter registration drives, get out the vote drives, or publish or distribute voter guides? If so:
 - What is the location, date and time of the events.
 - Who on the organization's behalf has or will conduct the voter registration or get out the vote drives?
 - How many resources (funds/employees/volunteers) are devoted to the activity?
 - Are there copies of all materials published or distributed regarding the activities, including copies of any voter guides?
- Does the organization engage in business dealings with any candidate(s) for public office or an organization associated with the candidate, such as renting office space or providing access to a membership list? If so, what is the relationship in detail and are there any contracts or other agreements documenting the business relationship?
- Does the organization attempt to influence the outcome of specific legislation?
 - Are there copies of all communications, pamphlets, advertisements, and other materials distributed by the organization regarding the legislation?
 - Does the organization conduct media advertisements lobbying for or against legislation? Are there copies of any radio, television, or internet advertisements relating to the organization's lobbying activities?
 - Does the organization directly or indirectly communicate with members of legislative bodies? If so, determine the amount and nature of the communication.

Report Exhibits - Page 000024

Below are indicators used when determining whether an IRC 501(c)(3), IRC 501(c)(4), (5) or (c)(6), or IRC 527 organization is engaging in (1) political campaign intervention, (2) lobbying (legislative activities), or (3) general advocacy.

Section I: Political Campaign Intervention

The following are indicators of political campaign intervention:

		Yes	No
A.	Is there a "candidate" for "public office?" This is an individual who: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Offers himself, or • Is proposed by others • As a contestant for elective public office, whether national, state, or local public office. An individual who has not yet announced an intent to seek election to public office may still be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for office. Has the individual taken sufficient steps prior to announcing an intent to seek election, so that he or she may be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for public office? Have others proposed the individual as a candidate for public office, even if the individual has announced an intention of not seeking election to the office? Some action must be taken to make one a candidate, but the action need not be taken by the candidate or require his consent. This would include statements in opposition to a candidate for office, even before that candidate has necessarily declared themselves as a contestant for office.
B.	Is the candidate seeking an office to which he or she must be elected, as opposed to appointed? The political campaign intervention prohibition applies only to campaigns for offices to which a candidate must be elected. Factors indicating an elective public office include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The position was created by statute • The position is continuous • The position is not contractual • The position is for a fixed term of office • The office requires an oath of office
C.	Does the organization publish and/or distribute written or printed statements, including communications made on the internet, in favor of or against a candidate for public office? This includes material prepared by the organization itself or by other organizations or individuals. Do materials distributed by the organization encourage members to vote for or against a candidate?
	Has the organization criticized or expressed support for a candidate on their website or through links to another website?
	Has the organization made oral statements in support of or in opposition to a candidate for public office?

	Does the organization encourage individuals to vote for or against a particular candidate? Organizations are not prohibited from speaking about moral, social, or economic issues during election periods. However, consider the facts and circumstances to determine whether the organization is surreptitiously intervening in a political campaign under the pretext of speaking to moral, social or economic issues by tying its message to the election in a manner that expresses a preference for a candidate or candidate.
	Does the organization reference a candidate by use of "code words" or other references to identify a candidate, such as "Republican," "Democrat," "pro-life," "pro-choice," etc.? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Are such references coupled with reasonably overt indications that the organization supports or opposes a particular candidate or candidates in an election? Does the communication contain a relatively clear directive, based on the facts and circumstances, that enables the recipient to understand the organization's position on a candidate or candidate?
	Has the organization established or does it operate a political action committee (PAC)?
	Has the organization made contributions to a political action committee (PAC)?
	Does the organization provide or solicit money or other support for a candidate or a political organization?
	Does the organization place signs on its property supporting or opposing a candidate?
	Does the organization rate candidates, even on a nonpartisan basis?
	Have organization leaders made comments in an official publication of the organization or at official functions of the organization indicating support for or opposition to a candidate?
	Does the organization conduct business dealings in a manner favoring a candidate or candidates, such as by renting facilities at different rates or providing/denying access to its membership list?
D.	Personal Endorsements: Organization leaders may endorse or oppose a candidate in their personal capacity, and not in their official capacity. The following are indicators that the organization leader is speaking in his or her personal capacity and not in their official capacity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Do the organization leader's statements appear in a publication that is not an official publication of the organization? Is the ad or publication paid for by the individual himself or herself, and not by the organization? Is the organization leader's title and affiliation with the organization used for identification purposes only, and not to indicate support by the organization?

E.	Candidate Forums: The presentation of public forums for candidates to speak or debate is not in and of itself prohibited political campaign intervention, but may be a permissible method of educating the public (See Rev. Rul. 86-258; Rev. Rul. 74-574; Rev. Rul. 86-95). All the facts and circumstances must be considered and the presence or absence of one factor is not determinative. Consider the following factors when determining whether the forum is operated in a manner that may constitute prohibited campaign intervention or a permissible educational event: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the organization operate the forum in a manner indicating bias or preference for one candidate or candidates over others, such as through biased questioning? • Has the organization indicated support for or opposition to a candidate (e.g., such as when the candidate is introduced)? • Does the organization invite only candidates who share the same position as the organization to participate? • Does the organization provide an equal opportunity for all candidates to participate? • Does the organization provide equal amounts of time for each candidate to answer questions and express their views? • Are questions prepared and presented by a nonpartisan, independent panel or moderator? • Does the moderator comment on questions or otherwise make comments that imply approval or disapproval of a candidate? • Does the organization make statements that the views expressed are those of the candidates and not of the organization, and/or that the organization does not endorse any candidate or viewpoint? • Do the topics discussed cover a broad range of issues that are of interest to the public? • Are the candidates asked to agree or disagree with positions, agendas, platforms, or statements of the organization, indicating prohibited campaign intervention?
F.	Candidate Appearances: Has a candidate spoken at an official function of the organization in his or her personal capacity or capacity as a political candidate? Depending on the facts and circumstances an organization may invite political candidates to speak at its events without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status (See Rev. Rul. 2007-41). When determining if prohibited political campaign intervention occurred, consider the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Was the candidate invited to speak at the organization's event in his or her capacity as a political candidate? • Did the organization provide an equal opportunity to participate to political candidates seeking the same office? (Consider the nature of the event, such as if the organization invites one

	candidate to speak at a well attended event but invites an opposing candidate to speak at a sparsely attended event. This could constitute prohibited campaign intervention even if the manner of presentation for both speakers is otherwise neutral.) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Did the organization indicate support for or opposition to the candidate (including during candidate introductions, communications concerning the candidate's attendance, including any materials distributed during the event)? • Did any political fundraising occur?
G.	Did the candidate appear or speak at an organization event in a non-candidate capacity? (See Rev. Rul. 2007-41) The candidate's presence at a public event, such as a lecture, concert, or worship service does not by itself indicate the organization is engaged in prohibited political campaign intervention. The following factors should be considered when determining if prohibited political intervention occurred: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Is the candidate publicly recognized by the organization or a representative of the organization during the event as a candidate for public office? • Did the organization clearly indicate the capacity in which the candidate is appearing and does not mention the individual's political candidacy or the upcoming election in any communications announcing the candidate's attendance at the event? • Is the individual chosen to speak solely for reasons other than his or her candidacy, such as their status as a public figure aside from being a political candidate, the individual currently holds or previously held a public office, is considered an expert in a non-political field, is a celebrity, or has led a distinguished military, legal or public service career. • Has any campaign activity occurred in connection with the candidate's attendance?
H.	Voter Guides: Certain "voter education" activities conducted in a non-partisan manner may not constitute prohibited political campaign activity, but may be permissible educational activity. The following are indicators that a voter guide constitutes prohibited political campaign activity, and not permissible educational activity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Are incumbents identified as candidates for re-election? • Are incumbents' positions compared to the positions of other candidates or the organization's position in a biased manner? • Is the voting guide distributed close in time to an election? • Is the voting guide primarily concerned with a narrow range of issues of importance to the organization (e.g. such as land conservation or abortion) as opposed to reporting on all legislation voted on by the candidates or of importance to the electorate?

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Is the voting guide widely distributed among the electorate during an election campaign as opposed to the organization's membership? • Does the voting guide include only the voting records of candidates for office? • Does the voting guide include the voting records of candidates in a partisan manner, such as by ranking them according to whether their vote aligns with the organization's position on the issue? • Does the voting guide contain editorial comments by the organization? • Does the voting guide contain express or implied approval or disapproval of a candidate's voting record?
I.	Candidate Questionnaires: Depending on the facts and circumstances a candidate questionnaire published by an organization may constitute permissible educational activity as opposed to prohibited political campaign intervention. The following are indicators that the organization's questionnaires constitute prohibited campaign intervention: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the candidate questionnaire contain editorial comments by the organization? • Does the candidate questionnaire include only issues of importance to the organization itself and not to the general public? • Does the questionnaire contain express or implied approval or disapproval of candidate responses?

Section II: Lobbying

The following factors are indicative of lobbying (i.e. legislative activities):

		Yes	No
A.	Is the organization attempting to influence legislation or a legislative proposal? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Legislation includes acts, bills, resolutions, referendums, initiatives, legislative confirmation of an appointive office, constitutional amendments by Congress, state legislatures, local councils or similar governing bodies or by the public in a referendum, initiative, constitutional amendment or similar procedure. • Lobbying does not include attempts to influence (1) regulations or (2) administrative matters.
B.	Is there "action" being taken with reference to the legislation? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Action includes introduction, amendment, enactment, defeat, or repeal by legislative bodies or the public.

C.	Does the organization engage in "direct lobbying?" <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Is the organization trying to influence legislation by directly contacting members or employees of a legislative body? Does the organization communicate with government officials or employees who can affect legislation? Do the communications refer to specific legislation? Do the communications reflect the organization's specific views on legislation? Does the organization advocate a position on a specific act, bill, or resolution?
D.	Does the organization engage in "indirect" or "grassroots" lobbying: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Does the organization attempt to influence legislation by influencing the public's opinion on specific legislation? Does the communication refer to specific legislation? Does the communication reflect a view or position on the legislation? Does the communication to the public include a "call to action" such as providing the address for the legislature, using a petition or tear-off postcard to communicate with the legislature or specifically identifying a legislator who will be voting on the proposed legislation and his or her position on it, or encouraging the public to contact members of a legislative body for purposes of supporting, opposing or proposing legislation?

Section III: General Advocacy

The following are indicators of general advocacy:

		Yes	No
A.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Is the organization attempting to influence public opinion on issues, rather than attempting to influence the election of candidates for public office or specific legislation? Is the organization attempting to influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch, regulators)? Is the organization engaging in nonpartisan, neutral voter educational activities? These may include get out the vote drives, encouraging voter registration, encouraging voter participation, candidate debates and forums, and the distribution of voter guides if conducted in a nonpartisan and neutral manner. (Refer to the subheads above for criteria when considering whether these voter education activities are conducted in a nonpartisan manner.)
B.	Does the organization engage in "educational" activities? (See Rev. Proc. 86-43). The term "educational" relates to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The instruction or training of an individual for the purpose of

	improving or developing his capabilities, or <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community.
	Is the organization advocating a particular position or viewpoint? If "Yes" to the following, the activity may qualify as permissible educational activity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the organization present a sufficiently full and fair exposition of the pertinent facts that aid the listener or reader in the learning process? • Does the organization provide a factual background for the viewpoint or position being advocated?
C.	The organization's presentations should avoid the following factors in order to be considered educational: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Do the organization's presentations avoid expressing conclusions more on the basis of strong emotional feelings than of objective evaluations? • Does the organization avoid presenting viewpoints or positions unsupported by facts and this is a significant portion of the organization's communications? • Does the organization avoid presenting facts purporting to support its viewpoints or position made in a distorted manner? • Does the organization avoid making substantial use of inflammatory and/or disparaging terms?

Cases by Patterns: Specializing similar cases? - Tea Party, c3, c4, 912, general category (not belonging to patterned cases), etc.: Will pursue as long as we do not deviate from the general rule.

Constant updates on new ideas, questions and cases - All team members, management, QA, EO Tech.

- 1) Stephen, Joseph, and Liz will formulate a general template questionnaire from the letters done by EOD and EO Tech and it will be done by the Advocacy Team members in the future.
- 2) Once the draft is formulated, it will be emailed to the Advocacy Team members for review and input, and will be discussed at a round table style meeting.
- 3) This process will be repeated if needed until finalized.

Case closing: Approval and Denial - coordinated process among team members, coordinator, management, QA, and EO Tech - maybe to less degree once all the foundations are established to increase efficiency and effectiveness: Further details will be discussed and forthcoming as case developments progress.

5) Work Capacity: Team Members Time Allocation Survey - the team members will notify Stephen after a discussion with their manager.

6) Case assignment: Questions that have been used so far will be emailed for inquiry letters as a reference:

Report Exhibits - Page 000033

The various inquiry letters sent out from EO Tech and EOD are attached with those minutes.

Note: The memorandum for file by Hull Carter (EO Tech) will be emailed to all team members as soon as I image it.

Cases will be assigned this afternoon to those who requested them - I will send an notification email after assignment.

- 7) Research Tools: All cases should be researched in Accurint and the web during the development. For the Team members who do not have Accurint, Accurint ID request form is attached with this memo.

Note: Manager forwards the completed request form to Sandra C Shaw after approval.

I think Sharon is right significant is a more helpful guideline although excess is not wrong.

I might drop out "excess." I think a significant amount of private benefit makes more sense.

I would like your thoughts on the language below. I would like this language to replace the current advocacy org language on the BOLO as well as the separate references to ACORN successors and Occupy groups.

501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention or excess private benefit to organizations or individuals. Note: typical advocacy type issues (e.g., lobbying) that are currently listed on the Case Assignment Guide (CAG) do not meet these criteria.

Let's talk about this. But my suggestion from the meeting with Lois is that we go ahead and send it back with the advice that they develop 2010.

EO is in the process of drafting model development letters for the advocacy group applications and will be sending them to us to review. That project seems like a better use of our time and will ensure more quality and consistency with all the cases.

Ken:

How do you want one of us (Don, Amy or me) to respond? Or, do you want to respond?

You are the reviewer on this case. I am providing intermediate assistance. Don is involved because of his involvement with the c4 exemption standards project and his litigation experience with c4s.

Don previously met with EO execs on c4 exemption standards and I understand that there was another meeting this week. Amy and I have both been sufficiently busy that we have not turned much attention to the case. We presently are scheduled to talk preliminarily about how to proceed in

Holly,

Attached is the briefing paper we plan to use at the meeting with Lois on Wednesday afternoon. Please let us know if you have any questions or would like to meet beforehand.

Thanks,

Increase in (c)(3)/(c)(4) Advocacy Org. Applications

Background:

- EOD Screening has identified an increase in the number of (c)(3) and (c)(4) applications where organizations are advocating on issues related to government spending, taxes and similar matters. Often there is possible political intervention or excessive lobbying.
- EOD Screening identified this type of case as an emerging issue and began sending cases to a specific group if they meet any of the following criteria:
 - "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12 Project" is referenced in the case file
 - Issues include government spending, government debt or taxes
 - Education of the public by advocacy/lobbying to "make America a better place to live"
 - Statements in the case file criticize how the country is being run
- Over 100 cases have been identified so far, a mix of (c)(3)s and (c)(4)s. Before this was identified as an emerging issue, two (c)(4) applications were approved.
- Two sample cases were transferred to EOT, a (c)(3) and a (c)(4).
 - The (c)(4) stated it will conduct advocacy and political intervention, but political intervention will be 20% or less of activities. A proposed favorable letter has been sent to Counsel for review.
 - The (c)(3) stated it will conduct "insubstantial" political intervention and it has ties to politically active (c)(4)s and 527s. A proposed denial is being revised by TLS to incorporate the org.'s response to the most recent development letter.
- EOT is assisting EOD by providing technical advice (limited review of application files and editing of development letters).

EOD Request:

- EOD requests guidance in working these cases in order to promote uniform handling and resolution of issues.

Options for Next Steps:

- Assign cases for full development to EOD agents experienced with cases involving possible political intervention. EOT provides guidance when EOD agents have specific questions.
- EOT composes a list of issues or political/lobbying indicators to look for when investigating potential political intervention and excessive lobbying, such as reviewing website content, getting copies of educational and fundraising materials, and close scrutiny of expenditures.
- Establish a formal process similar to that used in healthcare screening where EOT reviews each application on TEDS and highlights issues for development.
- Transfer cases to EOT to be worked.
- Include pattern paragraphs on the political intervention restrictions in all favorable letters.
- Refer the organizations that were granted exemption to the ROO for follow-up.

Cautions:

- These cases and issues receive significant media and congressional attention.
- The determinations process is representational, therefore it is extremely difficult to establish that an organization will intervene in political campaigns at that stage.

Hilary and Justin,

As part of that discussion, we also concluded that we should draft a list of things for EOD agents to look for when working these types of advocacy cases.

Hilary, can you work with Justin, i.e. you draft and Justin reviews. When you both are done, I like to look at it, and your managers (Andy and Laurice/Steve) should also look at it too. Thanks, Mike

Donna,

Sorry for the late notice about the visit. This came up last minute and has moved very quickly. We would like to interview all the folks who had been involved in this bucket of advocacy cases as a group to make folks feel as comfortable as possible. We are tied up tomorrow with other meetings and are leaving Thursday so we will need to get a hour or two of Liz's time on Wednesday. Liz can step out of group meetings with the BPMO for a bit and we'll move any meeting BPMO has with her alone to a different time in the day. We don't need to talk to anyone else in Quality as the focus right now is on a specific group of cases (not advocacy cases in general). We are interested in talking to Liz because she was involved with those specific cases when she was in Determs.

Donna,

The discussion and decision for D.C. folks to visit Cincinnati was last minute and plans weren't finalized until late in the week.

As indicated in the email below, Liz Hofacre was the initial coordinator for the advocacy cases and that is why everyone believes it is important that she be included in the discussion. Regarding her participation on 4/25, Holly will need to make the call as to whether it is more important for Liz to meet with the other Advocacy Team members and D.C. on 4/25 for an hour or two or for her to participate in the QA review.

It is my understanding that none of the advocacy cases that were identified as part of the BOLO bucket have been closed, and that one c3 case that is expected to be denied was recently copied and sent to QA, EOT, and EOG. If you have information to the contrary, please let me know. Thanks.

Hi Cindy,
Thanks for passing this along. I did not know Holly and company were coming to Cincinnati. Also, the April 25th date coincides with the date of the QA review in which my folks - including Liz - will be occupied most of the day. Therefore, QA will be available and willing to meet with any of the visitors the 24th or the 26th.

Report Exhibits - Page 000134

It is also important to note that QA has reviewed some advocacy cases and currently has three under review in EO Technical. A denial for a advocacy/political case was recently publicly posted. It is also important to point out that Liz is not the sole QA reviewer involved in the review of advocacy cases - she has simply been the QA reviewer that has attended most (not all) of the Determinations meetings on the topic.

Thanks,
Donna

Donna,

I apologize, I meant to cc: you on the email below. Also, the 5 folks from D.C. want Liz Hofacre to be included with those being interviewed on 4/25 since she was the initial coordinator for these cases and is the QA rep. on the Advocacy Team.

If you have questions regarding this, please let me know. Thanks.

Because of the hearings involving advocacy cases in which Steve Miller will need to testify, several folks from TEGE Headquarters will be in Cincinnati next week to take a tour of our operations, review advocacy cases, etc., in order to prep Steve for the hearings. While the folks from D.C. are in Cincinnati, they plan to review all of the advocacy cases. A separate email will be sent regarding these cases.

The following week three representatives from TIGTA, along with the Acting Director, EO R&A, will be in Cincinnati to take a tour, etc., and as a separate event the Acting Commissioner, TEGE will be visiting.

Following is a schedule by day for the next two weeks of what will be taking place, where, and who will be involved.

April 23 - Visitors and Town Hall from 2:30 to 3:00 (Room 5411)

Holly Paz will hold a short meeting for all agents/managers in Cincinnati that are in the office on this day. Please be certain to pass this information on to specialists in your group. Other folks from TEGE Headquarters will be in Room 7116-D reviewing advocacy cases. Those from TEGE Headquarters who will be in Cincinnati are:

Senior Technical Advisors to Acting Commissioner, TEGE (Rob Malone, Nan Marks, Joe Urban), Senior Technical Advisor to Director, EO (Sharon Light), Acting Director, EO R&A (Holly Paz)

Report Exhibits - Page 000135

April 24 - Tour (CSPC and Room 7106)

The folks from D.C. and I will be taking a tour of the Cincinnati Submission Processing Center (CSPC) starting at 8 a.m. I expect that we will be back to the Federal Building by approx. 10 a.m. Then, a representative from the Screening Group will be needed to conduct a demo in TEDS of the initial screening process. Also, a representative from Group 7822 will be needed to conduct a demo in TEDS of the actions that take place for cases after the initial screening (e.g., assignment of AP/IP or full development and those steps that follow) with a focus on the advocacy cases. Room 7106 has been reserved for the demos. Those who should be in attendance include Peggy Combs (optional), John Shafer, Steve Bowling, and Tyler Chumney, as well as a representative from the Screening Group who will demo the initial screening process and a representative from Group 7822 who will demo actions taken by an agent for full development cases --- I'd recommend Ron Bell since he was one of the TEDS instructors and was also the advocacy case coordinator when we reached out to EDT for coordination. We can discuss on Monday (4/23).

Following the demos, the folks from D.C. will continue reviewing the advocacy cases in Room 7116-D.

April 25 - Meeting with those involved with the Advocacy Cases from 9:00 to ? (Room 7106)

The folks from D.C. would like to have a meeting with Steve Bowling, Tyler Chumney, Ron Bell, and Stephen Seok. This meeting will begin at 9:00 a.m. in Room 7106. After this meeting takes place, the folks from D.C. would like for a few of the agents on the Advocacy Team to join the others. Those who have been identified thus far include Joseph Harr, Liz Hofacre, Mitch Steele, and Cary Young. These folks should plan to come to Room 7112 at approx. 10 a.m. Someone will come to Room 7112 to get them when ready. It is possible that other Advocacy Team members will be added. Therefore, it would be beneficial if all those agents in Cincinnati who are on the Advocacy Team made sure they were in the office and available on 4/25/2012.

Following these meetings, the folks from D.C. will continue reviewing the advocacy cases in Room 7116-D.

April 26 - Folks from D.C. will continue reviewing the advocacy cases in Room 7116-D and will depart at approx. noon.

April 30 - TIGTA visit beginning at 2:30 p.m. (Room 4503)

Holly Paz and I will meet with TIGTA beginning at 2:30 p.m. We will take them to the Processing Section to look at hard-copy cases. Also, Nick Reinhardt will conduct a TEDS demo beginning after 3 p.m. I've requested Room 7106 for the TEDS demo, but may need to have it in Room 4503.

Those from TIGTA who will be in Cincinnati are:

Michael McGovern
Cheryl Medina
Thomas Seidell

May 1 - Tour (CSPC and Room 7106 or 7108)

The folks from TIGTA, along with Holly Paz and I, will be taking a tour of the Cincinnati Submission Processing Center (CSPC) starting at 8 a.m. I expect that we will be back to the Federal Building by approx. 10 a.m. Then, a representative from the Screening Group will be needed to conduct a demo in TEDS of the initial screening process. Also, a representative from Group 7822 will be needed to conduct a demo in TEDS of the actions that take place for cases after the initial screening (e.g., assignment of AP/IP or full development and those steps that follow) with a focus on the advocacy cases. Ron Bell since he was one of the TEDS instructors and was also the advocacy case coordinator when we reached out to EOT for coordination. We can discuss on Monday (4/23).

May 2 - Acting Commissioner, TEGE (Joseph Grant), Director, TEGE Planning (Imraan Khakoo), and Acting Commissioner, TEGE Senior Technical Advisor (Nan Marks) Visit

Subject: Advocacy Cases - Data Needed COB Every Wednesday

Holly Paz and others in D.C. have regular meetings with Steve Miller regarding the political advocacy cases and they typically need data for these meetings because Steve wants to make sure these cases continue to move. So that we don't need to continue to scramble around at the last minute to gather data, please send information to Ron Bell by COB every Wednesday. Specifically,

1. List of cases that have been closed for the week (with all information you have currently been sending as cases are closed --- no need to continue sending as cases are closed),
2. List of cases, along with bucket number, where an initial additional information letter was sent,
3. List of organizations that provided donor information, along with bucket number, where we'll need to send them a letter advising donor information will be expunged from the file (once we get the revised letter from D.C.), and
4. List of organizations, along with bucket number, where the cases need to be updated to status 97 (auto revocation) but are on hold pending decision by D.C.

Faye/Janine -- we also need to know how many bucket 1 cases you still have open, and of this amount how many required development letters, how many are on hold pending decisions about auto revocation, and when you expect the bucket 1 cases to be closed.

If you have any questions/concerns, please elevate them. Thanks.

Yes and yes. We call all orgs that got a development letter but have not yet responded and put addendum 1 in their letters. We don't need to call orgs that responded to the development letter(s) or orgs that didn't get a development letters (the newer cases).

Thank you!

To clarify....

Are we required to call the c4 applicants that received a development letter in all cases where they didn't respond and we're issuing a favorable letter (phone script)? And, we are also required to include the paragraph on the letter for these cases before issuing the letter (favorable c4 ltr with paragraph 1)?

Addendum for Use in Favorable Advocacy Org C4 Cases in Which Applicant Was Sent a Development Letter But Has Not Yet Responded

Please note that we have just completed another review of your request to be recognized as tax-exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code. Based on that review, we concluded that we do not need the additional materials previously requested because your application and materials provide sufficient information.

Addendum for Use in ALL Favorable Advocacy Org C4 Cases

Enclosed with this letter is an educational booklet about the various tax law requirements applicable to section 501(c)(4) organizations. Additional information about these various requirements is available at www.irs.gov/charities. For example, as discussed in pages 3-5 of the enclosed Pub 4221-NC, section 501(c)(4) organizations may attempt to influence the selection, nomination, election or appointment of an individual to a federal, state, or local public office (political campaign activity). However, political campaign activity does not further a section 501(c)(4) exempt purpose and, together with all other non-exempt activity, cannot be the organization's primary activity. We hope you will find this information helpful and encourage you to review it carefully.

Hello. My name is _____. I am calling about the application for recognition of tax-exempt status submitted by [insert applicant name]. The IRS previously sent you a request for additional information, and I believe we haven't yet received a response. But, we've taken another look at your application and materials, and have concluded that we have sufficient information to make a decision without the requested information. I am pleased to tell you that we have determined that [insert applicant name] qualifies for exemption under 501(c)(4). You should receive your determination letter within two weeks.

IF asked why it took so long:

I'm sorry for the difficulty you have had getting exempt status. We received an increased number of applications for 501(c)(4) status that were different from what we have seen in the past. We needed to understand the activities being conducted so we could make sure that those activities are consistent with what the tax law allows.

Subject: Issue from Advocacy Team Meeting Held 10/30/2012

Holly,

I had a meeting with the advocacy team this morning to go over some general inventory information regarding #'s of cases, to discuss the QA process, and to address any of their concerns.

Regarding QA - thus far, 3 cases were returned on checksheets after QA approved the cases. I view these as "advisory" memos. Joseph Harr reviewed all 3 and indicated that it was just "picky" stuff. But, we did ask the specialists to spend a little more time documenting workpapers for these cases.

An issue that was raised that I need to elevate is regarding the bucket 4 cases. Specifically, only a handful of cases are assigned to Mitch and Joseph. They indicated that they don't know what to do when responses are received. Who is their contact? Are they supposed to send copies of responses to the contact in D.C.? If not, what action is required on their part? Also, they are concerned that with the pace that is taking place that they'll be working the bucket 4 cases until they retire (this isn't intended to be a flip comment, but rather a sincere concern). We all understand why several people are reviewing the files, but are certain folks working this exclusively to make sure these cases are moving? I explained to them that when referrals are sent to EO Exam for political type cases a team of 3 review the referral to make the decision as to whether an organization will be audited — again, they do get it. Additionally, I told them I wasn't 100% sure but believe some of the same folks reviewing the bucket 4 cases are the ones who were reviewing the copies of the c4 cases we had to send in response to the Congressional request. Anyway, it would be helpful if a POC was identified for them or if some guidance was provided specifying under which circumstances they need to contact D.C. after receiving responses from the organizations.

NOTE: Joseph is going to start making contact with all the c3 bucket 4 cases to see if they are willing to change to c4 if we determine that c4 is more appropriate.

Hi Holly,

I am just following up on the status of a couple of requests for information. The first relates to the cases that appear to have been removed from the advocacy inventory and the second is for the missing bucket sheets for one case. (see emails below) Do you know when we will be receiving responses to these requests?

We are also waiting for just a few cases from Cincinnati. The folks there have done a great job of providing us with the case files and any follow-up requests for additional information. We really appreciate all the time and effort this has taken.

Hi Holly,

The attached document is the review completed by Judy Kindell to identify unnecessary questions being asked in the advocacy development letters. We have identified 4 cases (highlighted) that are not included on the May/June 2012 advocacy listing we are using in our review.

What happened to these cases and why would they be removed from the tracking sheet? Are there any other cases that were removed from the advocacy listing? Why and how many?

Thanks for any information you can provide.

Cheryl

Here is the result of Susan's and my review. We did not see any questions regarding what are book clubs reading - we did see questions regarding what books are you selling.

- A. Requests Names of Donors
- B. Provide a list of all issues that are important to your organization. Indicate your position regarding such issue.
- C. In list of questions soliciting details about activity asked about the following: (1) the roles and activities of audience and participants other than members in the activity and (2) what type of conversations and discussions did your members and participants have during the activity
- D. Asks whether officer, director, etc. has run or will run for public office
- E. Requests political affiliation of officer, director, speakers, candidates supported, etc. or otherwise refers to relationship with identified political party-related organizations
- F. Requests info re employment other than for org, including hours worked
- G. Letter requests information regarding activities of another org -- not just relationship of other org to applicant

Re: [REDACTED]

Here is what I know so far. I will get back to you once I have more information.

For this organization, there are 2 cases controlled on EDS:

- one c3 case with an 11/6/2011 control date. It is in the Political Advocacy full development unassigned inventory.
- one c4 case with an 11/16/2011 control date. This case was approved through the IP process -- not by anyone on the advocacy team.

The c3 case is on the Advocacy Tracking Sheet, but doesn't show a bucket and doesn't show that it is assigned to anyone which makes me believe that it is bucket 4 case. I'll try to gather more information regarding this case and will get back with you.

Participants included members of the screening group, embedded screeners from Cincinnati, west coast screeners, selected secondary screeners, TE/GE EO Quality Assurance's Staff and Area 1 & 2 Managers. The workshop agenda, PowerPoint and attachments were presented to participants via email.

Topics and Highlights

Opening Statements: John Shafer

- Welcomed participants.
- Encouraged participants to email topics for inclusion in our next Workshop.
- Current workshop is to provide an update on current issues and concerns.
- Floor was turned over to Presentators. Topics/Presentators follow:

Organization filing after 27-Month their Formation: Glenn W Collins/John Shafer

- Glenn provided a brief summary as to why a secondary screening process was created.
- Pension Protection Act of 2006 created the legal requirement for organizations not required to file Form 990* to notify the IRS within three years of exemption. Failure to do so creates Automatic Revocation of Exemption.
 - *This requirement does not include Churches or Church-Related Organizations- and are not subject to the Automatic Revocation.
 - An opportunity for a one-time relief from revocation has been presented.
 - As a result automatic revocations have been delayed until January 2011.
 - Once effective automatic revocations will reflect ST 97.
- Three characteristics were identified that mandates transfer to Group 7822 for Secondary Screening and IDRS research.

- The emailed attachment outlines the overall process.
- Glenn deferred additional statements and/or questions to John Shafer on yesterday's developments; how they affect the screening process and timeline.
- Concerns can be directed to Glenn for additional research if necessary.

Current/Political Activities: Gary Muthert

- Discussion focused on the political activities of Tea Parties and the like- regardless of the type of application.
- If in doubt Err on the Side of Caution and transfer to 7822.
- Indicated the following names and/or titles were of interest and should be flagged for review:
 - 9/12 Project,
 - Emerge.
 - Progressive
 - We The People,
 - Rally Patriots, and
 - Pink-Slip Program.
- Elizabeth Hofacre, Tea Party Coordinator/Reviewer
 - Re-empathize that applications with Key Names and/or Subjects should be transferred to 7822 for Secondary Screening. Activities must be primary.
 - "Progressive" applications are not considered "Tea Parties"

When you get back, can you find out what's going with the advocacy org determinations? I thought I got them unstuck but I think it's not fixed.

Hi Sharon: Thanks for checking on this. Did you ever hear anything?
(Hate to bug you.) I am considering contacting the Taxpayer Advocate on behalf of this client. I have never approached them about an application, but this situation seems pretty extreme. Hope all goes well. [REDACTED]

Subject: FW: TAG info

Holly,

Information you requested regarding the TAG group and program was incorporated into the original email below.

As far as Lois' email below dated 3/11/2011, I think it may be unclear to folks that the TAG group is just 1 of 13 EO Determinations groups. The TAG group has designated cases that it works just like the other 12 groups in EO Determinations. In fact, most of the groups have more than one category of cases assigned to them. For example, one group works charter schools and farmers' co-ops, another group works foreclosure assistance/downpayment assistance/credit counselling cases, another group works potential emerging issues and potential auto revocation cases, another carbon credit cases/VEBAs/foreign organizations, and on and on. The reason we took this step was to improve quality, decrease time per case, improve customer satisfaction, and improve employee/manager satisfaction so that everyone did not need to be a technical expert in every area.

If we do away with the TAG group, then every group and every specialist who gets a potential terrorist case (for example) will be coordinating with D.C., every specialist/manager will need to spin his/her wheels figuring out how to coordinate with FIU should a potential fraudulent situation occur, etc. That doesn't seem to be a very efficient process. If we are going to take away the designated cases for that group, then why have a foreclosure assistance group, why have a charter school group, why not spread the tea party cases out to everyone, etc.? I will say, however, that I don't have a problem if a decision is made to not include the TAG group in all the coordination efforts that take place between ATAT, EO Exam, etc. We don't do that with the other types of cases we work. We simply coordinate with EOT and EODQA when we have emerging issues such as tea party cases, or other new issues such as health care, foreclosure assistance, etc.

If you have any questions/concerns regarding the information provided, please let me know. Thanks.

I'm sending this so I won't lose the thought. I'd like us to schedule a status on TAG and have a seriously discussion of the pros and cons. In my overall look at processes we've designed over the last several years, I want to better understand its utility and explore whether we should maintain it as is, change it, or get rid of it altogether. No hurry--just don't want it to fall through the cracks.

Subject: TAG info

The info Lois would like in advance of the meeting about the tag group you and I discussed is:

number of employees in this group:

Total 13 (9 grade 12, 3 grade 13, 1 manager). One of the grade 13 agents serves as an anti-terrorism coordinator/liaison between EO Determinations groups and the Washington Office. Another grade 13 agent serves as a potential fraud and abusive tax avoidance schemes coordinator/liaison between the FIU and EO Determinations groups.

number of cases worked by the group (see attached)* average cycle time of cases in this group (see attached)*

*The way EDS attributes cases to groups may adversely impact what we are trying to get at here. This is because EDS tracks data by specialist number and not by group number. EDS will move all cases (open or closed) in a specialists number into and out of the TAG group as specialists move in and out. Specifically, anybody that was in the TAG group in 2009 but no longer there, will not have their cases counted for the 2009 closures. Anybody that wasn't in the TAG group then but moved there now, will have there closures from 2009 counted for the TAG group even though they weren't closed by the TAG group.

average age of cases currently open in tag (see attached)

— = Redacted by the Permanent
Subcommittee on Investigations

list of categories of cases/issues that are worked in tag:

1. Foreign Conduits: These are cases typically referred to as American Friends Of Orgs. These are domestic organizations set up to provide funding to a particular named foreign organization. We typically find that the vast majority of these organizations involve monies going to [REDACTED] however, the same tax would apply regardless of the country involved.

2. Anti Terrorism Cases: These are domestic applicants with substantial activities in countries of higher risk stipulated by the Country Reports on Terrorism. The category includes not only actual activities but also grant making as well. This category also could include partial name matches against the OFAC List. With name match cases, these applications can also be worked outside of TAG if that is the main issue. However, in those instances, the agent is still required to complete the Potential Terrorist Connection Checksheet to the Terrorist Coordinator () so the issue can be properly cleared before case closure.

3. Abusive Tax Avoidance Schemes: This category encompasses several case types such as the following:

- TAG #18 (Non Foreign Conduits): Cases involving potential tax avoidance schemes such as inurement of earnings, loans and grants made for non-exempt purposes, attempts to gain church status to avoid property taxes, requests for PF status in an attempt to shelter income (over the past 1-2 years, we have seen relatively few of these applications), etc. These cases are traditionally associated with known abusive practitioners currently the subject of ATAT investigations.
- Corporation Soles: These are rarely seen applications (i.e. 1 or 2 per year) but the issue is still current. These applications could be a form of tax avoidance scheme as they typically associated with pastors or religious leaders looking to self-incorporate.
- Abusive Promotions and Promoters: Examples would be (b)(7)(F), (b)(7)(G), and other types promotions where multiple applicants are provided with a plan to obtain tax exemption in order to serve their private interests. When identified and developed, many of these applications are denied such as the (b)(7)(F).
- Referrals from other specialists: Cases assigned to specialists in other determination groups who encounter a situation where the applicant appears to be involved in a potential terrorist situation, potential fraudulent activity, or potential abusive tax avoidance scheme. NOTE: These cases are rarely seen. The determination specialist assigned the case keeps the case and coordinates with the TAG group via a referral form.

4. Fraudulent Determination Letter: These letters are referred to us from the Correspondence Unit or other groups and are coordinated with Lucy Acosta of the FIU for proper coordination of referral (typically CI or SB/SE).

Based on the discussion you and I had the other day, information about how other emerging issues are worked would also be useful.

Most new emerging issues are identified by screeners through the initial screening process, for example tea party cases. When these potential emerging issue cases are identified, they are assigned to the group designated to work emerging issues. The category of cases are included on an Excel spreadsheet we refer to as "Be On the Look Out" (BOLO) under the tab "Emerging Issues." This spreadsheet is also used to identify TAG cases, TAG historical cases, Coordinated Processing cases, and "Watch For" cases. "Watch for" cases are almost always identified by EOT and brought to our attention. The BOLO spreadsheet is disseminated to managers and specialists so that they have a consolidated list to reference and don't need to keep individual emails, etc. We require screeners and specialists to review the BOLO spreadsheet as part of their case review process. The latest BOLO spreadsheet that was disseminated to EO Determinations specialists and managers is attached.

The purpose of assigning emerging issue cases to one designated group is so that: 1) we are consistent in our approach in working these cases, and 2) we can minimize time charges to cases. When we have an emerging issue category, the applications have many similarities. The cases are usually assigned to one or two specialists who can work them in batches because they don't need to spend time familiarizing themselves with the issues, law, etc., and can ask many of the same questions in developmental letters.

The only current open emerging issue category we have are the tea party cases. I believe we have approximately 90 of these applications assigned to one specialist who is coordinating with the TLS in EOT.

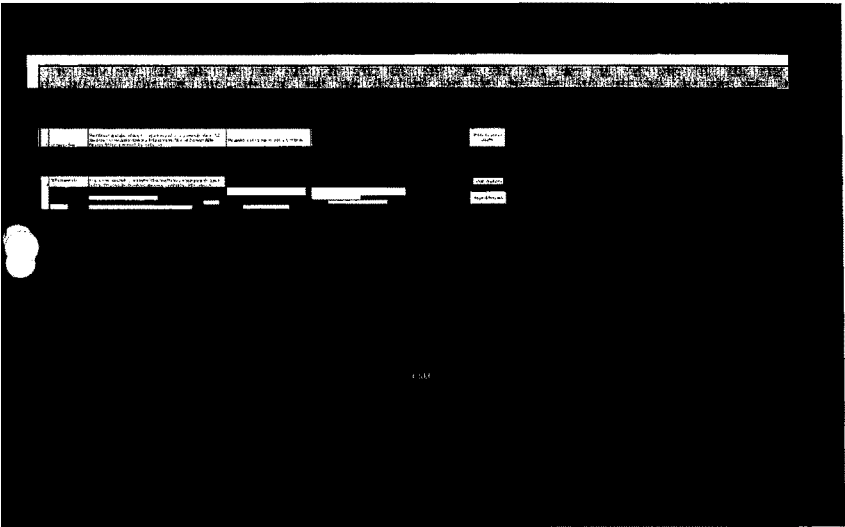

Although we verbally communicated the emerging issue process to managers and employees, we are still in the process of developing a referral form and writing formal procedures for processing these type cases so that specialists/managers have a complete understanding of the process. The intent is that when the emerging issue is closed, we will prepare an issue paper that will be maintained in our technical files available to all specialists as a way of transferring knowledge. Also, we will notify employees that the issue has been closed and provide them with the location of the issue paper.

No time yet set for the meeting. Would be great if we could get the info together by mid-March.

Thanks!

Thank you for your warm welcome.

I currently have 11 G-13 team members from each Group in EOD - one from EOD QA.
We will definitely need your advices, input, and guidance on these cases as these cases are sophisticated and high profile.
Our next team meeting will be held after the draft of the developmental guidance and template questions are finalized.
I am planning to invite you when the time comes.

So far about 70 BOLO Advocacy cases out of about 180 cases (and counting) have been assigned. We have sent and will send 1st or 2nd inquiry letter for the cases assigned. I expect that we will be busy when we think the development of a case/cases is/are completed. At such time, I will send you the copies of the cases developed before the meetings. Please feel free ask me if you need anything related to the cases now and then.

Again, I appreciate your kindness.

Hello,

Attached is an updated version of the draft Advocacy Org Guidesheet that Cincinnati requested and has been asking us for. I received edits from Chip and have incorporated them into this draft. If anyone else has any suggestions/revisions/etc. please make them as soon as possible so that next steps can be taken. If I can get any additional edits by next Wednesday, November 9, that would be much appreciated and then next steps can be determined. I think the draft is in great shape and would be beneficial to EOD. Please let me or Justin know if you have any questions, comments or concerns.

Heads Up --- IRM 7.20 is to be changed to require for mandatory review those cases with politically sensitive issues referenced in the memo attached. In the meantime, please make sure that if anyone has one of these cases, that they send it to EODQA. Per the memo, "politically sensitive" are those cases with some of the following activities:

- Voter Registration
- Inaugural host committees
- Post-election transition teams
- Voter guides
- Voter Polling
- Voter Education
- Other activities that may appear to propose or oppose a specific candidate or issue.

If you have any of those cases in your inventory, please be sure to mark them for mandatory review.

The information below provides additional guidance on what is included in the "political advocacy" bucketing process. Seems the word "advocacy" should be excluded. I still have some lingering questions - see below. The explanation below suggests that bucketing only includes cases where "political intervention" is a significant or clear issue and excludes organizations involved only in legislative "advocacy". I'll let everyone know as I learn more. In the meantime, if you have questions about a particular political or advocacy case let me know.

Subject: RE: Case Returned from EODQA - Potential Political Advocacy

Hi Sharon,
I appreciate the explanation. However, I must admit that I'm now worried because I can think of several cases that upon initial review did not involve significant or clear political intervention. This includes some Tea Party cases, [REDACTED] - [REDACTED], the national debt cases, the recent [REDACTED], etc. Some of these cases claimed to be issue focused (legislative or lobbying) and it was only after identifying and developing the issue did we uncover political intervention.

Further, the case below was initially suspect for possible political intervention because of the "political" consultant under contract for $6,000 a month. It was only at the end of the process that we confirmed the primary activity legislative, not political.

I'm ok with the explanation below that this one particular case did not need to now go through bucketing because the case has been adequately developed to the point where we now know that political intervention is not a problem. However, will this treatment be consistent? If a similar case was received by specialists today and screener noted the "political consultant" issue would it/should it be bucketed? Or, would we only send to bucketing if development uncovered significant or clear political intervention? And, if so, would this be consistent?

Thanks,
Donna

Subject: RE: Case Returned from EODQA - Potential Political Advocacy

There has been confusion about this issue. Some cases that only involved lobbying got bucketed and worked as advocacy cases because it wasn't clear from screening that political intervention wasn't a problem. Cases got identified as "advocacy cases" if they mentioned lobbying and someone felt the lobbying was a sign of political intervention. And sometimes cases that vaguely mentioned "advocacy" got identified because it wasn't clear on screening whether they were talking about lobbying or political intervention. But when it's clear that lobbying, not political intervention, is the issue then they don't fit the criteria.

Joseph quotes the latest language identifying what to look for, and I think it's a good way to distinguish between the two:

From the BOLO Spreadsheet, Issue E1-1, Current Political Issues, states, "501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit).
Note: advocacy action type issues (e.g., lobbying) that are currently listed on the Case Assignment Guide (CAG) do not meet this criteria."

Does that help?

Hi Sharon,
Seems QA needs to know what exactly is deemed appropriate for the "advocacy" inventory. Your write up suggests that it only includes political campaign intervention. We (QA) were under the impression that both "advocacy" - organizations supporting or opposing legislative action and "political" organizations supported or opposing a candidate were to be bucketed.

Please note that our review memo did not indicate any problems with political activities but instead noted the advocacy/legislative issues.
This is no different than other cases we have seen bucketed that supported or opposed particular legislation. Sorry - I'm confused as to what is and is not bucketed. Will you please clarify?
Thanks,
Donna

Cindy and Donna -I reviewed Quality's memo and disagree with Recommendation no. 1 that this be treated as an advocacy case. Issues no. 1 and 2 do not indicate that this organization is involved in significant amounts of political campaign intervention. They show that they are primarily, overwhelmingly, focused on legislative action. That is not political intervention.

A couple of things mentioned under Issues no. 1 and 2 may involve political intervention. One is the political consultant -- but my guess is that this is a paid lobbyist, unrelated to elections. The other is meetings with candidates who support or opposed legislation favored by the organization.

These meetings could very well just involve lobbying. Organizations often meet with candidates before an election because they have an opportunity to get access they may not get after the election is over. Unless the organization goes out after the meeting and announces that they support or oppose a candidate (presumably based on the candidate's position on their issues), there is no political intervention. Furthermore, even if both of these activities did constitute political intervention, they would not warrant treating the case as a political advocacy case. A 501(c)(4) organization can engage in a significant amount of political campaign intervention, and this organization is nowhere near that line.

Let me know if you have further questions.

Thanks,
Sharon

I was just assigned a couple of cases on Tea Party organizations, one seeking exemption under 501(c)(3) and one under 501(c)(4). I spoke with Justin, but he was not aware of any similar organizations. I spoke with Judy Kindell and she advised me that you had a case under consideration that may be somewhat similar (6103, or something like that). I would be appreciative if I could see the type of questions you asked that organization, or any memoranda you might have in this regard. Apparently, Cincinnati recognized one Tea Party case as exempt under 501(c)(3), and a couple exempt under 501(c)(4). There are a number of similar cases that are open in Cincinnati that are being suspended until we come up with a solution. Hopefully, we can all end up on the same page.

Don,

This meeting was set up at the request of David Marshall (prior to yours and my meeting with Lois, Janine and Nan last week) , so that Counsel could get a better idea of the factual situation in Determs . Because there are several moving pieces connected to this issue, my folks think it would still be helpful to have this meeting to coordinate as to:

1. The 2 cases sent to Counsel that are being sent back for further development.
2. The checksheet (not a model development letter). EOT is writing for Determs specialists working the advocacy cases. It will explain the different types of advocacy, the types permitted by different types of orgs., and questions to assist in identifying, and distinguishing between, types of advocacy.
3. A research paper on the definition of "exclusively" under (c)(4), exploring why the (c)(3) regs include both the "primarily" and the "no substantial part" language, but the (c)(4) regs only include the "primarily" language. It also includes a discussion of other IRS guidance and case law.

Given the shift in the focus of the meeting to overall coordination - ensuring that folks are on the same page at the staff level- we could probably shorten the length and hold it by phone rather than having you all come over.

Let me know what you think.

Thanks,

Holly

Hi Holly,

We have a meeting on Thursday afternoon (scheduled several weeks ago) with Justin Lowe and the TLS's that are working on the advocacy cases. The invited guests are: Lowe Justin; Megosh Andy; Kastenber Elizabeth C; Hull Carter C; Goehausen Hilary; and (from counsel) Griffin Kenneth M; Marshall David L; and Franklin Amy B. The CC's were Selo Michael C; Fish David L; Shoemaker Ronald J.

I understand the original agenda was exchanging ideas and developing an overall game plan for working the advocacy cases. It was not about any particular case. We now are wondering if the agenda or purpose of this meeting has changed in light of our meeting last week with Lois, Nan, and Janine. Is this the EO group that will be working on the model development letter we talked about? Or is there another group undertaking that task? We had assumed that the two c4 cases we are sending back, with the advice to factually develop the election year of 2010, would be further worked using the model letter that is to be prepared.

We are of course always happy to come over and exchange ideas on case development, help draft the model development letter, and discuss the particular facts and issues of individual cases. We just were unclear about how this previously scheduled meeting now fits into the overall schedule and game plan. And we didn't want to come over unprepared for whatever people were expecting. So I thought I would check with you.

Thanks!

Subject: RE: BOLO

Steve,

I thought the Social economic reform in the updated current political issues was our "code word" for the occupy organizations. If so, do we need that in the current political issues description since we decided to have a separate issue for the occupy orgs?

Ron,
I made changes to the emerging issues tab to remove advocacy orgs and update the issue in an effort to capture what we are looking for. I also added Occupy orgs to the Watch List. Review the changes and if you do not have any concerns send out the BOLO alert.

All,

Attached is the latest BOLO updates. Issue # 24 has been added to the Watch List. Be on the lookout for an application from [REDACTED] 6103.

The issue description for Current Political Issues located in the Emerging Issue Tab has been revised and the new coordinator is Sharon Light. Watch list issues #2 [REDACTED] 6103 and #21 "Occupy" Organizations from the last BOLO Alert dated 3-26-12 have been removed and now are to be included in the description for Current Political Issues.

Issue # 17 has been added to the Potentially Abusive Tab. Be on the lookout for applications from former chapters of the [REDACTED] 6103, a now dissolved Group Exemption Ruling (GEN 4301). Please review the issue description for more information.

Please contact me with any questions or concerns.

I don't have any suggestions. After you talk with Stephen on Monday, it might be best to ask a few managers if they have any ideas.

Peggy -- do you have any suggestions for wording?

Cindy,

The only email that came through is yours but I agree we should work them with the advocacy cases. I think we need to update the Issue Description to capture these as well as to try and weed out the ones that we do not want in this inventory.

Currently the spreadsheet states;

"Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption

under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)."

I know we don't want to use the words "tea party" or "occupy" but I'm not sure how we could weed out a simple advocacy type organization. If the BOLO can wait, I'd like to run this by Stephen when he is back on Monday to see what we can come up with (any suggestions?).

Tyler,

Are these cases considered advocacy cases per the BOLO? If so, I would think that we would want to have these developed by someone who has received the recent training. If not, is there a separate description for them on the BOLO?

Did Ron screen the case already? What are the issues in the case? Are they similar to the issues in the case Stephen has? Can you have any additional information letters Stephen has sent scanned and e-mailed to me?

Thanks.

Peggy,

I appreciate you letting me know, I was reflecting on what was coming up today, how I could just not go to the meeting. I feel so bad about that. I wish we could have discussed this earlier in the week but every day it seems like issues come up for auto revocation and we work on this and then another etc and I just run out of time. The Advocacy and Auto Revocation are often just too much at once, and it is frustrating.

On a good note I got another filing cabinet from Tim, the one that was here did not have enough dividers. Now I have more places to put cases. There are slots for Occupy, BOLO Advocacy Political, Elevate to EOT, etc, this helps with keeping these organized. One great feature of the cabinet is that it has a pull out shelf!

Have a good weekend as well, thanks

In red below - very funny!!!! It's that darn spell check!

OK - We will get together next week to talk about these.

We "watched for" the case and found it... I think we need to take a look at both cases to determine if they do fall into the Current Political Issues. If not, is there another emerging issue and if so how do we describe what it is? I think once we take a look at Stephen's letter and maybe chat with him about it, it will be easier to answer these questions.

Thanks Tyler!

Peggy,

Re: [REDACTED] 6109

Do the "occupy" cases meet the Current Political Issues description? No, these cases have not been considered to be Current Political Issues. The BOLO Watch List Tab Issue Description number 21 'Occupy Organizations' includes the text "social injustices due to "big-money" influence." Although this is similar to the Emerging Issue Tab for the BOLO Advocacy Political cases with the EI-1 Issue Description that includes the text "Social economic reform/movement" my understanding is that these Occupy organizations are not advocating expanding/limiting the government.

The above case was screened by Ron, he has determined it is an "Occupy" issue. I do not know who screened the other "Occupy" case that Stephen has.

As for getting these case to the bickerers or the assignment and development by someone who has gotten the May 2012 EO DC folks Advocacy training please let me know.

I do not know the specifics of the case but I will be getting this information. I will obtain and forward to you a summary that will include the following:

- the issues
- if the issues are similar to the case Stephen has
- the letter Stephen has sent

Tyler,

Do the "occupy" cases meet the Current Political Issues description? Did Ron look at them? Are they politically advocating for economic reform? If so, I think we need to let the bickerers take a look at these two cases as well. If Ron hasn't looked at it, please give it to him to take a look.

If not a Current Political Issue, then please send Stephen's additional information letter to me on the one he has - I'd like to take a look at it to see what the issues are before we proceed.

Thanks.

Attached is our redlined version of the long time line you prepared. We have made changes where we thought your folks didn't get it exactly right, and have added some comments for your consideration. Also attached are my response to your three questions. Rather than be repetitive, we have combined the response to questions 2 and 3 into one comprehensive response. I am out of the country next week, but Holly can probably answer any questions you may have in the meantime.

Lois G. Lerner
Director of Exempt Organizations

1. To the best of your knowledge, did any individual or organization outside the IRS influence the creation of criteria targeting applications for tax exemption that mention: 1) the "Tea Party," "Patriots," or the "9/12 Project", 2) government spending, government debt or taxes, 3) education of the public by advocacy/lobbying to "make America a better place to live", or 4) criticizing how the country is being run?

No. To the best of my knowledge, no individual or organization outside the IRS influenced the creation of these criteria.

2. To the best of your knowledge, did IRS or Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division management sanction the use of criteria targeting applications for tax exemption that mention: 1) the "Tea Party," "Patriots," or the "9/12 Project", 2) government spending, government debt or taxes, 3) education of the public by advocacy/lobbying to "make America a better place to live", or 4) criticizing how the country is being run?

3. When did you become aware the IRS was targeting applications for tax exemption that mention: 1) the "Tea Party," "Patriots," or the "9/12 Project", 2) government spending, government debt or taxes, 3) education of the public by advocacy/lobbying to "make America a better place to live", or 4) criticizing how the country is being run?

In early 2010, EO Determinations witnessed an uptick in the number of applications for § 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) status that contained indicators of potentially significant amounts of political campaign intervention ("advocacy organizations"). EO Determinations first became aware of this uptick in February 2010, when an EO Determinations screener identified a § 501(c)(4) applicant that planned to spend a significant amount of its budget on influencing elections, which he believed was like organizations that had been receiving media attention for purportedly seeking classification as § 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations but operating like § 527 political organizations. He alerted his manager of the potential "emerging issue."

To ensure consistent treatment of applications, EO Determinations had long been alerting its specialists to emerging issues by sending emails describing particular issues or factual situations warranting additional review or coordinated processing. Because it was difficult to keep track of all of these separate email alerts, EO Determinations staff requested a consolidated list of all such alerts. EO Determinations was developing the Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list in early 2010. The BOLO, which is an Excel spreadsheet, provides a centralized source of regularly updated information to EO Determinations specialists about potentially abusive organizations or fraud issues, issues and cases requiring coordinated processing, emerging issues and issues for which to watch. The

BOLO currently includes four tabs: (1) Potential Abusive, (2) Emerging Issues, (3) Coordinated Processing, and (4) Watch List.

The first BOLO list contained the following entry on the Emerging Issues tab: "These case involve various local organizations in the Tea Party movement are applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) [sic]." That description was added to the BOLO to help specialists identify cases involving potentially significant political campaign intervention for assignment to a particular Determinations group so that they could be consistently processed in accordance with advice provided by EO Technical. The language used on the BOLO was selected by Determinations specialists with the involvement of a front-line manager in EO Determinations. At this time, the language was not reviewed or approved by executive management.

As the number of advocacy cases grew, the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements wanted to ensure that EO Determinations was not being over-inclusive in identifying such cases (including organizations that were solely engaged in lobbying or policy education with no apparent political campaign intervention). In addition, in light of the diversity of applications selected under this "tea party" label (e.g., some had "tea party" in their name but others did not, some stated that they were affiliated with the "tea party" movement while others stated they were affiliated with the Democratic or Republican party, etc.), the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements sought clarification as to the criteria being used to identify these cases. In preparation for briefing me, the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements asked the EO Determinations Program Manager what criteria Determinations was using to determine whether a case was a "tea party" case. Because the BOLO only contained a brief reference to "Organizations involved with the Tea Party movement applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4)" in June 2011, the EO Determinations Program Manager asked the manager of the screening group what criteria were being used to label "tea party" cases ("Do the applications specify/state ' tea party'? If not, how do we know applicant is involved with the tea party movement?"). The manager of the screening group responded that, "The following are issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential 'tea party' case and sent to Group 7822 for secondary screening. 1. 'Tea Party', 'Patriots' or '9/12 Project' is referenced in the case file. 2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes. 3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live. 4. Statements in the case file that are critical of the how the country is being run."

As TIGTA's interviews with EO Determinations employees revealed, the BOLO description and the above-referenced list of criteria used by EO Determinations to determine which cases fell under the BOLO description were their shorthand way of referring to the group of advocacy cases rather than targeting any particular group. Applications that did not contain these terms, but that contained indicators of potentially significant political campaign intervention, were also referred to the group assigned to work such cases.

I first became aware that the BOLO referenced "tea party" organizations and EO Determinations was using the above criteria to determine what organizations met that description when I was briefed on these cases on June 29, 2011. I immediately directed that the BOLO be revised to eliminate the reference to "tea party" organizations and refer instead more generally to advocacy organizations. The BOLO was revised on July 11, 2011; the "issue name" was changed from "Tea Party" to "Advocacy Orgs", and the "Issue Description" was changed to "Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)."

Unbeknownst to me, EO Determinations further revised the BOLO issue description on January 25, 2012 to "political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the Constitution and Bill of Rights, social economic reform/movement." When I learned of this change, I directed that the BOLO description be revised. EO Determinations management explained that the group working the advocacy cases had made the change because they were receiving a substantial number of 501(c)(4) applications that only involved lobbying activity, which is a permissible activity, and no indication of political campaign activity. They were trying to edit the description to avoid capturing these organizations. Per my direction, the BOLO was updated on May 17, 2012. The separate entries for Occupy groups and ACORN successors were deleted and the advocacy organization description was revised to read, "501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit). Note: advocacy action type issues (e.g., lobbying) that are currently listed on the Case Assignment Guide (CAG) do not meet this criteria."

At the same time that I directed the BOLO be revised, I also directed the Acting Director of EO Rulings & Agreements to implement procedures for updating the BOLO that included executive-level approval. On May 17, 2012, the Acting Director of EO Rulings & Agreements issued a memorandum that set forth such procedures, which require that all additions and changes to the BOLO be approved by the manager of the emerging issues coordinator, the EO Determinations Program Manager, and the Director, Rulings & Agreements.

Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political

Advocacy Issues

Audit # 201210022

Objective: To interview Exempt Organizations (EO) function management involved in developing the advocacy emerging issue to identify steps taken and develop a timeline of events.

Background: We interviewed EO function officials to understand how applications are processed for organizations seeking tax-exempt status. We learned that there was an increase in the number of organizations applying for Section (§) 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) whose applications contained indicators of potentially significant amounts of political campaign intervention.

The screener elevated his concerns about this case through the management chain.

The EO Determinations Program Manager raised the issue with the Acting Manager of EO Technical who requested that this case be transferred to EO Technical. It is EO Rules & Agreements' standard practice with emerging issues (including credit counseling and mortgage foreclosure, as well as these advocacy organizations) to work some of the applications in EO Technical in order to get a better sense of the issues. EO Technical is then better able to advise EO Determinations on the processing of such cases and determine the most appropriate form of advice, which may range from verbal or written advice on a particular application or applications to template development, letters, template denial letters, guide sheets, etc. In addition to seeking advice from and coordinating with EO Technical, the unusual number of applications with potential political campaign intervention by organization seeking § 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) exempt status also prompted the EO function to isolate these types of cases as an emerging issue warranting scrutiny by a particular Determinations group to ensure consistent processing.

In order to help specialists identify cases involving potentially significant political campaign intervention for assignment to a particular Determinations group so that they could be consistently processed in accordance with advice provided by EO Technical, a description was included on the Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list. To ensure consistent treatment of applications, EO Determinations had long been alerting its specialists to emerging issues by sending emails describing particular issues or factual situations warranting additional review or coordinated processing. Because it was difficult to keep track of all of these separate email alerts, EO Determinations staff requested a consolidated list of all such alerts. EO Determinations was developing the Be On the Lookout (BOLO) list in early 2010. The BOLO, which is an Excel spreadsheet, provides a centralized source of regularly updated information to EO Determinations specialists about potentially abusive organizations or fraud issues, issues and cases requiring coordinated processing, emerging issues and issues for which to watch. The BOLO currently includes four tabs: (1) Potential Abusive, (2) Emerging Issues, (3) Coordinated Processing, and (4) Watch List.

The first BOLO list contained the following entry on the Emerging Issues tab: "These case involve various local organizations in the Tea Party movement are applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) [sic]." The language used on the BOLO was selected by Determinations specialists with the involvement of a front-line manager in EO Determinations. At this time, the language was not reviewed or approved by executive management.

In light of a significant jump in the number of advocacy cases, the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements wanted to ensure that EO Determinations was not being over-inclusive in identifying such cases (including organizations that were solely engaged in lobbying or policy education with no apparent political campaign intervention). In addition, in light of the diversity of applications selected under this "tea party" label (e.g., some had "tea party" in their name but others did not, some stated that they were affiliated with the "tea party" movement while others stated they were affiliated with the Democratic or Republican party, etc.), the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements sought clarification as to the criteria being used to identify these cases. In preparation for briefing me, the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements asked the EO Determinations Program Manager what criteria Determinations was using to determine whether a case was a "tea party" case. Because the BOLO only contained a brief reference to "Organizations involved with the Tea Party movement applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4)" in June 2011, the EO Determinations Program Manager asked the manager of the screening group what criteria were being used to label "tea party" cases ("Do the applications specify/state 'tea party'? If not, how do we know applicant is involved with the tea party movement?"). The manager of the screening group responded that, "The following are issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential 'tea party' case and sent to Group 7822 for secondary screening. 1. 'Tea Party', 'Patriots' or '9/12 Project' is referenced in the case file. 2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes. 3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live. 4. Statements in the case file that are critical of the how the country is being run."

As interviews with EO Determinations employees revealed, EO Determinations indicates that it used the description "tea party" as a shorthand way of referring to the group of advocacy cases rather than to target any particular group. As a result, cases that did not have "tea party" in their name or application were included in the group of advocacy cases. In this document and the attached timeline, "tea party" is used generically to refer to this entire group of advocacy cases except where noted to refer to a specific organization.

Additional information was gathered during fieldwork to develop a timeline of events that chronologically details the evolution of the advocacy emerging issue, including the officials who participated or were informed about key events. This information is summarized in the Results section table below.

Criteria: We reviewed applicable EO Internal Revenue Manuals (IRMs) and supplemental guidance to determine if there are procedures to ensure approval by appropriate management officials when the criteria is revised for emerging issues associated with applications for tax-exempt status. We did not identify any guidelines. Discussions with the EO Director, Rulings and Agreements, confirmed that no written procedures existed prior to May 17, 2012, but controls were subsequently instituted to ensure that any criterion that is established or edited is reviewed and approved at a higher level in the EO function. Moreover, we were informed that EO Determinations began revising IRM 7.20.4 (Emerging Issues) in October 2011, and we were provided with a draft of that IRM section, which contains procedures regarding the BOLO. All affected stakeholders have provided comments on the draft IRM, which are currently being incorporated, and the exhibits to the IRM are under review by the IRS Office of Taxpayer Correspondence. The new IRM section will make clear that all changes to the BOLO must be approved by the Director Rulings and Agreements.

The EO Determinations office requested assistance from the EO Technical office on how to process the cases. The Acting Manager EO Technical requested that this § 501(c)(4) case be transferred to EO Technical. In May 2010, EO Determinations specialists were told to coordinate "tea party" cases with a particular Determinations group. From April 2010 to October 2010, an EO Technical Tax Law Specialist, worked with a Determinations specialist to develop the cases not transferred from Determinations to EO Technical. In October 2010, the Specialist assigned the emerging issue cases stopped processing them pending guidance from the EO Technical office. In June 2011, the EO Director was briefed on the issue, and she raised concerns about the criteria being used to identify the cases and immediately directed that they be revised. The criteria were revised in July 2011. In November 2011, the EO Technical office provided draft guidance for processing the cases to the EO Determinations office. In January 2012, additional information request letters were issued to many of the organizations. This resulted in media and Congressional attention due to the amount and types of information being requested. In May 2012, the Specialists processing the cases received additional training regarding advocacy by 501(c)(4) organizations. In addition, all cases that had been identified as advocacy cases were reviewed to determine whether they could be closed without further development or with limited further development.

Conclusion: The initial criteria developed by the EO Determinations office referred to Tea Party organizations. In addition, the EO Technical office took more than 20 months (March 2010 -- November 2011) to provide written guidance on processing these cases to the EO Determinations office.

EO Comment: Although the second sentence is factually accurate-- EO Technical did not provide written guidance for 20 months-- it makes it sound as though EO Technical was not providing any guidance during this time period. That is not true. As explained in the Background section, EO Technical was providing guidance on specific cases and was working cases transferred to EO Technical. Those steps were necessary to better determine the appropriate form of advice that would be most useful to EO Determinations.

March 1, 2010	Screener Manager asked one of his Specialists to search TEDS to identify other Tea Party cases or similar organizations in order to determine the scope of the issue in the determination letter program. Specialist continued to complete searches for additional cases until the precursor to the "BOLO" was issued in May 2010.	As interviews with EO Determinations employees revealed, EO Determinations indicates that it used the description "tea party" as a shorthand way of referring to the group of advocacy cases rather than to target any particular group. This is reflected in the fact that cases that did not have "tea party" in their name or application were included in the group of advocacy cases. Specialist used Tea Party, Patriot, and 9/12 as part of the criteria for these searches.
March 16-17, 2010	Ten total cases were identified. Acting Manager, EO Technical, requests two more cases be transferred to Washington, D.C.	Not all of the ten cases had "tea party" in their name.
	The EO Director knew there had been an uptick in the number of advocacy applications, but was not aware of the criteria being used to identify them.	EO Comment: This is incorrect and should be deleted from the timeline. Director EO was not yet aware of the uptick in the number of applications.

September 15, 2011	EO Determinations Program Manager sends a listing of all identified advocacy cases to Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements, so EO Technical can complete a "triage" of the cases on the TEDS. The utility of this triage was limited because the review was conducted through TEDS so the EO Technical specialist did not necessarily have the full application file. An EO Technical Specialist reviews the listing to determine if any could be closed on merit or closed with an adverse determination letter. This "triage" was considered a third screening.

November 15, 2011	EO Determinations Program Manager forwards EO Technical Specialist's triage results to the EO Director's Senior Technical Advisor per the EO Director's request.
November 22, 2011	Acting Manager, EO Technical, forwards the clarified triage results to the EO Determinations Program Manager.
November 23-30, 2011	A new EO Determinations coordinator is assigned oversight of the advocacy cases by the group manager. The draft EO Technical guidance is provided to the coordinator (Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet). The coordinator began working advocacy cases after receiving the draft EO Technical guidance in anticipation of a team being assembled to work the cases.
December 7-9, 2011	An advocacy team of Determinations Specialists was set up to review all the identified advocacy cases; one Grade 13 from each Determinations group. An employee from Quality Assurance was also part of the team. EO Technical provided contacts for them.
December 16, 2011	The first advocacy team meeting was held.

January 2012	The first batch of letters requesting additional information for applications containing incomplete or missing information were issued by Determinations Specialists based, in part, on their reading of the draft Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet issued by EO Technical.
January 2012	Determinations Specialist tasked with performing a secondary screening of identified "advocacy" cases to ensure they were political advocacy, and not just general or lobbying advocacy.
January 25, 2012	The BOLO criteria was again updated to focus specifically on political advocacy. The criterion was revised as "political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the Constitution and Bill of Rights, social economic reform/movement." May 16, 2012	Review of all advocacy cases begins in Cincinnati, OH. Cases divided into four groups: favorable determination, favorable with limited development, significant development, and probable adverse. This took around three weeks to complete. A worksheet is used to document the reviews.
May 17, 2012	The Director, Rulings and Agreements, issues memorandum outlining new procedures for updating the BOLO listing. The BOLO criteria was updated again. New criteria reads: "501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit). Note: advocacy action type issues (e.g., lobbying) that are currently listed on the Case Assignment Guide (CAG) do not meet this criteria."	Suggested additions and changes must be approved by the Group Manager of the emerging issues coordinator, the EO Determinations Program Manager, and the Director, Rulings and Agreements.
May 21, 2012	Counsel determines that requested donor information can be destroyed or returned to the applicant if not used to make the final determination of tax-exempt status. It does not need to be kept in the administrative record. A letter will be issued to the organizations informing them that the donor information was destroyed.

Holly,

1. # advocacy cases -- Refer to Attachment 1 with numbers I sent to you on 2/15/2012. Is this acceptable or do you need numbers as of tomorrow morning?
2. All cases meeting BOLO criteria are supposed to go to full development. One of the California cases I referenced in an email sent to you a few minutes ago involving a TAS inquiry was inadvertently in status 62 (screening). This is an error and will be corrected on 2/23.
3. BOLO - Refer to Emerging Issues tab on attached BOLO spreadsheet (refer to Attachment 2).

Regarding another issue --- do you still need a timeline for [REDACTED] 6103 [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] 6103 The actions taken for all of the advocacy cases is virtually the same as what Peggy provided to you for the [REDACTED] 6103 [REDACTED] --- see below in blue. The only difference is the control date, date screened, date assigned to specialist and date Letter 1312 issued. Following are dates for [REDACTED] 6103 [REDACTED] 6103 :

9/13/2010 - Postmark Date of Application
9/29/2010 - Case assigned to screener
10/5/2010 - Case assigned to specialist (issues identified and elevated)

Case held pending guidance

2/6/2012 - Case assigned to specialist
2/7/2012 - Letter 1312, request for additional information sent to applicant with a response due date of 2/28/2012 (refer to Attachment 3).

I spoke to the advocacy project coordinator who indicated that he reviewed the letter with the specialist prior to it being sent to the applicant. He indicated that the questions posed were within the auspices of the Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet provided by EO Technical. I reviewed the additional information and compared it to the guide. I agree the questions related to advocacy fall within the guide. There are a few general questions asking for a board member to sign application, for hardcopy prints of webpages, and for hardcopy prints of any social media. The other questions are regarding the specific details about the activities of the organization; the role of the members with the organization; details on public events; and contents of materials, speeches, forums, etc. The letter also asks whether candidate forums are conducted, whether they attempt to influence legislation, and whether they communicate with legislative bodies.

Please see below. Can you get me number of advocacy cases by 11 tomorrow? Also I think all meeting bolo criteria go to full development. Is that right? How do we currently have this described on the bolo? Sorry for the rush. Steve Miller now wants to meet with Lois tomorrow at 1.

OK--so for my afternoon meeting, I think I will also need to have numbers in the pipeline of all advocacy matters and status--that is, are any getting screened or all going to full development? Also, is there any history on similarly situated organizations? Rather than email--let's talk at the 10:30 meeting in the morning--

Judy, not sure you are here tomorrow--if you have info to share and need a call in number, let Dawn know.

Number of cases closed: 3 (withdrawals)

Responses received and outstanding as of 2/15/2012: 3

Control date of oldest case to be assigned: April 2011

Actions Taken:

Prior to 9/15/2011:

Coordination with EOT, Chip Hull, and EOD, Ron Bell, to determine actions necessary, etc. Two cases (1 501(c)(3), 1 501(c)(4)) sent to EOT to be worked.

09/15/2011 Excel spreadsheet with list of 162 cases identified as advocacy was sent to EOT to triage.

11/22/2011 Spreadsheet (Attachment 1) returned with comments and suggested actions, along with guidesheet (Attachment 2).

Subsequent to 11/22/2011:

New cases received in the group were re-screened to make sure they should be added to this category of cases.

11/30/2011 EOD Program Manager (Cindy Thomas) met with manager (Steve Bowling) and agent overseeing the project (Stephen Seok) to discuss steps to be taken to address this group of cases.

Subsequent to 12/16/2011:

Team members requested cases, reviewed them, and sent development questions to Stephen, who reviewed for consistency, prior to issuance. Also, he maintained a file with all development questions.

2/6/2012 Team members started sending development letters without review by Stephen.

Next Steps:

2/23/2012 Meeting scheduled with subgroup to review all questions asked in development letters and to develop a complete list of template questions.

2/29/2012 Meeting scheduled to have a round table discussion with all team members to go over issues noted in case files, responses received, get input regarding list of template questions, ensure coordination with EODQA and EOT, etc.

Subsequent to 2/29/2012:

Stephen will be reviewing proposed case closures and having periodic round table discussions with team members.

OARs:

All but 1 case with an OAR has been assigned. Developmental letters for these cases were issued and copies provided to TAS. Follow up dates on the OARs were established with TAS. Team members were instructed to provide Stephen with all TAS-related correspondence.

I spoke with Mike Seto today regarding the tea party cases. He indicated that EOT met with the EO Director's Senior Technical Advisor, Judy Kindell. Judy requested that EOT beef up the c3 denial. She also asked EOT to gather more information regarding the c4 application --- specifically % of time devoted to various activities to ensure the organization was below the 50% level for political activities.

Judy also recommended that all tea party cases be sent to EOT (tell Ron Bell not to get too excited!), but Mike Seto does not believe this should happen. He thinks EOT should give us a template letter for the c3 denials and share developmental questions, etc., for the c4's. Holly will be meeting with Lois to discuss this.

Stay tuned.....

Steve/Peggy,

The email below from Mike Seto provides an update on the tea party cases. As he indicates, the information is being provided so that we can see the direction in which EOT is headed. We still need to continue to work cases to the extent we can and then wait to issue the approval or denial letter. EOT needs to meet with Judy Kindell, senior technical advisor to EO Director, and then with Lois Lerner before they can finalize the guidance for us. I would not expect to receive anything until sometime in May 2011.

Hi Cindy,

Sorry for the belated response. Here is the status of the two cases:

1. [REDACTED] - (c)(4) application. The TLS and reviewer recommend a favorable ruling.
2. [REDACTED] - (c)(3) application. The TLS and reviewer recommends a denial ruling.

The TLS and reviewer are meeting with Judy Kindell to get her views/approval on both applications, and the meeting is scheduled in Mid-April. I think Lois would want to be briefed before we issue either rulings.

Attached are the memorandum outlining the rationale for the favorable (c)(4) application and the proposed denial ruling on the (c)(3) application. The memo and proposed denial ruling will give you an idea of where we are heading on the two cases. Please note both HAVE NOT BEEN REVIEWED BEYOND THE GROUP level. It is therefore doubtful that either document will remain the same through the various levels of review.

I agree with you ideas and would like to discuss. I also have a suggestion. I like to meet once every two weeks to discuss any issues/matters that you or I may have. This will give me an idea on areas that impact you that I am not aware of. We can meet the second and fourth Wed of the month?

Holly/Mike,

We are now getting OARs (Congressional inquiries) on the tea party cases (refer to emails below). Also, please refer to the attached email for previous status inquiry requests regarding these cases, and let me know the estimated completion date for getting these cases resolved so that we can be responsive to TAS.

My recommendation is that an action plan be prepared specifying what steps need to be completed, who needs to complete them, estimated completion date of action, etc., and that one person be put in charge of this so that individual can make sure actions are being timely completed so that we can make sure these cases get resolved before the OARs turn into TAOs.

If you would like to discuss, please let me know. Thanks.

Peggy, this is a follow-up from our earlier meeting today.

OAR# 1597920 for CF#4944956 6103

We have received two OARs that relates to the Tea Party group. The first was received on February 8, 2011. On February 10, 2011 the OAR was e-mailed to the assigned specialist. On March 17, 2011 we were informed by the specialist assigned that the application was being reassigned to group 7822 to Ron Bell. On March 24, 2011 an e-mail was sent to group manager requesting case assignment. I called the case advocate to request an extension to 3/30/2011 to get the OAR reassigned and at that time confirmed by phone that this was a congressional inquiry. On March 25, 2011 I was informed of the application assignment and the OAR was sent to the specialist and contact was made with TAS.

OAR# 1634434 for CF#4978504 6103

This OAR was received on March 25, 2011. At that time, the application was already assigned to Ron Bell. On March 29, 2011 the OAR was e-mailed to the assigned specialist. Because the OAR came from outside of Cincinnati, it should be a congressional inquiry. However at the time of e-mail I was not certain that this was a congressional inquiry and so stated in the e-mail. However on subsequent review of the OAR, on page 41 of the 72 pages, I found a congressional privacy act release form for Congressman Wally Herger from California.

Therefore, both the OARs are in fact congressional inquiries.

Mike,

It was my understanding from Holly that the cases were going to be put into buckets, i.e., those that can be approved as is, those that require additional development, and those that appear to be denials. Based on the email below from Hilary, it sounds as though all of those with "General Advocacy" only can be approved as is. Is this your understanding? If so, we can go ahead and get those cases approved right away.

I'm not sure what the hold is on the document/guidance EOT is supposed to be providing for us, but I've received a phone call from an individual who was previously an EO Determinations specialist. He is working with one of these organizations (██████████) and is threatening to go to his Congressional Office regarding this organization and others. That is only going to create even more work for us and we need to get letters out to these organizations ASAP.

Please let me know when we can expect to get the document from EOT. Thanks.

Subject: FW: Advocacy Orgs - Where Do We Stand?

Hi Cindy,

Below are comments that I made explaining some of my notations on the cases in Excel. My understanding from speaking with Mike was that I was to review the cases to determine whether the cases were clearly lobbying or engaging in political campaign activities, or if an organization was not engaged in either and therefore was simply engaging in general advocacy (educational/issue advocacy activities etc). Where I had concerns about whether the c3s and c4s were actually engaging in good c3/c4 activities – and not just making inflammatory, emotionally charged statements without any factual support or educational aspect to their activities – I made notes reflecting such. Where it simply states "general advocacy" or "general advocacy/legislative advocacy" (or lobbying), without comments, those organizations appeared to be fine (no development).

If you would like me to provide a definitive answer on what organizations can go Favorable, I can do that (these would be the cases where I noted "general advocacy." However, many appear to need more information (as noted in the comments in Excel).

-- I have marked asterisked (*) c3's that based on their Form 1023 and/or website are engaging in prohibited political campaign activities.

Report Exhibits - Page 000278

-- I use political activities/political campaign intervention/candidate election activities interchangeably to denote political activities.

-- While many of the c4 organizations appear to be engaging in general advocacy (issue advocacy/educational activities), many of these "social welfare activities" may need further development because their websites include substantial inflammatory/strong emotional rhetoric, articles, etc. that really do not appear to be educational in most or any aspect, provide any factual background for the viewpoints expressed, and therefore may not qualify as good c4 activities (promotion of social welfare, common good, etc.). Where there are questions relating to this and concerns about the activities (ie development would be needed), I have made comments.

-- Where I commented that a website needs to be verified means that the org didn't provide their website address on their Form 1023/1024 but I located it during a web search and it would need to be confirmed by the taxpayer.

-- Where I denoted the activity of the org as "general advocacy," this means I didn't find any indication the org was engaging in political activities or lobbying at all. However, as mentioned above in #3, I made additional notations on such organizations and whether they were even educational, issue advocacy, etc., or whether the activities appear to be propaganda, based on personal emotions, inflammatory, and without any or little factual basis for statements made (ie generally bad c3/c4 activities).

If there are any questions, please let me know. Also, we are in the process of drafting the Advocacy Org Guidelinesheet and it is circulating for review among our group currently. I don't have a date on when we can get that to you, but will speak with Mike and Justin.

Thanks,
Hilary

Ted/Mike,

Not sure where this leaves us and I'm unclear as to what action is being suggested for some of these cases. Specifically, if the comment indicates "general advocacy," what does that mean --- additional development or what?

Also, where do we stand with the document Justin Lowe or others from D.C. were putting together with lessons learned, suggested developmental questions for those applying under c3 and for those applying under c4, sample denial letter, etc.? We're starting to get a lot of heat from the public on these cases sitting idle and now have Congressionals on some of these. What is the plan of action and estimated completion date? Thanks.

Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet

Many different types of exempt organizations engage in advocacy in compliance with the applicable tax laws. However, it can be challenging to distinguish between permissible and impermissible types of advocacy; analyzing cases involving these issues is extremely fact-intensive.

This guide sheet aids agents working these cases in differentiating between types of advocacy, reminds them of the advocacy rules pertaining to various categories of exempt organizations, and provides a checklist of facts to gather and indicators of various types of advocacy.

PART 1: THREE TYPES OF ADVOCACY:

This guide sheet breaks down the broad concept of advocacy into three categories: political campaign intervention, lobbying, and general advocacy. They are defined as follows.

1) Political Campaign Intervention:

An organization engages in political campaign intervention when it participates or intervenes in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office. This includes attempts to influence political campaigns through both direct and indirect support of, or opposition to, a candidate.

2) Lobbying:

An organization engages in lobbying, or legislative activities, when it attempts to influence specific legislation by directly contacting members of a legislative body (federal, state, or local), or encouraging the public to contact those members, regarding that legislation. An organization also engages in lobbying when it encourages the public to take a position on a referendum. Lobbying is distinguished from political campaign intervention because lobbying does not involve attempts to influence the election of candidates for public office.

3) General Advocacy:

An organization engages in general advocacy when it attempts to (1) influence public opinion on issues germane to the organization's exempt purposes, (2) influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch, regulatory agencies), or (3) encourage voter participation through get out the vote drives, voter guides, and candidate debates in a nonpartisan, neutral manner. General advocacy generally includes all other types of advocacy other than political campaign activity and lobbying.

Part 2: TYPES OF ADVOCACY ORGANIZATIONS:

The organizations that most commonly engage in advocacy are 501(c)(3), (4), (5), and (6) organizations and 527 organizations. Below are the rules governing which types of advocacy these organizations can engage in, along with a chart summarizing that information.

1) IRC 501(c)(3) organizations:

- Organizations described in 501(c)(3) are organized and operated exclusively for charitable, religious, educational, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or to foster national or international amateur sports competition, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.
- They can engage in an insubstantial amount of lobbying.
- They are absolutely prohibited from engaging in any type of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general advocacy as long as it is educational.

2) IRC 501(c)(4) organizations:

- Social welfare organizations described in IRC 501(c)(4) are organized and operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare, which involves promoting the common good and general welfare of people in the community.
- They can not be operated for profit.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(4) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(4) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.
- They can engage in lobbying as their primary activity if their legislative activities are related to their specific exempt purposes.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general educational advocacy as long as the activities are related to their exempt purposes.

3) IRC 501(c)(5) organizations:

- Organizations described in IRC 501(c)(5) must be organized and operated for the purpose of bettering the conditions of those engaged in labor, agricultural, or horticultural pursuits.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is conducted with regard to issues that are related to their exempt purpose.

- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(5) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(5) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.

4) IRC 501(c)(6) organizations:

- Business league organizations described in 501(c)(6) are associations of persons with a common business interest and their purposes must be to promote this common interest.
- They can not conduct a regular trade or business for profit.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is on issues related to their exempt purpose.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(6) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(6) activities, cannot make up the organization's primary activity.

5) IRC 527 organizations:

- Political organizations described in 527 are organized and operated for the primary purpose of engaging in political campaign intervention, including influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any Federal, State, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of Presidential or Vice-Presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in lobbying, but would be taxed on that activity.
- They can engage in general advocacy, but would be taxed on that activity.

Part 3: ADVOCACY INDICATORS:

Distinguishing between types of advocacy requires knowledge of all the pertinent facts and circumstances. Therefore, careful and full development of a case is often required to gather very specific facts. The following are facts about an organization's activities that can be helpful in distinguishing between different types of advocacy:

- What does the organization consider to be its exempt purpose(s)?
 - How much time is devoted to each purpose?
 - How many financial resources are devoted to each purpose?
 - In what order of importance does the organization consider its exempt purpose? From most important to least important?
- What are the sources of the organization's income?
- Does the organization engage in fundraising activities? If so, what are the specific details, including:
 - Copies of all solicitations the organization has made regarding fundraising, including fundraising that occurs in an election year and non-election year.
 - Copies of all documents related to the organization's fundraising events, including pamphlets, flyers, brochures, webpage solicitations.
 - How much of the organization's budget is spent on fundraising? Determine the sources of fundraising expenses.
- How does the organization use its income? Are there detailed break-downs of these expenses?
- How many employees does the organization have? How many volunteers?
 - Are employees full-time, part-time, or seasonal? Explain.
 - If employees are part-time, when did/do they work?
 - If employees are seasonal, during what season (months) did/do they work?
- How many employees and volunteers are/were devoted to each activity of the organization throughout the year?
- How many and what sort of resources are devoted to volunteer activities?
- Does the organization conduct educational events, discussion groups or similar events? If so, what are the specific details, including:
 - Copies of all materials distributed with regards to the event.
 - When have the events taken place or plan to take place?
 - How much of the organization's resources and budget are devoted to these activities? What is the breakdown of expenses?

Report Exhibits - Page 000283

- Does the organization publish or distribute materials or conduct other communications that are prepared by or reviewed by another organization?
- Is the organization associated with any other IRC 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4) or 527 organizations? If so, describe in detail the nature of the relationship(s).
 - Does the organization work with those organization(s) regularly? Describe the nature of the contacts.
 - Do you share employees, volunteers, resources, office space, etc. with the organization(s)?
- Does the organization conduct candidate forums or other events at which candidates for public office are invited to speak? If so, what are the details, including the nature of the forums, the candidates invited to participate, the candidates that did participate, the issues discussed, the time and location of the event.
 - Are there copies of all materials distributed regarding the forum and provided at the forum, including any internet material discussing or advertising the forum?
- Have any candidates for public office spoken at a function of the organization? If so, what are the names of the candidates, the functions at which they spoke, any materials distributed or published with regard to their appearance and the event, any video or audio recordings of the event, and a transcript of any speeches given by the candidate(s)?
- Does the organization, or has it ever, conducted voter education activities, including voter registration drives, get out the vote drives, or publish or distribute voter guides? If so:
 - What is the location, date and time of the events.
 - Who on the organization's behalf has or will conduct the voter registration or get out the vote drives?
 - How many resources (funds/employees/volunteers) are devoted to the activity?
 - Are there copies of all materials published or distributed regarding the activities, including copies of any voter guides?
- Does the organization engage in business dealings with any candidate(s) for public office or an organization associated with the candidate, such as renting office space or providing access to a membership list? If so, what is the relationship in detail and are there any contracts or other agreements documenting the business relationship?
- Does the organization attempt to influence the outcome of specific legislation?
 - Are there copies of all communications, pamphlets, advertisements, and other materials distributed by the organization regarding the legislation?
 - Does the organization conduct media advertisements lobbying for or against legislation? Are there copies of any radio, television, or internet advertisements relating to the organization's lobbying activities?
 - Does the organization directly or indirectly communicate with members of legislative bodies? If so, determine the amount and nature of the communication.

Below are indicators used when determining whether an IRC 501(c)(3), IRC 501(c)(4), (5) or (c)(6), or IRC 527 organization is engaging in (1) political campaign intervention, (2) lobbying (legislative activities), or (3) general advocacy.

Section I: Political Campaign Intervention

The following are indicators of political campaign intervention:

		Yes	No
A.	Is there a "candidate" for "public office?" This is an individual who: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Offers himself, or • Is proposed by others • As a contestant for elective public office, whether national, state, or local public office. An individual who has not yet announced an intent to seek election to public office may still be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for office. Has the individual taken sufficient steps prior to announcing an intent to seek election, so that he or she may be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for public office? Have others proposed the individual as a candidate for public office, even if the individual has announced an intention of not seeking election to the office? Some action must be taken to make one a candidate, but the action need not be taken by the candidate or require his consent. This would include statements in opposition to a candidate for office, even before that candidate has necessarily declared themselves as a contestant for office.
B.	Is the candidate seeking an office to which he or she must be elected, as opposed to appointed? The political campaign intervention prohibition applies only to campaigns for offices to which a candidate must be elected. Factors indicating an elective public office include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The position was created by statute • The position is continuous • The position is not contractual • The position is for a fixed term of office • The office requires an oath of office
C.	Does the organization publish and/or distribute written or printed statements, including communications made on the internet, in favor of or against a candidate for public office? This includes material prepared by the organization itself or by other organizations or individuals. Do materials distributed by the organization encourage members to vote for or against a candidate?
	Has the organization criticized or expressed support for a candidate on their website or through links to another website?
	Has the organization made oral statements in support of or in opposition to a candidate for public office?

	Does the organization encourage individuals to vote for or against a particular candidate? Organizations are not prohibited from speaking about moral, social, or economic issues during election periods. However, consider the facts and circumstances to determine whether the organization is surreptitiously intervening in a political campaign under the pretext of speaking to moral, social or economic issues by tying its message to the election in a manner that expresses a preference for a candidate or candidate.
	Does the organization reference a candidate by use of "code words" or other references to identify a candidate, such as "Republican," "Democrat," "pro-life," "pro-choice," etc.? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Are such references coupled with reasonably overt indications that the organization supports or opposes a particular candidate or candidates in an election? Does the communication contain a relatively clear directive, based on the facts and circumstances, that enables the recipient to understand the organization's position on a candidate or candidate?
	Has the organization established or does it operate a political action committee (PAC)?
	Has the organization made contributions to a political action committee (PAC)?
	Does the organization provide or solicit money or other support for a candidate or a political organization?
	Does the organization place signs on its property supporting or opposing a candidate?
	Does the organization rate candidates, even on a nonpartisan basis?
	Have organization leaders made comments in an official publication of the organization or at official functions of the organization indicating support for or opposition to a candidate?
	Does the organization conduct business dealings in a manner favoring a candidate or candidates, such as by renting facilities at different rates or providing/denying access to its membership list?
D.	Personal Endorsements: Organization leaders may endorse or oppose a candidate in their personal capacity, and not in their official capacity. The following are indicators that the organization leader is speaking in his or her personal capacity and not in their official capacity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Do the organization leader's statements appear in a publication that is not an official publication of the organization? Is the ad or publication paid for by the individual himself or herself, and not by the organization? Is the organization leader's title and affiliation with the organization used for identification purposes only, and not to indicate support by the organization?

E.	Candidate Forums: The presentation of public forums for candidates to speak or debate is not in and of itself prohibited political campaign intervention, but may be a permissible method of educating the public (See Rev. Rul. 66-256; Rev. Rul. 74-574; Rev. Rul. 86-95). All the facts and circumstances must be considered and the presence or absence of one factor is not determinative. Consider the following factors when determining whether the forum is operated in a manner that may constitute prohibited campaign intervention or a permissible educational event: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the organization operate the forum in a manner indicating bias or preference for one candidate or candidates over others, such as through biased questioning? • Has the organization indicated support for or opposition to a candidate (e.g., such as when the candidate is introduced)? • Does the organization invite only candidates who share the same position as the organization to participate? • Does the organization provide an equal opportunity for all candidates to participate? • Does the organization provide equal amounts of time for each candidate to answer questions and express their views? • Are questions prepared and presented by a nonpartisan, independent panel or moderator? • Does the moderator comment on questions or otherwise make comments that imply approval or disapproval of a candidate? • Does the organization make statements that the views expressed are those of the candidates and not of the organization, and/or that the organization does not endorse any candidate or viewpoint? • Do the topics discussed cover a broad range of issues that are of interest to the public? • Are the candidates asked to agree or disagree with positions, agendas, platforms, or statements of the organization, indicating prohibited campaign intervention?
F.	Candidate Appearances: Has a candidate spoken at an official function of the organization in his or her personal capacity or capacity as a political candidate? Depending on the facts and circumstances an organization may invite political candidates to speak at its events without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status (See Rev. Rul. 2007-41). When determining if prohibited political campaign intervention occurred, consider the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Was the candidate invited to speak at the organization's event in his or her capacity as a political candidate? • Did the organization provide an equal opportunity to participate to political candidates seeking the same office? (Consider the nature of the event, such as if the organization invites one

	candidate to speak at a well attended event but invites an opposing candidate to speak at a sparsely attended event. This could constitute prohibited campaign intervention even if the manner of presentation for both speakers is otherwise neutral.) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Did the organization indicate support for or opposition to the candidate (including during candidate introductions, communications concerning the candidate's attendance, including any materials distributed during the event)? • Did any political fundraising occur?
G.	Did the candidate appear or speak at an organization event in a non-candidate capacity? (See Rev. Rul. 2007-41) The candidate's presence at a public event, such as a lecture, concert, or worship service does not by itself indicate the organization is engaged in prohibited political campaign intervention. The following factors should be considered when determining if prohibited political intervention occurred: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Is the candidate publicly recognized by the organization or a representative of the organization during the event as a candidate for public office? • Did the organization clearly indicate the capacity in which the candidate is appearing and does not mention the individual's political candidacy or the upcoming election in any communications announcing the candidate's attendance at the event? • Is the individual chosen to speak solely for reasons other than his or her candidacy, such as their status as a public figure aside from being a political candidate, the individual currently holds or previously held a public office, is considered an expert in a non-political field, is a celebrity, or has led a distinguished military, legal or public service career. • Has any campaign activity occurred in connection with the candidate's attendance?
H.	Voter Guides: Certain "voter education" activities conducted in a non-partisan manner may not constitute prohibited political campaign activity, but may be permissible educational activity. The following are indicators that a voter guide constitutes prohibited political campaign activity, and not permissible educational activity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Are incumbents identified as candidates for re-election? • Are incumbents' positions compared to the positions of other candidates or the organization's position in a biased manner? • Is the voting guide distributed close in time to an election? • Is the voting guide primarily concerned with a narrow range of issues of importance to the organization (e.g. such as land conservation or abortion) as opposed to reporting on all legislation voted on by the candidates or of importance to the electorate?

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Is the voting guide widely distributed among the electorate during an election campaign as opposed to the organization's membership? Does the voting guide include only the voting records of candidates for office? Does the voting guide include the voting records of candidates in a partisan manner, such as by ranking them according to whether their vote aligns with the organization's position on the issue? Does the voting guide contain editorial comments by the organization? Does the voting guide contain express or implied approval or disapproval of a candidate's voting record?
I.	Candidate Questionnaires: Depending on the facts and circumstances a candidate questionnaire published by an organization may constitute permissible educational activity as opposed to prohibited political campaign intervention. The following are indicators that the organization's questionnaires constitute prohibited campaign intervention: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Does the candidate questionnaire contain editorial comments by the organization? Does the candidate questionnaire include only issues of importance to the organization itself and not to the general public? Does the questionnaire contain express or implied approval or disapproval of candidate responses?

Section II: Lobbying

The following factors are indicative of lobbying (i.e. legislative activities):

		Yes	No
A.	Is the organization attempting to influence legislation or a legislative proposal? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Legislation includes acts, bills, resolutions, referendums, initiatives, legislative confirmation of an appointive office, constitutional amendments by Congress, state legislatures, local councils or similar governing bodies or by the public in a referendum, initiative, constitutional amendment or similar procedure. Lobbying does not include attempts to influence (1) regulations or (2) administrative matters.
B.	Is there "action" being taken with reference to the legislation? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Action includes introduction, amendment, enactment, defeat, or repeal by legislative bodies or the public.

C.	Does the organization engage in "direct lobbying?" <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Is the organization trying to influence legislation by directly contacting members or employees of a legislative body? Does the organization communicate with government officials or employees who can affect legislation? Do the communications refer to specific legislation? Do the communications reflect the organization's specific views on legislation? Does the organization advocate a position on a specific act, bill, or resolution?
D.	Does the organization engage in "indirect" or "grassroots" lobbying: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Does the organization attempt to influence legislation by influencing the public's opinion on specific legislation? Does the communication refer to specific legislation? Does the communication reflect a view or position on the legislation? Does the communication to the public include a "call to action" such as providing the address for the legislature, using a petition or tear-off postcard to communicate with the legislature or specifically identifying a legislator who will be voting on the proposed legislation and his or her position on it, or encouraging the public to contact members of a legislative body for purposes of supporting, opposing or proposing legislation?

Section III: General Advocacy

The following are indicators of general advocacy:

		Yes	No
A.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Is the organization attempting to influence public opinion on issues, rather than attempting to influence the election of candidates for public office or specific legislation? Is the organization attempting to influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch, regulators)? Is the organization engaging in nonpartisan, neutral voter educational activities? These may include get out the vote drives, encouraging voter registration, encouraging voter participation, candidate debates and forums, and the distribution of voter guides if conducted in a nonpartisan and neutral manner. (Refer to the subheads above for criteria when considering whether these voter education activities are conducted in a nonpartisan manner.)
B.	Does the organization engage in "educational" activities? (See Rev. Proc. 86-43). The term "educational" relates to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The instruction or training of an individual for the purpose of

	improving or developing his capabilities, or <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community.
	Is the organization advocating a particular position or viewpoint? If "Yes" to the following, the activity may qualify as permissible educational activity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the organization present a sufficiently full and fair exposition of the pertinent facts that aid the listener or reader in the learning process? • Does the organization provide a factual background for the viewpoint or position being advocated?
C.	The organization's presentations should avoid the following factors in order to be considered educational: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Do the organization's presentations avoid expressing conclusions more on the basis of strong emotional feelings than of objective evaluations? • Does the organization avoid presenting viewpoints or positions unsupported by facts and this is a significant portion of the organization's communications? • Does the organization avoid presenting facts purporting to support its viewpoints or position made in a distorted manner?. • Does the organization avoid making substantial use of inflammatory and/or disparaging terms?

Agreed. For screening, I would think you would look for significant amounts of any non-exempt activity. Seems like you'd have to dig in to figure out whether it all amounts to being primary or not.

I made the same comment but Holly pointed out that for private benefit--the standard is excess. So, whereas we can say you need significant political activity to look because we are looking at what the primary activity is--I'm not sure we can use other than the standard to describe the private benefit--thoughts?

Sharon/Steve,

I had a discussion with Holly Paz on Wednesday (11/17) afternoon to again discuss the tea party cases. She advised me that we were sending applicable parts of the application package to EOT along with the additional information letter and that based on this information they are finding that not all of the tea party cases have the same issues. This is why they have not been able to prepare a template letter with additional information questions. EOT is putting together a briefing paper and going to discuss the various issues in these cases with Judy Kindell (Senior Technical Advisor to EO Director). If Judy does not believe they have a basis for denial for the egregious situations, then they will most likely recommend all cases be approved.

In the meantime, the specialist(s) need to continue working the applications as they have and will need to advise applicants that the cases are still under review. If this has not been finalized by 12/13/2010, please follow up with me and I will ask for a status report from Holly. Also, if we are not sending applicable parts of the application package to EOT and are just sending the additional information letter, I need to know so that I can get back with Holly to find out what basis they are using to determine cases are different.

If you have questions/concerns regarding this, please let me know. Thanks.

Holly,

This is a follow up to my voice message. I have a concern with the approach being used to develop the tea party cases we have here in Cincinnati. Apparently, an additional information letter is prepared for each case and the letter is faxed to Chip Hull for him to review. After he reviews, we send out the letter. In some instances, the organizations have responded and we are just "sitting" on these cases. Personally, I don't know why Chip needs to look at each and every additional information letter. It seems to me that if he reviewed a template letter and approved it, we should be good to go. Then, when we get responses, we need to coordinate these cases as a group and not try to work them one by one. Right now, I believe we have approximately 45 or more of these cases.

Should these cases be transferred to EOT? If not, could we schedule some time to discuss the approach that is being used and come up with a process so we can get these cases moving? Thanks.

I'd recommend that Stephen go ahead and send an additional information letter to this organization. It sounds as though they're claiming to be educational and we'll need to figure out whether it meets the requirements under Rev. Proc. 98-23 (or whatever that Rev Proc number is).

Cindy,

Please read below. Stephen completed his review of the BOLO case. Also, I'm not so sure these cases would present a media problem as they do not seem to be that sophisticated. But we can't tell until we start working them.

Steve,

I agree wholly. It certainly is in the BOLO category. I think we need to do full development. So far, it looks like denial due to its strong advocacy intension. However, I think the focus of development questions should be somewhat different from ones that may conduct political campaigns (the organizations we had developed so far) as the likelihood this organization will do direct political campaigns is slim. My opinion is:

- 1) We focus whether it is educational or not (too much advocacy and protest activities).
- 2) We still want to make sure there is no direct or indirect political intervention in the activities - maybe one or two questions?

Thank you,
Stephen.

Re: 6103

Do the "occupy" cases meet the Current Political Issues description? No, these cases have not been considered to be Current Political Issues. The BOLO Watch List Tab Issue Description number 21 'Occupy Organizations' includes the text

Report Exhibits - Page 000307

"social injustices due to "big-money" influence." Although this is similar to the Emerging Issue Tab for the BOLO Advocacy Political cases with the EI-1 Issue Description that includes the text "social economic reform/movement" my understanding is that these Occupy organizations are not advocating expanding/limiting the government.

The above case was screened by Ron, he has determined it is an "Occupy" issue. I do not know who screened the other "Occupy" case that Stephen has.

As for getting these case to the bickerers or the assignment and development by someone who has gotten the May 2012 EO DC folks Advocacy training please let me know.

I do not know the specifics of the case but I will be getting this information. I will obtain and forward to you a summary that will include the following:

- the issues
- if the issues are similar to the case Stephen has
- the letter Stephen has sent

Tyler,

Do the "occupy" cases meet the Current Political Issues description? Did Ron look at them? Are they politically advocating for economic reform? If so, I think we need to let the bickerers take a look at these two cases as well. If Ron hasn't looked at it, please give it to him to take a look.

If not a Current Political Issue, then please send Stephen's additional information letter to me on the one he has - I'd like to take a look at it to see what the issues are before we proceed.

Are these cases considered advocacy cases per the BOLO? If so, I would think that we would want to have these developed by someone who has received the recent training. If not, is there a separate description for them on the BOLO?

Did Ron screen the case already? What are the issues in the case? Are they similar to the issues in the case Stephen has? Can you have any additional information letters Stephen has sent scanned and e-mailed to me?

Hi Vicki,

We wanted you to be aware that the EO client asked us for an accelerated review of a guide sheet they drafted for organizations that engage in lobbying, political intervention and general issue advocacy. It summarizes the law for applicable organizations (social welfare, labor, business leagues and political organizations), explains how to distinguish politics from issue advocacy, and provides comprehensive case development questions. EO will use the guide to process exemption applications and provide general guidance to the public on irs.gov. The turnaround time is very quick (under 2 weeks). EO is under a lot of pressure from the Hill to share it with them and publicly distribute it. The guide sheet is good, but needs a fair amount of work throughout. Susan and I are the primaries on the project.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

HIGHLIGHTS

INAPPROPRIATE CRITERIA WERE USED TO IDENTIFY TAX-EXEMPT APPLICATIONS FOR REVIEW

Highlights

Draft Report issued on April 12, 2013

Highlights of Audit Number: 201210022 to the Internal Revenue Service Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division.

IMPACT ON TAXPAYERS

Early in Calendar Year 2010, the IRS began using inappropriate criteria to identify organizations applying for tax-exempt status to review for indications of significant political campaign intervention. Although the IRS has taken some action, it will need to do more so that the public has reasonable assurance that applications are processed without unreasonable delay in a fair and impartial manner in the future.

WHY TIGTA DID THE AUDIT

TIGTA initiated this audit based on concerns expressed by members of Congress. The overall objective of this audit was to determine whether allegations were founded that the IRS: 1) targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, 2) delayed processing of targeted groups' applications, and 3) requested unnecessary information from targeted groups.

WHAT TIGTA FOUND

The IRS used inappropriate criteria that identified for review Tea Party and other organizations applying for tax-exempt status based upon their names or policy positions instead of indications of potential political campaign intervention. Ineffective management: 1) allowed inappropriate criteria to be developed and stay in place for more than 18 months, 2) resulted in substantial delays in processing certain applications, and 3) allowed unnecessary information requests to be issued.

Although the processing of some applications with potential significant political campaign intervention was started soon after receipt, no work was completed on the majority of these applications for 13 months. This was due to delays in receiving assistance from the Exempt Organizations function Headquarters office. For the 296 total political campaign intervention applications we reviewed, as of December 17, 2012, 108 had been approved, 28 were withdrawn by the applicant, none had been denied, and 160 were open from 206 to 1,138 calendar days (some for more than three years and crossing two election cycles).

More than 20 months after the initial case was identified, processing the cases began in earnest. Many organizations received requests for additional information from the IRS that included unnecessary, burdensome questions (e.g., lists of past and future donors). The IRS later informed some organizations that they did not need to provide the information that was previously requested. IRS officials stated that any donor information received in response to a request from its Determinations Unit was later destroyed.

WHAT TIGTA RECOMMENDED

TIGTA recommended that the Director, Exempt Organizations, finalize the interim actions taken, better document the reasons why applications potentially involving political campaign intervention are chosen for review, develop a process to track requests for assistance, finalize and publish guidance, develop and provide training to employees before each election cycle, and expeditiously resolve remaining political campaign intervention cases, some of which have been in process for three years. In addition, TIGTA recommended that the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division, request that social welfare activity guidance be developed by the Department of the Treasury.

Acting Deputy Inspector General for Audit

SUBJECT: Draft Audit Report – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review (Audit # 201210022)

Attached for your review and comments is the subject draft audit report. The overall objective of this review was to determine whether allegations were founded that the Internal Revenue Service (IRS): 1) targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, 2) delayed processing of targeted groups' applications for tax-exempt status, and 3) requested unnecessary information from targeted groups. This audit was initiated based on concerns expressed by members of Congress and reported in the media regarding the IRS's treatment of organizations applying for tax-exempt status. This review was included in our Fiscal Year 2013 Annual Audit Plan and addresses the major management challenge of Tax Compliance Initiatives.

We would appreciate receiving the IRS's response to the findings and recommendations in this draft report within 15 calendar days from the date of this memorandum. We are also providing the Director, Office of Legislative Affairs, copies of the report for appropriate distribution within the IRS.

Our recommendations will provide the following measurable benefits on tax administration: actual improved reliability of information for nine taxpayer case files that were either incomplete or could not be located for us to review; potential improved reliability of information for 185 organizations that filed tax-exempt applications which were not appropriately identified as having significant potential campaign intervention; potential reduced taxpayer burden for 158 organizations that waited longer than average for the IRS to make a decision regarding their tax-exempt status; and potential reduced taxpayer burden for 98 organizations that received additional information request letters with questions that were later deemed unnecessary by the Exempt Organizations function. Appendix IV of this report provides a detailed description of these benefits, which will be included in our Semiannual Report to Congress. Please include in your response your concurrence or nonconcurrence with the described benefits. If you do not concur, the response should specify the amount at issue as well as the reason for nonconcurrence.

It is our policy to make all Inspector General audit reports available to the public. Accordingly, we are also asking you to review the draft report from a disclosure perspective. If you identify any information in the report that would warrant protection under the Freedom of Information Act, the Internal Revenue Code, the Privacy Act, or any other applicable laws, please advise us as to the specific material needing protection and the justification for requesting that the information be withheld. It is important that you articulate how the release of this information could impair tax administration. You should respond to the disclosure review separately so that any discussion of sensitive information is not included in your response to the findings and recommendations that will be included in the final report. We will consider your proposed restrictions before releasing the report to the public.

Background

Organizations, such as charities, seeking Federal tax exemption are required to file an application with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). Other organizations, such as social welfare organizations, may file an application but are not required to do so. The IRS's Exempt Organizations (EO) function, Rulings and Agreements office, which is headquartered in Washington, D.C., is responsible for processing applications for tax exemption. Within the Rulings and Agreements office, the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati, Ohio, is responsible for reviewing applications as they are received to determine whether the organization qualifies for tax-exempt status.

In Fiscal Year 2012, 70 percent of all closed applications for tax-exempt status were approved during an initial review with little or no additional information from the organizations. If substantial additional information is needed, the application is placed in unassigned inventory until it can be assigned to a specialist in the Determinations Unit for further processing. The specialist develops a letter(s) requesting the additional information and issues it to the organization. Once the specialist receives all the necessary information to determine whether an organization should be afforded tax-exempt status, a final determination letter is issued to the organization either approving or denying the request for tax-exempt status.

If the Determinations Unit needs technical assistance processing applications, it may call upon the Technical Unit in the Rulings and Agreements office in Washington, D.C.¹ The IRS's goal for processing all types of applications for tax-exempt status was 121 days in Fiscal Year 2012; however, some cases may take substantially longer. For example, the EO function states in its Fiscal Year 2013 Work Plan that applications requiring additional information are not assigned for review until an average of five months after they are received.

Most organizations requesting tax-exempt status must submit either a Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or Form 1024, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(a), depending on the type of tax-exempt organization it desires to be. For example, a charitable organization would request exemption under Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) Section (§) 501(c)(3),² whereas a social welfare organization would request exemption under I.R.C. § 501(c)(4).³

The I.R.C. section and subsection an organization is granted tax exemption under affects the activities it may undertake. For example, I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) charitable organizations are prohibited from directly or indirectly participating in or intervening in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office (hereafter referred to as political campaign intervention).⁴ However, I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations, I.R.C. § 501(c)(5)⁵ agricultural and labor organizations, and I.R.C. § 501(c)(6)⁶ business leagues may engage in limited political campaign intervention. Figure 1 highlights certain characteristics of common types of tax-exempt organizations.

⁴ Political campaign intervention is the term used in Treasury Regulations §§ 1.501(c)(3)-1, 1.501(c)(4)-1, 1.501(c)(5)-1, and 1.501(c)(6)-1.

⁶ I.R.C. § 501(c)(6) (2012).

⁷ An organization engages in lobbying, or legislative activities, when it attempts to influence specific legislation by directly contacting members of a legislative body (Federal, State, or local) or encouraging the public to contact those members regarding that legislation. An organization also engages in lobbying when it encourages the public to take a position on a referendum. Lobbying is distinguished from political campaign intervention because lobbying does not involve attempts to influence the election of candidates for public office.

⁸ An organization engages in general advocacy when it attempts to 1) influence public opinion on issues germane to the organization's tax-exempt purposes, 2) influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch or regulatory agencies), or 3) encourage voter participation through "get out the vote" drives, voter guides, and candidate debates in a nonpartisan, neutral manner. General advocacy basically includes all other types of advocacy other than political campaign intervention and lobbying.

During the 2012 election cycle, the activities of tax-exempt organizations received media coverage concerning the amount of money spent on influencing elections. According to the Center for Responsive Politics, tax-exempt groups, such as I.R.C. § 501(c)(4), I.R.C. § 501(c)(5), and I.R.C. § 501(c)(6) organizations, spent $133 million in Calendar Year 2010 on Federal candidate-oriented expenditures. In Calendar Year 2012, this figure increased to $315 million.⁹ In addition, as shown in Figure 2, the number of applications for tax-exempt status has increased over the past four fiscal years.¹⁰

During the 2012 election cycle, some members of Congress raised concerns to the IRS about selective enforcement and the duty to treat similarly situated organizations consistently. In addition, several organizations applying for I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) tax-exempt status made allegations that the IRS 1) targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, 2) delayed the processing of targeted groups' applications for tax-exempt status, and 3) requested unnecessary information from targeted organizations. Lastly, several members of Congress requested that the IRS investigate whether existing social welfare organizations are improperly engaged in a substantial, or even predominant, amount of campaign activity.

This audit focused on allegations that the IRS targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, delayed the processing of targeted groups' applications, and requested unnecessary information from targeted organizations.

We initiated this audit based on concerns expressed by Congress and reported in the media regarding the IRS's treatment of organizations applying for tax-exempt status. We focused our efforts on reviewing the processing of applications for tax-exempt status and determining whether allegations made against the IRS were founded.¹¹ Tax-exempt application case files were selected for review in June 2012 and were reviewed as provided by the EO function between July and November 2012. We did not review whether specific applications for tax-exempt status should be approved or denied.

This review was performed at the EO function Headquarters office in Washington, D.C., and the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati, Ohio, during the period June 2012 through February 2013. We conducted this performance audit in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain sufficient, appropriate evidence to provide a reasonable basis for our findings and conclusions based on our audit objective. We believe that the evidence obtained provides a reasonable basis for our findings and conclusions based on our audit objective. Detailed information on our audit objective, scope, and methodology is presented in Appendix I. Major contributors to the report are listed in Appendix II.

¹¹ A future audit is being considered to assess how the EO function monitors I.R.C. §§ 501(c)(4)-(6) organizations to ensure that political campaign intervention does not constitute their primary activity.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

Results of Review

The Determinations Unit Used Inappropriate Criteria to Identify Potential Political Cases

The Determinations Unit developed and used inappropriate criteria to identify applications from organizations with the words Tea Party in their names. These applications (hereafter referred to as potential political cases)¹² were forwarded to a team of specialists¹³ for review. Subsequently, the Determinations Unit expanded the criteria to inappropriately include organizations with other specific names (Patriots and 9/12) or policy positions. While the criteria used by the Determinations Unit specified particular organization names, the team of specialists was also processing applications from groups with names other than those identified in the criteria. The inappropriate and changing criteria may have led to inconsistent treatment of organizations applying for tax-exempt status. For example, we identified some organizations' applications with evidence of significant political campaign intervention that were not forwarded to the team of specialists for processing but should have been. We also identified applications that were forwarded to the team of specialists but did not have indications of significant political campaign intervention. All applications that were forwarded to the team of specialists experienced substantial delays in processing. Although the IRS has taken some action, it will need to do more so that the public has reasonable assurance that applications are processed without unreasonable delay in a fair and impartial manner in the future.

Criteria for selecting applications inappropriately identified organizations based on their names and policy positions

The Determinations Unit developed and began using criteria to identify potential political cases for review that inappropriately identified specific groups applying for tax-exempt status based on their names or policy positions, instead of developing criteria based on tax-exempt laws and Treasury Regulations.

6103 According to media reports, some organizations were classified as § 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations but operated like political organizations.	6103

¹² Until July 2011, the Rulings and Agreements office referred to these cases as Tea Party cases. Afterwards, the EO function referred to these cases as advocacy cases.

¹³ Initially, the team consisted of one specialist, but it was expanded to several specialists in December 2011. The EO function referred to this team as the advocacy team.

thereafter, according to the IRS, a Determinations Unit specialist was asked to search for applications with Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in the organization's name as well as other "political-sounding" names. EO function officials stated that, in May 2010, the Determinations Unit began developing a spreadsheet that would become known as the "Be On the Look Out" listing (hereafter referred to as the BOLO listing),¹⁴ which included the emerging issue of Tea Party applications.¹⁵ In June 2010, the Determinations Unit began training its specialists on issues to be aware of, including Tea Party Cases. By July 2010, Determinations Unit management stated that it had requested its specialists to be on the lookout for Tea Party applications.

In August 2010, the Determinations Unit distributed the first formal BOLO listing. The criteria in the BOLO listing were Tea Party organizations applying for I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) or I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) status. Based on our review of other BOLO listing criteria, the use of organization names on the BOLO listing is not unique to potential political cases.¹⁶ EO function officials stated that Determinations Unit specialists interpreted the general criteria in the BOLO listing and developed expanded criteria for identifying potential political cases.¹⁷ Figure 3 shows that, by June 2011, the expanded criteria included additional names (Patriots and 9/12 Project), as well as policy positions espoused by organizations in their applications.

¹⁴ The BOLO listing includes a consolidated list of emerging issues the EO function identifies for dissemination to Determinations Unit specialists.

¹⁶ We did not review the use of other named organizations on the BOLO listing to determine if using them was appropriate.

¹⁷ During interviews with Determinations Unit specialists and managers, we could not specifically determine who had been involved in creating the criteria. EO function officials later clarified that the expanded criteria were a compilation of various Determinations Unit specialist responses on how they were identifying Tea Party cases. Since we could not determine specifically who was involved in creating the expanded criteria, we referred this matter to our Office of Investigations.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

The mission of the IRS is to provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all. According to IRS Policy Statement 1-1, IRS employees accomplish this mission by being impartial and handling tax matters in a manner that will promote public confidence. However, the criteria developed by the Determinations Unit gives the appearance that the IRS is not impartial in conducting its mission. The criteria focused narrowly on the names and policy positions of organizations instead of tax-exempt laws and Treasury Regulations. Criteria for selecting applications for the team of specialists should focus on the activities of the organizations and whether they fulfill the requirements of the law. Using the names or policy positions of organizations is not an appropriate basis for identifying applications for review by the team of specialists.

We asked the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division; the Director, EO; and Determinations Unit personnel if the criteria were influenced by any individual or organization outside the IRS. All of these officials stated that the criteria were not influenced by any individual or organization outside the IRS. Instead, the Determinations Unit developed and implemented inappropriate criteria in part due to insufficient oversight provided by management. Specifically, only first-line management approved references to the Tea Party in the BOLO listing criteria before it was implemented. As a result, inappropriate criteria remained in place for more than 18 months. Determinations Unit employees also did not consider the public perception of using politically sensitive criteria when identifying these cases. Lastly, the criteria developed showed a lack of knowledge in the Determinations Unit of what activities are allowed by I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) and I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organizations.

Determinations Unit employees stated that they considered the Tea Party criterion as a shorthand term for all potential political cases. Whether the inappropriate criterion was shorthand for all potential political cases or not, developing and using criteria that focuses on organization names and policy positions instead of the activities permitted under the Treasury Regulations does not promote public confidence that tax-exempt laws are being adhered to impartially. In addition, the applications for those organizations that were identified for processing by the team of specialists experienced significant delays and requests for unnecessary information that is detailed later in this report.

After being briefed on the expanded criteria in June 2011, the Director, EO, immediately directed that the criteria be changed. In July 2011, the criteria were changed to focus on the potential "political, lobbying, or [general] advocacy" activities of the organization. These criteria were an improvement over using organization names and policy positions. However, the team of specialists subsequently changed the criteria in January 2012 without executive approval because they believed the July 2011 criteria were too broad. The January 2012 criteria again focused on the policy positions of organizations, instead of tax-exempt laws and Treasury Regulations. After three months, the Director, Rulings and Agreements, learned the criteria had been changed by the team of specialists and subsequently revised the criteria again in May 2012.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

(See Appendix VI for a complete timeline of criteria used to identify potential political cases). The May 2012 criteria more clearly focus on activities permitted under the Treasury Regulations. As a result of changes made to the criteria without management knowledge, the Director, Rulings and Agreements, issued a memorandum requiring all original entries and changes to criteria included on the BOLO listing be approved at the executive level prior to implementation.

The team of specialists processed applications by organizations with names other than Tea Party, Patriots, and 9/12

To determine if organizations other than those specifically identified in the inappropriate criteria were processed by the team of specialists, we reviewed the names on all applications identified as potential political cases.¹⁸ Figure 4 shows that approximately one-third of the applications identified for processing by the team of specialists included Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in their names, while the remainder did not. According to the Director, Rulings and Agreements, the fact that the team of specialists worked applications that did not involve the Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 groups demonstrated that the IRS was not politically biased in its identification of applications for processing by the team of specialists.

applications that all cases with Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 in their names were forwarded to the team of specialists.¹⁹

Some applications with indications of significant political campaign intervention were not identified for review by the team of specialists

In May 2012, the Director, Rulings and Agreements, approved the current criteria for identifying potential political cases. The criteria are “501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention...” To determine if all cases with indications of significant political campaign intervention were sent to the team of specialists, we reviewed two statistical samples of I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) applications.

- Applications That the IRS Determined Required Minimal or No Additional Information for Processing – We reviewed a statistical sample of 94 I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) cases closed from May 2010²⁰ through May 2012 from a universe of 2,051 applications that the IRS determined required minimal or no additional information from the organizations (also referred to by the EO function as merit closures). We determined that two (2 percent) of 94 approved applications had indications of significant political campaign intervention and should have been forwarded to the team of specialists.²¹ Based on our statistical sample, we project an estimated 44 merit closure applications were not appropriately identified as potential political cases during this time period.²²
- Applications Identified by the IRS That Required Additional Information for Processing – We reviewed a statistical sample of 244 I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) cases closed from May 2010 through May 2012 or open as of May 31, 2012, from a universe of 2,459 applications that the IRS determined required additional information from the organizations applying for tax-exempt status (also referred to by the EO function as full development applications), but were not forwarded to the team of specialists. For the applications that were available for our review, we found that 14 (6 percent)²³ of 237 applications²⁴ included indications of significant political campaign intervention and ¹⁹ We determined this through two statistical samples of 338 (7.5 percent) from a universe of 4,510 I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) tax-exempt applications filed during May 2010 through May 2012 that were not forwarded to the team of specialists. See Appendix I for details on our sampling methodology.

²⁰ May 2010 was chosen because it is the first date that we were informed that the Determinations Unit was using criteria which identified specific organizations by name.

²¹ Neither of the two cases involved a Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organization.

²² See Appendix IV.

²³ None of the 14 cases involved a Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organization.

²⁴ We could not analyze seven sampled application case files because of incomplete documentation in the case files (six applications) or the case file could not be located (one application). See Appendix IV.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

should have been processed by the team of specialists.²⁵ We project an estimated 141 full development applications were not appropriately identified as potential political cases during this time period.²⁶

To determine if cases without indications of significant political campaign intervention were sent to the team of specialists, we reviewed all of the applications identified as potential political cases as of May 31, 2012.

- Applications That the IRS Determined Should Be Processed by the Team of Specialists – We reviewed all 298 applications that had been identified as potential political cases as of May 31, 2012. In the majority of cases, we agreed that the applications submitted included indications of significant political campaign intervention. However, we did not identify any indications of significant political campaign intervention for 91 (31 percent) of the 296 applications²⁷ that had complete documentation.²⁸

We discussed our results with EO function officials, who disagreed with our findings. Although EO function officials provided explanations about why the applications should have been identified as potential political cases, the case files did not include the specific reason(s) the applications were selected. EO function officials also stated that applications may not literally include statements indicating significant political campaign intervention.²⁹ According to EO function officials, organizations may not understand what constitutes political campaign intervention or may provide vague descriptions of certain activities that the EO function knows from past experience potentially involve political campaign intervention. In these cases, the EO function believes it is important to review the applications to ensure that political campaign intervention is not the organizations' primary activity. To provide further assurance that Determinations Unit employees are handling tax matters in an impartial manner, it would be helpful to document specifically why applications are chosen for further review.

²⁵ We determined eight applications were appropriately forwarded to the team of specialists. Five of the eight application case files involved Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organizations.

²⁶ See Appendix IV.

²⁷ We could not complete our review of two cases due to inadequate documentation in the case files. See Appendix IV.

²⁸ Seventeen (19 percent) of the 91 applications involved Tea Party, Patriots, or 9/12 organizations.

²⁹ It should also be noted that, in some cases, specialists obtained additional information after the application was received that indicated the organizations were involved in political campaign intervention which was not available in the initial application documentation we reviewed.

Recommendations

The Director, EO, should:

Recommendation 1: Ensure that the memorandum requiring the Director, Rulings and Agreements, to approve all original entries and changes to criteria included on the BOLQ listing prior to implementation be formalized in the appropriate Internal Revenue Manual.

Recommendation 2: Develop procedures to better document the reason(s) applications are chosen for review by the team of specialists (e.g., evidence of specific political campaign intervention in the application file or specific reasons the EO function may have for choosing to review the application further based on past experience).

Recommendation 3: Develop training or workshops to be held before each election cycle including, but not limited to, the proper ways to identify applications that require review of political campaign intervention activities.

Potential Political Cases Experienced Significant Processing Delays

Organizations that applied for tax-exempt status and had their applications forwarded to the team of specialists experienced substantial delays. As of December 17, 2012, many organizations had not received an approval or denial letter for more than two years after they submitted their applications. Some cases have been open during two election cycles (2010 and 2012). The IRS Strategic Plan 2009–2013 has several goals and objectives that involve timely interacting with taxpayers, including enforcement of the tax law in a timely manner while minimizing taxpayer burden. The EO function does not have specific timeliness goals for processing applications, such as potential political cases, that require significant follow-up with the organizations.³⁰ The time it takes to process an application depends upon the facts and circumstances of the case.

Potential political cases took significantly longer than average to process due to ineffective management oversight. Once cases were initially identified for processing by the team of specialists, the Determinations Unit Program Manager requested assistance via e-mail from the Technical Unit to ensure consistency in processing the cases. However, EO function management did not ensure that there was a formal process in place for initiating, tracking, or monitoring requests for assistance. In addition, there were several changes in Rulings and Agreements management responsible for overseeing the fulfillment of requests for assistance from the Determinations Unit during this time period. This contributed to the lengthy delays in processing potential political cases. As a result, the Determinations Unit waited more than ³⁰ The EO function, however, had an overall goal to process merit and full development tax-exempt applications in 121 days for Fiscal Year 2012.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

20 months (February 2010 to November 2011) to receive draft written guidance from the Technical Unit for processing potential political cases.

As a result, the IRS delayed the issuance of letters to organizations approving their tax-exempt status. For I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) organizations, this means that potential donors and grantors could be reluctant to provide donations or grants.³¹ In addition, some organizations withdrew their applications and others may not have begun conducting planned charitable or social welfare work. The delays may have also prevented some organizations from receiving certain benefits of the tax-exempt status. For example, if organizations are approved for tax-exempt status, they may receive exemption from certain State taxes and reduced postal rates. For organizations that may eventually be denied tax-exempt status but have been operating while their applications are pending, the organizations will be required to retroactively file income tax returns and may be liable to pay income taxes for, in some cases, more than two years.

To analyze the delays, we: 1) reviewed the events that led to delays in processing potential political cases, 2) compared the amount of time cases assigned to the team of specialists were open to applications that were not assigned to the team of specialists, and 3) determined if organizations were eligible to sue the IRS due to delays in processing certain applications.

Potential political cases experienced long processing delays

The team of specialists stopped working on potential political cases from October 2010 through November 2011, resulting in a 13-month delay, while they waited for assistance from the Technical Unit. Figure 5 illustrates significant events and delays concerning potential political cases. For a comprehensive timeline of events related to potential political cases, see Appendix VII.

³¹ Of 298 cases reviewed, 89 were I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) organizations.

Potential Political Cases (February 2010 Through May 2012)

Date	Event and Delay
April 2010	The team of specialists is formed with one specialist who is assigned potential political cases and begins working on them with the assistance of a Technical Unit employee.
October 2010	The team of specialists stops processing potential political cases while waiting for assistance from the Technical Unit.
July 2011	The EO function decides to develop written guidance for the Determinations Unit to process the potential political cases.
November 2011	Draft written guidance is provided to the Determinations Unit.
December 2011	Additional specialists are added to the team of specialists.
January 2012	Specialists begin issuing additional information request letters to organizations applying for tax-exempt status, requesting that the information be provided in two to three weeks. These time periods are standard response times given for any information request and are included in the Internal Revenue Manual.
February 2012	Concerns are raised in the media regarding requests for significant amounts of information from organizations applying for tax-exempt status. The Director, EO, stops specialists from issuing any more letters requesting information. Instead, letters allowing extensions of 60 days to respond to previous additional information letters were developed and issued in March and April 2012. These letters also noted that applicants should contact the IRS if they needed longer than 60 days to respond.
May 2012	A workshop is given to Determinations Unit specialists assigned to potential political cases. Afterwards, a review of all the open cases is completed to recommend whether additional processing is necessary or whether the cases can be closed (as of December 17, 2012, 160 applications were still being processed).

Source: Interviews of EO function employees and our review of EO function e-mails.

Ineffective oversight by management led to significant delays in processing potential political cases.

6103 In April 2010, the Determinations Unit Program Manager requested via e-mail a contact in the Technical Unit to provide assistance with processing the applications. A Technical Unit specialist was assigned this task and began working with the team of specialists. The team of specialists stopped processing cases in October 2010 without closing any of the 40 cases that were begun. However, the Determinations Unit Program Manager thought the cases were being processed. Later, we were informed by the Director, Rulings and Agreements, that there was a miscommunication about processing the cases. The Determinations Unit waited for assistance from the Technical Unit instead of continuing to process the cases. The Determinations Unit Program Manager requested status updates on the request for assistance several times via e-mail. Draft written guidance was not received from the Technical Unit until November 2011, 13 months after the Determinations Unit stopped processing the cases. As of the end of our audit work in February 2013, the guidance had not been finalized because the EO function decided to provide training instead.²⁴

DRAFT - Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

Many organizations waited much longer than 13 months for a decision while others have yet to receive a decision from the IRS. For example, as of December 17, 2012, the IRS had been processing several potential political cases for more than 1,000 calendar days. Some of these organizations received requests for additional information in Calendar Year 2010 and then did not hear from the IRS again for more than a year while the Determinations Unit waited for assistance from the Technical Unit. For the 296 potential political cases we reviewed,²⁵ as of December 17, 2012, 108 applications had been approved, 28 were withdrawn by the applicant, none had been denied, and 160 cases were open from 206 to 1,138 calendar days (some crossing two election cycles).

In March 2012, the Deputy Commissioner, Services and Enforcement, asked the Senior Technical Advisor to the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division, to look into concerns raised by the media about delays in processing applications for tax-exempt status from Tea Party groups and the nature of the questions being asked related to the applications. In April 2012, the Senior Technical Advisor to the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division, along with a team of EO function Headquarters office employees, reviewed many of the potential political cases and determined that there appeared to be some confusion by Determinations Unit specialists and applicants on what activities are allowed by I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organizations. We believe this could be due to the lack of specific guidance on how to determine the "primary activity" of an I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organization. Treasury Regulations state that I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organizations should have social welfare as their "primary activity"; however, the regulations do not define how to measure whether social welfare is an organization's "primary activity."

As a result of this confusion, the EO function Headquarters employees provided a two-day workshop to the team of specialists in May 2012 to train them on what activities are allowable by ²⁴ In response to the National Taxpayer Advocate's 2007 Annual Report to Congress, the IRS commented that putting guide sheets for processing applications for tax-exempt status on its Internet site would result in fewer delays.

Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) organizations, including lobbying and political campaign intervention. After this workshop, potential political cases were independently reviewed by two people to determine what, if any, additional work needed to be completed prior to making a decision to approve or deny the applications for tax-exempt status. This review continued on any newly identified potential political cases. Prior to the hands-on training and independent reviews, the team of specialists had only approved six (2 percent) of 298 applications. After the hands-on training and independent reviews began, the Determinations Unit approved an additional 102 applications by December 2012.³⁴ In addition, it was decided that applications could be approved, but a referral for follow-up could be sent to another unit,³⁵ which could review the activities of an organization at a later date to determine if they were consistent with the organizations tax-exempt status.

Potential political cases were open much longer than similar cases that were not identified for processing by the team of specialists

For Fiscal Year 2012, the average time it took the Determinations Unit to complete processing applications requiring additional information from organizations applying for tax-exempt status (also referred to by the EO function as full development cases) was 238 calendar days according to IRS data. In comparison, the average time a potential political case was open as of December 17, 2012, was 574 days (with 158 potential political cases being open longer than the average calendar days it took to close other full development cases).³⁶ Figure 6 shows that more than 80 percent of the potential political cases have been open more than one year.

Some charitable organizations were eligible to sue the IRS for declaratory judgment due to the delays in processing applications

The Determinations Unit did not always timely approve or deny the applications for I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) tax-exempt status for potential political cases. However, the tax law provides organizations with the ability to sue the IRS to force a decision on their applications if the IRS does not approve or deny their applications within 270 calendar days.³⁸

As of May 31, 2012,³⁹ 32 (36 percent) of 89 I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) potential political cases were open more than 270 calendar days, and the organizations had responded timely to all requests for additional information, as required. As of the end of our fieldwork, none of these organizations had sued the IRS, even though they had the legal right. In another 38 open cases, organizations were timely in their responses to additional information requests, but the 270-calendar-day threshold had not been reached as of May 31, 2012. These 38 organizations may have the right to sue the IRS in the future if determinations are not made within the 270-calendar-day period.

Recommendations

The Director, EO, should:

Recommendation 4: Develop a process for the Determinations Unit to formally request assistance from the Technical Unit and the Guidance Unit.⁴⁰ The process should include actions to initiate, track, and monitor requests for assistance to ensure that requests are responded to timely.

Recommendation 5: Develop guidance for specialists on how to process requests for tax-exempt status involving potentially significant political campaign intervention. This guidance should also be posted to the Internet to provide transparency to organizations on the application process.

Recommendation 6: Develop training or workshops to be held before each election cycle including, but not limited to: a) what constitutes political campaign intervention versus general advocacy (including case examples) and b) the ability to refer for follow-up those organizations that may conduct activities in a future year which may cause them to lose their tax-exempt status.

Recommendation 7: Provide oversight to ensure that potential political cases, some of which have been in process for three years, are approved or denied expeditiously.

³⁸ Revenue Procedure 2012-09 provides further guidance on the implementation of this right.

³⁹ Tax-exempt application case files were selected for review in June 2012 based on a May 31, 2012 listing of applications being processed by the team of specialists.

⁴⁰ The Guidance Unit provides formal and informal guidance that explains how certain laws, such as regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, notices and announcements, may apply to exempt organizations.

The Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division, should:

Recommendation 8: Recommend to IRS Chief Counsel and the Department of the Treasury that guidance on how to measure the “primary activity” of I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations be included for consideration in the Department of the Treasury Priority Guidance Plan.⁴¹

The Determinations Unit Requested Unnecessary Information for Many Potential Political Cases

The Determinations Unit sent requests for information that we later (in whole or in part) determined to be unnecessary for 98 (58 percent) of 170 organizations that received additional information request letters.⁴² According to the Internal Revenue Manual, these requests should be thorough, complete, and relevant. However, the Determinations Unit requested irrelevant (unnecessary) information because of a lack of managerial review, at all levels, of questions before they were sent to organizations seeking tax-exempt status. We also believe that Determinations Unit specialists lacked knowledge of what activities are allowed by I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) and I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) tax-exempt organizations. This created burden on the organizations that were required to gather and forward information that was not needed by the Determinations Unit and led to delays in processing the applications. These delays could result in potential donors and grantors being reluctant to provide donations or grants to organizations applying for I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) tax-exempt status. In addition, some organizations may not have begun conducting planned charitable or social welfare work.

After receiving draft guidance in November 2011, the team of specialists began sending requests for additional information in January 2012 to organizations that were applying for tax-exempt status. For some organizations, this was the second letter received from the IRS requesting additional information, the first of which had been received more than a year before this date. These letters requested that the information be provided in two or three weeks (as is customary in these letters) despite the fact that the IRS had done nothing with some of the applications for more than one year. After the letters were received, organizations seeking tax-exempt status, as well as members of Congress, expressed concerns about the type and extent of questions being asked. For example, the Determinations Unit requested donor information from 27 organizations⁴³ that it would be required to make public if the application was approved, even though this information could not be disclosed by the IRS when provided by organizations.

⁴¹ The Department of the Treasury issues a Priority Guidance Plan each year to identify and prioritize the tax issues that should be addressed through regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, notices, and other published administrative guidance.

⁴² See Appendix IV.

whose tax-exempt status had been approved. Figure 7 shows an example of requests sent to organizations applying for tax-exempt status regarding donors.

After media attention, the Director, EO, stopped issuance of additional information request letters and provided an extension of time to respond to previously issued letters. The Deputy Commissioner for Services and Enforcement then asked the Senior Technical Advisor to the Acting Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division, to find out how applications were being processed and make recommendations. The Senior Technical Advisor and a team of specialists visited the Determinations Unit in Cincinnati, Ohio, and began reviewing cases. As part of this effort, EO function Headquarters office employees reviewed the additional information request letters prepared by the team of specialists and identified seven questions that they deemed unnecessary. Subsequently, the EO function instituted the practice that all additional information request letters for potential political cases be reviewed by the EO function Headquarters office before they are sent to organizations seeking tax-exempt status. In addition, EO function officials informed us that they decided to destroy all donor lists that were sent in for potential political cases which the IRS determined it should not have requested. Figure 8 lists the seven questions identified as being unnecessary.

Figure 8: Seven Questions Identified As Unnecessary by the EO Function

Number	Question
1	Requests the names of donors.
2	Requests a list of all issues that are important to the organization and asks that the organization indicate its position regarding such issues.
3	Requests 1) the roles and activities of the audience and participants other than members in the activity and 2) the type of conversations and discussions members and participants had during the activity.
4	Asks whether the officer, director, etc., has run or will run for public office.
5	Requests the political affiliation of the officer, director, speakers, candidates supported, etc., or otherwise refers to the relationship with identified political party-related organizations.
6	Requests information regarding employment, other than for the organization, including hours worked.
7	Requests information regarding activities of another organization – not just the relationship of the other organization to the applicant.

We reviewed case file information for all 170 organizations that received additional information request letters and determined that 98 (58 percent) had received requests for information that was later deemed unnecessary by the EO function. Of the 98 organizations:

- 15 were informed that they did not need to respond to previous requests for information and, instead, received a revised request for information.
- 12 either received a letter or a telephone call stating their application was approved and they no longer needed to respond to information requests they had received from the IRS.

Statement That Previously Requested Information Is No Longer Needed*

Dear Applicant:

We are pleased to inform you that upon review of your application for tax-exempt status we have determined that you are exempt from Federal income tax under section 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code. Because this letter could help resolve any questions regarding your exempt status, you should keep it in your permanent records.

Please note that we have just completed another review of your request to be recognized as tax-exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code. Based on that review, we concluded that we do not need the additional materials previously requested because your application and materials provide sufficient information.

Appendix I

Detailed Objective, Scope, and Methodology

The overall objective was to determine whether allegations were founded that the IRS:
1) targeted specific groups applying for tax-exempt status, 2) delayed processing targeted groups' applications for tax-exempt status, and 3) requested unnecessary information from targeted groups. To accomplish our objective, we:

- I. Assessed the actions taken by the EO function in response to the increase in applications for tax-exempt status from organizations potentially involved in political campaign intervention.
 - A. Interviewed EO function management to identify steps taken and who authorized them. We also developed a timeline of events.
 - B. Obtained a list identifying applications that were identified for processing by the team of specialists and determined the status of the identified cases (open, approved, denied, etc.) through May 31, 2012. We also received an updated list of identified cases through December 17, 2012 to determine the status's of the initial cases as of this date.
 - C. Determined whether procedures and controls in place since May 2010 resulted in inconsistent treatment of applications potentially involving political campaign intervention.
- II. Determined whether changes to procedures and controls since May 2010 affected the timeliness of reviewing applications potentially involving political campaign intervention.
 - A. Interviewed EO function personnel to determine whether there were any outside influences that affected the timeliness of reviewing potential political cases.
 - B. Reviewed all 89 I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) potential political cases to determine whether they were processed within the 270-day standard required by law.
- III. Determined whether the actions taken by the EO function to identify applications for tax-exempt status of organizations potentially involved in political campaign intervention were consistent.
 - A. Selected a statistical sample of 244 open and closed I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) application cases from a universe of 2,459 that the IRS determined needed significant additional information (full development) on the Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations Determination System from May 2010 through May 2012 to determine whether they should have been identified for processing by the team of specialists. We selected our statistical sample using the following criteria: 90 percent confidence level, 50 percent error rate,¹ and ± 5 percent precision rate. We used a random sample to ensure that each application case had an equal chance of being selected, which enabled us to obtain sufficient evidence to support our results. A contracted statistician reviewed our projections.

Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

1. Obtained the universe of 2,459 cases from the Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations Determination System and performed validity checks to ensure that the data were accurate. We found the data could be relied on for this review.
 2. Obtained a statistical sample of open and closed application cases.
 3. Determined whether application cases with potential political campaign intervention issues were identified for processing by the team of specialists.
 4. Interviewed EO function personnel to obtain their perspective on any application cases we identified that should have been identified for processing by the team of specialists but were not.
- B. Selected a statistical sample of 94 closed I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) application cases from a universe of 2,051 that the IRS determined did not need significant additional information (merit cases) on the Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations Determination System from May 2010 through May 2012 to determine whether they should have been identified for processing by the team of specialists. We selected our statistical sample using the following criteria: 90 percent confidence level, 10 percent error rate,² and ± 5 percent precision rate. We used a random sample to ensure that each application case had an equal chance of being selected, which enabled us to obtain sufficient evidence to support our results. A contracted statistician reviewed our projections.
1. Obtained the universe of 2,051 cases from the Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations Determination System and performed validity checks to ensure that the data were accurate. We found the data could be relied on for this review.
 2. Obtained a statistical sample of closed application cases.
 3. Determined whether application cases with potential political campaign intervention issues were not identified for processing by the team of specialists.

¹ An expected error rate of 50 percent was chosen because we determined that cases needing significant additional information had criteria that included the names of specific groups.

² An expected error rate of 10 percent was chosen because procedures require that cases with political issues generally need significant additional information.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

4. Interviewed EO function personnel to obtain their perspective on any applications we identified that should have been identified for processing by the team of specialists but were not.
 - C. Obtained and reviewed all 298 application cases identified for processing by the team of specialists as of May 31, 2012, to determine whether they were correctly identified.
 1. Determined whether application cases were correctly identified for processing by the team of specialists.
 2. Interviewed EO function personnel to obtain their perspective on any cases we identified that should not have been identified for processing by the team of specialists.
 - D. Computed the average cycle time of processing potential political cases and compared it to the average cycle time for processing similar cases that were not processed by the team of specialists.
 - E. Determined the number of organizations that may have been adversely affected by inconsistent treatment.
- IV. Determined whether the EO function consistently had a reasonable basis for requesting information from organizations seeking tax-exempt status that were potentially involved in political campaign intervention.
- A. Reviewed all 170 potential political cases that were issued additional information request letters to determine whether the letters included questions deemed unnecessary by the EO function.
 - B. Interviewed EO function personnel to obtain their perspective on additional information that was requested that may not have been necessary to help make a determination decision.
 - C. Determined the number of taxpayers that may have been adversely affected.

Internal controls methodology

Internal controls relate to management's plans, methods, and procedures used to meet their mission, goals, and objectives. Internal controls include the processes and procedures for planning, organizing, directing, and controlling program operations. They include the systems for measuring, reporting, and monitoring program performance. We determined the following internal controls were relevant to our audit objective: EO function policies, procedures, and practices for identifying and processing applications for tax-exempt status with indications of political campaign intervention. We evaluated these controls by interviewing personnel, reviewing available documentation, reviewing statistical samples of applications for tax-exempt status, and reviewing applications identified as involving potential political campaign intervention.

Appendix IV

Outcome Measures

This appendix presents detailed information on the measurable impact that our recommended corrective actions will have on tax administration. These benefits will be incorporated into our Semiannual Report to Congress.

Type and Value of Outcome Measure:

- Reliability of Information – Actual; nine application case files that were either incomplete or could not be located for us to review (see page 5).

Methodology Used to Measure the Reported Benefit:

During our review of applications for tax-exempt status that were not identified for the team of specialists, we were unable to review seven case files because of incomplete documentation in the files (six cases) or the case file could not be located (one case). In addition, during our review of all identified potential political cases through May 31, 2012, we were unable to analyze two case files because of incomplete documentation.

Type and Value of Outcome Measure:

- Reliability of Information – Potential; 44 organizations whose tax-exempt applications were not appropriately identified as having significant potential political campaign intervention (see page 5).

Methodology Used to Measure the Reported Benefit:

We selected a simple random sample of 94 I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) cases closed from May 2010 through May 2012 from a universe of 2,051 applications that the IRS determined required minimal or no additional information from organizations applying for tax-exempt status. During our case reviews, we determined that two cases were not appropriately identified as having significant potential political campaign intervention. We projected, with 90 percent confidence, an actual error rate of between 0.38 percent and 6.55 percent¹ and that between eight and 134 applications² were not properly identified for processing by the team of specialists.

² The point estimate number of error applications is 44. The 90 percent confidence interval was calculated using the Exact Binomial Method.

DRAFT – Inappropriate Criteria Were Used to Identify Tax-Exempt Applications for Review

Type and Value of Outcome Measure:

- Reliability of Information – Potential; 141 organizations whose tax-exempt applications were not appropriately identified as having significant potential political campaign intervention (see page 5).

Methodology Used to Measure the Reported Benefit:

We selected a simple random sample of 244 I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) cases closed from May 2010 through May 2012 or open as of May 31, 2012, from a universe of 2,459 applications that the IRS determined required additional information from organizations applying for tax -exempt status.³ During our case reviews, we determined that 14 cases were not appropriately identified as having significant potential political campaign intervention. We projected, with 90 percent confidence, an actual error rate of between 3.38 percent and 8.43 percent⁴ and that between 84 and 198 applications⁵ were not properly identified for processing by the team of specialists.

Type and Value of Outcome Measure:

- Taxpayer Burden – Potential 158 organizations that waited longer than average for the IRS to make a decision regarding their tax-exempt status (see page 10).

Methodology Used to Measure the Reported Benefit:

We obtained data from the EO function on the average number of days it took to determine whether an application for tax-exempt status was approved or denied. In Fiscal Year 2012, it took on average 238 days to close a case that needed additional information from the organization prior to approving or denying the application. As of December 17, 2012, there were 158 potential political cases that were open more than 238 calendar days.

Type and Value of Outcome Measure:

- Taxpayer Burden – Potential; 98 organizations that received additional information request letters with questions that were later deemed unnecessary by the EO function (see page 16).

Methodology Used to Measure the Reported Benefit:

We reviewed 170 potential political cases that had received additional information request letters from the Determinations Unit. Using a list of seven questions/topics that the EO function categorized as unnecessary, we identified 98 potential political cases that included additional information request letters asking questions deemed unnecessary by the EO function.

³ We found that seven cases from the sample of 244 were not reviewable because of incomplete documentation.

⁴ The point estimate error rate for the sample is 5.91 percent with a precision of ± 2.52 percent.

⁵ The point estimate number of error applications is 141 with a precision of ± 57 applications.

Timeline of Written Criteria for Identifying Potential Political Cases

The following illustrates the changes to the written criteria provided to Determinations Unit employees for identifying applications for the team of specialists.

Date	Criteria Developed or Actions Taken
6/03
March–April 2010	The Determinations Unit began searching for other requests for tax exemption involving the Tea Party, Patriots, 9/12 and I.R.C. § 501(c)(4) applications involving political sounding names, e.g., “We the People” or “Take Back the Country.”
July 2010	Determinations Unit management requested its specialists to be on the lookout for Tea Party applications.
August 2010	First BOLO listing issued with criteria listed as “...various local organizations in the Tea Party movement...applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4).”
July 2011	Criteria changed to “Organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)” based on the concerns the Director, EO, raised in June 2011.
January 2012	Criteria changed to “Political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding government, educating on the constitution and bill of rights, social economic reform/movement” based on Determinations Unit concerns that the July 2011 criteria was too generic.
May 2012	Criteria changed to “501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/ or excess private benefit).”

Comprehensive Timeline of Events

The following chart illustrates a timeline of events from February 2010 through July 2012 involving the identification and processing of potential political cases. It shows that there was confusion about how to process the applications, delays in the processing of the applications, and a lack of management oversight and guidance. The timeline was developed using documentation provided by the EO function as well as numerous interviews with EO function personnel.

Approx. March 1, 2010	The Determinations Unit Group Manager asked a specialist to search for other Tea Party or similar organizations' applications in order to determine the scope of the issue. The specialist continued to complete searches for additional cases until the precursor to the BOLO listing was issued in May 2010.	Determinations Unit personnel indicated that they used the description Tea Party as a shorthand way of referring to the group of cases involving political campaign intervention rather than to target any particular group. The specialist used Tea Party, Patriots, and 9/12 as part of the criteria for these searches.	Interview
March 16-17, 2010	Ten Tea Party cases were identified. The Acting Manager, Technical Unit, requested two more cases be transferred to Washington, D.C. 6103	Not all of the ten cases had Tea Party in their names.	E-Mail

¹ The Taxpayer Advocate Service is an independent organization within the IRS that provides assistance to taxpayers whose tax problems have not been resolved through normal IRS channels. Taxpayer Advocate Service employees must, at times, rely on assistance from employees assigned to other IRS functions. To request assistance, the Taxpayer Advocate Service issues an Operations Assistance Request specifying the actions needed to help resolve the taxpayer's problem.

June 6, 2011	The Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements, commented that the criteria being used to identify Tea Party cases may have resulted in over-inclusion. 6103 [REDACTED]		E-Mail
June 6, 2011	The Determinations Unit Program Manager mentioned that the Determinations Unit needed assistance from the Technical Unit to ensure consistency.		E-Mail
June 29, 2011	A briefing was held with the Director, EO. The briefing paper noted that the Determinations Unit sent cases that met any of the criteria below to a designated team of specialists to be worked: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> "Tea Party," "Patriots," or "9/12 Project" is referenced in the case file. Issues include Government spending, Government debt, or taxes. Education of the public via advocacy/lobbying to "make America a better place to live." Statements in the case file criticize how the country is being run. Over 100 applications were identified by this time. It was decided to develop a guide sheet for processing these cases.	The briefing paper for the Director, EO, was prepared by Tax Law Specialists in the Technical Unit and the Guidance Unit and was reviewed by the Acting Manager, Technical Unit. A Guidance Unit specialist was the primary author of the briefing paper. During the briefing, the Director, EO, raised concerns over the language of the BOLO listing criteria. The Director, EO, instructed that the criteria be immediately revised.	Documentation and E-Mail
July 5, 2011	A conference call was held with the Technical Unit, the Director, EO, and the Determinations Unit Program Manager. They developed new criteria for identifying cases. The Determinations Unit Program Manager made changes to the BOLO listing. The criteria were changed to "organizations involved with political, lobbying, or advocacy for exemption under 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)."		E-Mail
July 5, 2011	The EO function Headquarters office would be putting a document together with recommended actions for identified cases.		E-Mail
July 21, 2011	The Technical Unit was assigned a new person to coordinate with the Determinations Unit.		E-Mail
July 24, 2011	Work commenced on the guide sheet when the Acting Manager, Technical Unit, asked tax law specialists to draft a list of things for Determinations Unit specialists to look for when working these cases.		E-Mail

September 15, 2011	The Determinations Unit Program Manager sent a list of all identified cases to the Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements, so that the Technical Unit could complete a limited "triage" of the cases using available information from the electronic case files. A Technical Unit specialist reviewed the list to determine if any cases could be closed on merit or closed with an adverse determination letter. This "triage" was considered a third screening.		E-Mail
September 21, 2011	The draft guide sheet was sent for review and comment to various EO function Headquarters office employees.		E-Mail
October 2011	A new person took over as the Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements.		Interview
October 24, 2011	A Technical Unit manager forwarded initial "triage" results to the Determinations Unit.		E-Mail
October 25, 2011	Based on the categories and terminology used in the triage results spreadsheet, the Determinations Unit Program Manager was unclear what the Determinations Unit should do with the triage results – close cases, develop further, etc. – and requested the status on the guidance from the Technical Unit.		E-Mail
October 26, 2011	A Technical Unit specialist provided further explanations of the triage results in an e-mail to the Determinations Unit Program Manager.		E-Mail

December 16, 2011	The first meeting was held by the team of specialists.		Interview and E-Mail
January 2012	The first batch of letters requesting additional information for applications containing incomplete or missing information was issued by Determinations Unit specialists based, in part, on their reading of the draft guidance issued by the Technical Unit.		Interview and E-Mail
January 2012	A Determinations Unit specialist was tasked with performing a secondary screening of identified potential political cases to ensure that they involved political activities and not just general or lobbying advocacy.		Interviews
January 25, 2012	The BOLO listing criteria were again updated. The criteria was revised as "political action type organizations involved in limiting/expanding Government, educating on the Constitution and Bill of Rights, social economic reform/movement." The coordinator contact was changed as well.		Interview and Documentation
February 27, 2012	A member of the team of specialists asked when to start issuing additional information request letters to applicants again.		E-Mail
February 27, 2012	The Determinations Unit Program Manager questioned why the team of specialists was not issuing additional information request letters. The Determinations Unit Group Manager for the team of specialists had told the team coordinator to stop developing template questions, not to stop issuing additional information request letters. The miscommunication was corrected on February 29, 2012.		E-Mail
February 29, 2012	The Director, EO, requested that the Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements, develop a letter to clearly inform applicants what was going to happen if they did not respond to the additional information request letters and giving them more time for their responses.		E-Mail
February 29, 2012	The Director, EO, stopped any more additional information request letters from being issued on advocacy cases until new guidance was provided to the Determinations Unit. In addition, the Acting Director, Rulings and Agreements, discussed with the Determinations Unit Program Manager, about having specialists print out website information and asking the organizations to verify the information instead of asking for applicants to print out the website information. May 14-15, 2012	Training was held in Cincinnati, Ohio, on how to process identified potential political cases. The Senior Technical Advisor to the Director, EO, took over coordination of the team of specialists from the Determinations Unit.		E-Mail
May 16, 2012	A joint team of Determinations Unit specialists and EO function Headquarters office employees began reviewing all potential political cases began in Cincinnati, Ohio. Cases were divided into four groups with recommendations for how to proceed: favorable determination, favorable with limited development, significant development, and probably adverse. This took around three weeks to complete. A worksheet was used to document the reviews.		E-Mail
May 17, 2012	The Director, Rulings and Agreements, issued a memorandum outlining new procedures for updating the BOLO listing. The BOLO listing criteria were updated again. New criteria reads: "501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit)."	Suggested additions and changes must be approved by a Determinations Unit coordinator, the Determinations Unit Program Manager, and the Director, Rulings and Agreements.	Interview and E-Mail
May 21, 2012	The EO function determined that the requested donor information could be destroyed or returned to the applicant if not used to make the final determination of tax-exempt status. It does not need to be kept in the administrative file. A letter would be issued to the organizations informing them that the donor information was destroyed.		Interview and E-Mail
May 24, 2012	A telephone call script was developed to inform some organizations that had not responded to the additional information requests that it was not necessary to send the requested information and that their applications had been approved. Also, an additional paragraph was developed for the determination letter.		E-Mail

Hi David & Amy.

If you both have time, I think it would be helpful at Wednesday's meeting if you could provide a brief sketch of your organizations and what they do (and plan to do). Most of the attendees are not likely to be familiar with the specifics of your cases. Highlight things you think warrant further development or explanation, particularly their political activities (both what they label as political and what we think could be political). You also may have questions about what their underlying social welfare purpose is and how its activities would advance them. Note anything that concerns you or raises questions. I think this will provide a good backdrop and lead in for why we are recommending development for the 2010 election year. As you have time, be thinking of the types of information you'd like to have specific to your entity (like copies of 2010 ads and other distributed materials, when broadcast or distributed, the audience it reaches, what criteria they used to select a particular market, allocation of costs between social and political activities (and the method they used to make that allocation). Depending on how the discussion goes, I suppose we should be prepared to offer to provide them a detailed list of development questions (at a later date).

Thank you. I'll be around tomorrow if there's anything we need to discuss.

Subject: Follow-up - Chronicle of Philanthropy: # IRS staff members "responsible for policing/enforcing regulations for tax-exempt groups" - says deadline before Noon Tuesday

Hi everyone,

After I pointed the Chronicle reporter to Page 2 of the latest Workplan for the EO staffing numbers, she replied with two messages that I've copied in below.

One option: I could make sure she has seen the Workplan's Glossary on Pages 3 and 4 (http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-lega/fy2012_EO_AnnualRpt_2013_Work_Plan.pdf), where she would see the following descriptions, among others:

Rulings and Agreements (R&A)

Composed of Determinations, Determinations Quality Assurance, EO Technical and EO Guidance. R&A processes applications for tax exemption and provides direction through private letter rulings, technical advice memoranda and formal and informal guidance; responds to taxpayer and Congressional correspondence, and supports EO Examinations initiatives with technical advice and the development of questionnaires, check sheets and reports.

Examinations

Analyzes the operation and finances of exempt organizations through examinations (audits). Exam agents propose tax assessments or changes to exempt status when necessary, as well as advise organizations about how to comply with the law in the future.

Customer Education and Outreach (CE&O)

Develops and delivers programs and products designed to help exempt organizations understand their tax responsibilities. Supports the development of internal and external communications, forms and publications and external education and outreach efforts.

Would you think pointing her to the above would be an appropriate response?

Hi, Grant,

Thank you. I'm glad we fact-checked this as our columnist appears to have been off significantly. For 2012, I have the IRS employing 876 staff members for tax exempt organizations. If I interpreted this incorrectly, please let me know.

Thanks again for your assistance. I appreciate it.

Hi Michelle and Bobby,

The Chronicle of Philanthropy reporter said on the phone she was asked to fact-check the statement and figures (on down in her e-mail message to us below) that are in the draft of an opinion piece she said someone else is writing for her newspaper -- she did not explain further.

I believe the last time The Chronicle referred to IRS EO employee numbers was in an op-ed piece in October of 2010 -- the writer was long-time columnist Pablo Eisenberg and his piece, "State and Federal Regulators Must Do More to Police Nonprofits," contained the following sentence: The government agencies that oversee charities, both federal and state, have too few staff members and too little money. The Internal Revenue Service's tax-exempt division has about 850 employees, fewer than half of whom are charged with overseeing the operations of about 1.2 million charities.

Report Exhibits - Page 000380

The figure she is checking below seems wrong -- would an option be to point her to Page 2 of the latest IRS EO Workplan (http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-tege/FY2012_EO_AnnualRpt_2013_Work_Plan.pdf) that has the following table (and also an organizational chart that I won't copy in):

Exempt Organizations Staffing

Exempt Organizations (EO) is organized by three functional areas: Rulings and Agreements, Examinations, and Customer Education and Outreach. Figure A: Employees over a 3-year period

Rulings and Agreements	Examinations	Customer Education and Outreach	Director's Office/Program Management	Total
2010	337	538	13	12	900
2011	332	531	12	14	889
2012	335	516	12	13	876

Deadline: Tuesday before noon

Fact checking for an opinion piece

"The IRS currently has no more than 450 staff members responsible for policing and enforcing regulations for the nation's tax-exempt groups."

Is this accurate? More than 450? Less than 450?

Thanks

June Briefing Notes

Group 7830

July 2, 2010

A. Leadership:

We held a group meeting on June 7th and the following was discussed:

1. Revalidated everyone's flexiplace agreements.
2. Covered examples of clear written communications in our work
3. Tyler Chumney provided a presentation on his trip to Brooklyn concerning the TAG Promoter Investigations.

B. Employee Satisfaction:

1. Personnel Issues:

PRIVACY

With the exception of one IP case, all of his work has been obtained and reassigned. I hope to locate the remaining case next week and likely approve as we have the related response.

PRIVACY

The following are the highlights:

1. I approved him for FMLA-LWOP to account for the time he needs to miss work for medical reasons. Over the past month, PRIVA has been at work approximately 60-65% of the time. Most of the missed time has been accounted for using the FMLA option.
2. PRIVACY work has been pretty good. The gaps in time have been eliminated and his work is fairly current with no cases exceeding 90 days from assignment.

Edwina Perkins: As noted this week, Edwina does currently have some inventory management issues with her TAG#18 work. She and I have developed a plan to eliminate her old work shortly and we intend to have weekly meetings to monitor the progress.

I wouldn't yet deem her a performance problem as technically she is above average and many of her cases are difficult. However, she could do better managing her work and I should have caught the problem sooner. Per review of her EPF, she has had good ratings, most notably a 4.6. score in 2008. However, in 2009, she was lowered to a 4.2 in part due to workload management issues--- which I think is accurate. Her mid-year still kept her at a 4.2.

Report Exhibits - Page 000382

Overall, I plan to move her off of TAG#18 work once her old age cases are gone and transition her to Terrorism. I feel burn out might be to blame for some of her problems.

2. Employee Feedback in June 2010:

- i. Annuals Completed= 3 (Tracy, Shawndea, and Tom)
- ii. Workload Reviews/Mid-Years= 0
- iii. Individual Case/Focused Reviews= 18
- iv. Annuals Due Next Month= 0
- v. Mid-Years Due Next Month= 1 (Tyler)

Overview: I kept Tom's and Shawndea's scores the same as last year. I raised Tracy to a 4.8 primarily due to her excellent workload management skills. Tracy, Carly, and April all do a good job in this area.

C. Business Results:

The following is an overview of the major statuses of the group's inventory.

Cases Older than 90 Days from Assignment

Total number of cases in Status 52 and	258
Total number of cases exceeding 90 days from assignment in Status 52 and @ 7/2/10	44
% Exceed 90 days	17%

Note: A little bit of improvement from last month when we were at 20%. Most of the group's status 52 old age work now has 2010 dates

Open Longer than 120 Days (all statuses)

Total number of cases open	415
Total number of cases exceeding 120 days from assignment in all statuses	31
% Exceed 120 days	7%

Note: I included all statuses for this category as many of these cases are status 31 and 32 going back and forth between QA.

Report Exhibits - Page 000383

Cases in Status 55

Total number of cases in 55 as of 7/2/2010	22
Number of cases exceeding 5 business days in 55	3

Note: Per Business Objects, 3 cases exceeded the 5 day limit. The oldest date is 6/24 and will be closed within the next few days

Cases in Status 32

Total number of cases in 32 as of 7/2/2010	14
Number of cases exceeding 45 days	6

Cases in Status 75

Total number of cases in 75 and 31994 for rescreening	16
Number of cases exceeding 60 days	1

Note: One case exceeds 60 days which is [REDACTED] 6103 -- previously identified as the Successor to Acorn. We are awaiting guidance from EO Technical on next action with this case.

Group Direct Time (Codes 130, 303, 160):

Greetings,

I just want to make sure we are all on the same page as to the ACORN-related cases. We should not be developing or resolving them at this point. I had spoken to Rob about a successor to one of the ACORN orgs. in NY and he mentioned that some activity is going on in the TEGE Commissioner's office with respect to ACORN and to hold off.

Also, there is another case, [REDACTED] 6103 which is in Donna's shop for review. In that case, [REDACTED] 6103 is a member of the organization, contributes money, appoints a member of the board, and the principal was a high ranking official with [REDACTED] 6103 in the midwest. I recommended that the case be put on hold til we hear further from Rob.

Cindy: Please forward this request for technical assistance to EOT. I already asked Jon to get the IDRS information needed to determine whether or not there are open exams on these taxpayers, but he still needs some help from EOT to insure that we are on the right track and asking appropriate questions on these cases.

Thank you

Sharon,

I'm elevating some new developments in our Acorn-related cases as a request for technical assistance from EO Technical. Below, Ed has outlined some facts from the two Acorn-Related applications currently assigned to him. Both applications are based out of [REDACTED] and share common officers. One applicant is applying for c(3) and the other for c(4). Both are affiliated with [REDACTED] that appears not to be exempt but yet currently selected for an examination.

The concerning issue regarding Ed's c(4) applicant is that is has an Asset Purchase Agreement with the [REDACTED]. The [REDACTED] is selling its membership info to the c(4) applicant and this information includes members' bank account information. There is no indication in the file that members have agreed to have their bank accounts charged by the 501(c)(4) applicant. Additionally, the membership list numbers in the thousands---- thus many individuals could be impacted.

I think it would be useful to have a TLS in EO Tech work with a few agents in TAG (notably Ed Pomerantz and Tom Kallinan) concerning the development of these cases and how they would go about addressing the issue of the member bank account access. Ultimately, I think the cases can remain in Cincinnati; however, it would be constructive to have some of our ideas bounced off some folks from EO Tech. Additionally, we would also need some assistance trying to determine if the [REDACTED] is marked for exam. If so, there could be additional impact in making any type of ruling on these cases.

Note: Tom Kallinan also has a Acorn-related case from [REDACTED]; however, these factors aren't present in his case. It still would be useful, however, for him to participate

thanks

Good afternoon, Bill:

I am working a case that has a board member who is also serving on the board of an ACORN organization. Per the instructions on the BOLO list and your instruction, I called Chip Hull in EO Technical for guidance in developing the case. Mr. Hull informed me that he should not be on a list as contact person for ACORN related organizations. While he previously provided guidance to a Determ manager re: ACORN successors, his manager informed him that he should not be doing research for our cases. Mr. Hull requested that his name be removed from the BOLO list as a contact person.

Sharon and Cindy,

I'm forwarding this on as an alert on the Successor to Acorn issue. Screening has spotted another potential Successor to Acorn and has forwarded the case to me in my group's unassigned #. This particular applicant is applying as a 501(c)(3) as opposed to the previous one which applied under 501(c)(4). The following are the particulars of this new application:

1. Name: [REDACTED] 6103
2. POA's: [REDACTED] 6103
3. Address: [REDACTED] 6103
4. Officers: [REDACTED] 6103
5. Description of Activities: [REDACTED] 6103
6. Relationship to Acorn: [REDACTED] 6103

Overall, I would suggest taking the same approach as we did with the 501(c)(4) applicant and updating the case to Status 37 and keeping it in TAG to await guidance from EO Tech.

thanks

Cindy

I'm elevating a case identified in Vicki's group related to the political advocacy area. While the development issues within Vicki's group are straightforward, any type of ruling on this case could be impactful. Below is the background on the Acorn-related cases:

1. Acorn-related cases were previously reflected on the BOLO and subsequently folded into the political advocacy category over a year ago.
2. Currently, we have two proposed denials under review in D.C. involving Acorn-related cases. One is assigned to Ed Pomerantz and the other to April Garrett
3. These cases contain the same characteristics as other identified political advocacy cases as the applications contain instances of partisan political activity and excessive legislative and mobilization activities precluding approval under c(3).

Note: In reviewing this case with Vicki, the officers and addresses were similar to other Acorn applications I've seen in the past. The officer in this application was [REDACTED]. Lastly, per Vicki's research, the organization that submitted the Form 8940 also appears to be under audit which adds to the potential sensitivity. I've instructed Vicki to hold off on any further action on the case.

Guide Sheet for Political Campaign Intervention and Influencing Legislation Activities

OVERVIEW

Many different types of organizations exempt under § 501(c) engage in limited activities to intervene in political campaigns or attempt to influence legislation, in compliance with the applicable tax laws. Identifying and distinguishing political campaign intervention and attempts to influence legislation and quantifying them to determine an organization's initial and continuing qualification for exemption can be difficult and complex, particularly for organizations that have multiple purposes and activities. The determination is based on all the facts and circumstances and requires extensive case development and careful legal analysis.

This guide sheet aids examination agents and determination specialists by listing specific types of activities that may be used for political campaign intervention or influencing legislation. It lists the pertinent facts to develop in the determination and examination process. It also lists published guidance (including revenue rulings) that illustrate how to analyze these facts to determine whether an activity's purpose is political campaign intervention or influencing legislation. Finally, it contains an appendix of various legal limitations on an organization's political campaign and legislative activities and definitions of terms in the Code and other legal authorities.

Questions on case development and applicable law should be directed to Exempt Organizations Technical [Names, Emails, Phone Numbers]

APPENDIX

I. LIMITATIONS ON POLITICAL CAMPAIGN INTERVENTION AND ATTEMPTING TO INFLUENCE LEGISLATION

A. Section 501(c)(3) Organizations

I.R.C. § 501(c)(3)

"Corporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, . . . or educational purposes, . . . no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation (except as otherwise provided in subsection (h)), and which does not participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office."

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(3)

"An organization is not operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes" if:

- (i) "a substantial part of its activities is attempting to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise;"
- (ii) "it participates or intervenes, directly or indirectly, in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office"; or
- (iii) "(a) Its main or primary objective or objectives (as distinguished from its incidental or secondary objectives) may be attained only by legislation or a defeat of proposed legislation; and (b) it advocates, or campaigns for, the attainment of such main or primary objective or objectives as distinguished from engaging in nonpartisan analysis, study, or research and making the results thereof available to the public."

B. Section 501(c)(4) Social Welfare Organizations

I.R.C. § 501(c)(4)

"Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare."

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)

"An organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. An organization embraced within this section is one which is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements."

"The promotion of social welfare does not include direct or indirect participation or intervention in political campaigns on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office."

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(3)

An organization:

(i) "a substantial part of its activities is attempting to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise;" or

(ii) "(a) its main or primary objective or objectives (as distinguished from its incidental or secondary objectives) may be attained only by legislation or a defeat of proposed legislation; and (b) it advocates, or campaigns for, the attainment of such main or primary objective or objectives as distinguished from engaging in nonpartisan analysis, study, or research and making the results thereof available to the public,"

"... may nevertheless qualify for exemption as a social welfare organization under § 501(c)(4) if it meets the requirements set out in paragraph (a) of § 1.501(c)(4)-1."

Rev. Rul. 81-95, 1981-1 C.B. 332

"[T]he regulations do not impose a complete ban on [political campaign] activities for section 501(c)(4) organizations."

"An organization may carry on lawful political activities and remain exempt under section 501(c)(4) as long as it is primarily engaged in activities that promote social welfare."

C. Section 501(c)(5) Labor, Agricultural and Horticultural Organizations

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(5)-1

"Have as their objects the betterment of the conditions of those engaged in such pursuits, the improvement of the grade of their products, and the development of a higher degree of efficiency in their respective occupations."

D. Section 501(c)(6) Business Leagues and Chambers of Commerce

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(6)-1

"A business league is an association of persons having some common business interest, the purpose of which is to promote such common interest and not to engage in a regular business of a kind ordinarily carried on for profit. It is an organization of the same general class as a chamber of commerce or board of trade."

E. Certain Other Limitations and Special Rules Applicable to Certain Exempt Organizations

I.R.C. § 527(f) Tax on Exempt Organizations

Imposes a tax on organizations that are exempt under § 501(c) and that expend amounts for an "exempt function," which is defined in § 527(e)(2) to mean "the function of influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any Federal, State, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of Presidential or Vice-Presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed."

Rev. Rul. 2004-6, 2004-1 C.B. 328

Presents a number of factual situations to illustrate when organizations exempt under §§ 501(c)(4), (5) and (6) are subject to tax under § 527(f) on their expenditures for § 527(e)(2) exempt (political organization) function activities. Discusses factors that tend to show whether an advocacy communication on public policy issues for a § 527(e)(2) (political organization) is an exempt function.

I.R.C. § 162(e) Lobbying and Political Expenditures

Generally denies a deduction for amounts paid or incurred to influence legislation, intervene in political campaigns, and conduct certain lobbying activities.

I.R.C. § 6033(e) Reporting of Lobbying and Political Expenditures

Requires organizations exempt from tax under § 501, other than § 501(c)(3) organizations, to report their total expenditures for lobbying or political expenses for which § 162(e)(1) denies a deduction.

II. DEFINITIONS

A. POLITICAL CAMPAIGN INTERVENTION

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(3)(iii)

"Activities which constitute participation or intervention in a political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to a candidate include, but are not limited to, the publication or distribution of written or printed statements or the making of oral statements on behalf of or in opposition to such a candidate."

"The term candidate for public office means an individual who offers himself, or is proposed by others, as a contestant for an elective public office, whether such office be national, State, or local."

Rev. Rul. 67-71, 1967-1 C.B. 125

"[T]he organization's activity in evaluating the qualifications of all potential candidates and then selecting and supporting a particular slate constitutes participation in a political campaign on behalf of particular candidates, even though its process of selection may have been completely objective and unbiased and was intended primarily to educate and inform the public about the candidates."

Rev Rul. 67-368, 1967-2 C.B. 194

"Comparative rating of candidates, even though on a nonpartisan basis, is participation or intervention on behalf of those candidates favorably rated and in opposition to those less favorably rated."

Rev. Rul. 74-574, 1974-2 C.B. 160

"The broadcasting station, by reason of its disclaimers [about individual candidates and their positions] and the presentation of equal opportunities for all bona fide legally qualified candidates for the same elective public office to express their views, is not participating or intervening on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office."

Rev. Rul. 86-95, 1986-2 C.B. 73

Organization that proposes to educate voters by conducting a series of public forums in congressional districts during congressional election campaigns is not participating in a political campaign on behalf of any candidate due to the neutral form and content of its proposed forums.

B. ATTEMPTING TO INFLUENCE LEGISLATION

Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(3)(ii)

"[A]n organization will be regarded as attempting to influence legislation if the organization: (a) Contacts, or urges the public to contact, members of a legislative body for the purpose of proposing, supporting, or opposing legislation; or (b) Advocates the adoption or rejection of legislation."

"The term legislation . . . includes action by the Congress, by any State legislature, by any local council or similar governing body, or by the public in a referendum, initiative, constitutional amendment, or similar procedure."

Haswell v. United States, 500 F.2d 1133, 1144 (Cl. Ct. 1974)

"The part of [organization's] operations involved in the advocacy of the interests of railroad passenger consumers on legislative matters does not consist of activities which qualify as nonpartisan analysis, study, or research. . . [It] was partisan on this issue, and the materials submitted in support of its position were not the full and fair objective expositions that would enable the public or an individual to reach an independent conclusion."

Treas. Reg. § 56.4911-2(c)(1)

Generally excludes from the definition of lobbying communications "nonpartisan analysis, study, or research," which is defined in Treas. Reg. § 56.4911-2(c)(1)(ii) to mean "an independent and objective exposition of a particular subject matter, including any activity that is 'educational' within the meaning of § 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3). Thus, 'nonpartisan analysis, study, or research' may advocate a particular position or viewpoint so long as there is a sufficiently full and fair exposition of the pertinent facts to enable the public or an individual to form an independent opinion or conclusion. The mere presentation of unsupported opinion, however, does not qualify as 'nonpartisan analysis, study, or research.'" See Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(iv).

III. DETERMINING WHETHER POLITICAL CAMPAIGN INTERVENTION OR INFLUENCING LEGISLATION ACTIVITIES FURTHER SUBSTANTIAL NON-EXEMPT PURPOSES

Haswell v. United States, 500 F.2d 1133, 1142, 1147 (Cl. Ct. 1974)

"The political efforts of an organization must be balanced in the context of the objectives and circumstances of the organization to determine whether a substantial part of its activities is to influence, or is an attempt to influence, legislation. A percentage test to determine whether the activities are substantial is not appropriate. Such a test obscures the complexity of balancing the organization's activities in relation to its objectives and circumstances in the context of the totality of the organization."

"Distribution of expenditures is only one measure of the substantiality of [organization's] political activities."

Seasongood v. Commissioner, 227 F.2d 907, 909, 912 (6th Cir. 1955)

"[T]he so-called 'political activities' of the [organization] were not in relation to all of its other activities substantial, within the meaning of the section," where it involved no expenditures, employed no individuals for this work, and dedicated less than 5% of its time and effort.

Rev. Rul. 68-45, 1968-1 C.B. 259

"The fact that the organization's principal source of income is from the conduct of bingo games with the general public does not mean that the games are also its primary activity. All facts and circumstances are taken into account in determining an organization's primary activity." (social welfare organization)

Thank you Janine for this report. The only documents I sent you are the ones we all exchanged. We have not given EO written comments on their 3/21 draft. We'll see how much caveat-type language we can draw from existing sources to add to their draft. Else we'll end up with even more verbiage the public (and Treasury) never has seen before. The checksheets are tough; if we follow 2007-41, we lose the indicator breakdown of 2004-6. But, adding indicators for all types of activities goes broader than both 2004 and 2007. It's super tricky.

Thank you Don.

Vicki and I spoke with Lois and Nan on Friday. They are not convinced that the latest draft is breaking much new ground and feel it's needed for her folks to know what to do. Vicki shared her view that it would be a helpful tool but don't see how we can do it now b/c we'd need to involve Treasury. We all agreed that this needed to go up to Nikole, and Nan was going to let us know about having that conversation.

In the meantime, I said our team can continue to work together to fine-tune this to be as accurate as possible. Lois said she was fine with adding more caveats, including something on where we are providing some discussion beyond what is directly in published guidance. For example, we can note that the definitions of political campaign intervention and attempts to influence legis are drawn from c3 arena, but are consistent with approaches used in c4/5/6 or something like that. We could also put more lead-in language to checksheets to mitigate likelihood that agents approach yes/nos as pure mathematical tabulation.

So, while we don't know where for certain this is headed, we'll keep working with client in good faith to get as grounded a document as possible, but Vicki will be clear up the chain that we see significant risks in this approach without involving Treasury. In this regard, is the document dated 3/21 the one with the annotations?

By the way, I read 2007-41 and 2004-6. They are very helpful and cover a good bit of ground. I can see where it's helpful to pull all these pieces together in one doc with a list of questions to ask. But it's also clear that some facts don't seem to fit into the categories of tends to show or tends not to show, which is why you pulled some out into "neutral category". On the other hand, since 2004-6 categorized them, to go back solely to list of questions without categorizing even those already categorized in 2004-6, is actually giving the agents less than what is out there.

I think Lois will react very strongly against that, particularly on the theory that this is fact gathering focused. I think we need to leave them in it at all possible; she is already pushing back a lot on 5/6a deletion and if we take out lobbying, I'm concerned we'll lose any remaining credibility in their eyes in giving them something they can conceivably use. Can we put caveat at the top that facts and circumstances surrounding something designated as lobbying may turn out to be political campaign activity.

Just to let you know Don and I are struggling with lobbying questions because we're concerned that agents that put a communication in the "lobbying" bucket might think their job is done and not look further at whether the lobbying is disguised campaign activity. Could be a problem if the lobbying is "Stop the wrongheaded legislation (sponsored by Candidate X)!"

For that reason we plan to delete the lobbying guide sheets (which applied to (c)(3)s only anyway).

These issues don't get easier!

Subject: Retooled Advocacy Guide Sheet

The name and general headings are the same, but the looks are very different under the hood,. We have worked to make the advocacy document a multi-purpose tool kit for the determination agents, with specific usage instructions, in response to your requested needs.

This document has three principal objectives: To help agents (1) screen applications for possible political campaign intervention or lobbying, (2) decide which cases require further development and which facts to develop, and (3) make a determination whether a particular activity is political campaign intervention or lobbying.

We thought a quick orientation would be helpful. The new structure of each guide sheet has 3 parts. Following the general overview of each activity (from before), first it screens out those applicants that do not engage in the precise type of activity that presents possible campaign intervention or lobbying, and sends the agent on to the next guide sheet.

The second section presents a specific set of facts for each type of activity (voter guides for example) which generally are campaign intervention (or lobbying) and a specific set which generally are not. These are based on specific examples in the published guidance and are specifically cited. This part can serve both a secondary and broader screening function and a decision function.

The third part presents the broader list of possible facts to consider. These facts now are grouped by those that tend to show campaign intervention (or lobbying), and facts that do not. There are no neutral facts. In many cases, we have combined a series of facts into a single factor to make them clearer markers of campaigning or lobbying. Each factor contains citations to the published guidance and applicable examples for the agents' quick reference. In many cases, we went beyond the guidance to derive specific (and often countervailing) factors based upon the published rulings, but which were not specifically the subject or basis of the rulings. These are noted in the citations as derived from the guidance. This we hope will expand the utility of the indicators, reduce ambiguities, and make them more balanced and comprehensive on both the aye and nay side. There are some exposed toes here, but we tried very much to minimize and protect them.

Finally, each guide sheet contains a full list of all of the cited published guidance (and associated examples) for reference.

EO Technical remains the back-up resource under this document, but now as more of a final resort. This document gives the agents many tools (with instructions) to work more thoroughly and completely through the cases and needed development on their own, all within the confines of a single document, before requiring assistance.

This is not a completely polished product from head to toe, so please excuse anything that you may find amiss. We have some final polishing and cleanup operations to complete.

Last, we attach the safe and conservative counsel draft from before, which does not go beyond the boundaries of the existing published guidance, a toe-safe zone. This document now has been revised, as we discussed, to include specific citations for each individual factor listed in the guide sheet.

Please let us know of your questions, comments and reactions to the retooled guide sheet.

Let's not change anything yet. I agree with you that we don't want everything under the sun, e.g., typical abortion rights, activists coming together to advocate for better education, etc. I'm going to add this to my list for the managers' meeting so that we can clarify for managers.

Lois Lerner is meeting with Steve Miller at 1:00 p.m. today. If they want anything changed, they'll let us know.

Also, Holly just replied and indicated that the numbers from 2/15 are fine and that she doesn't need other numbers.

I spoke with Peggy earlier in the week about getting an EDS # for Emerging Issue cases so that we can put all of these cases in status 51 in that number. It won't matter how many Emerging Issues we have, they will all go in that number. This process will be similar to the Potential Abusive cases. In that category, there are about 10 to 15 different types of cases, but they're all controlled under one EDS number.

I like your analogy and am going to talk about these analogies during the managers' meeting in an attempt to get everyone on the team focused.

I know it is a stressful time, but hang in there. Things will get better.

Cindy,

The BOLO is supposed to capture those political sensitive issues where precedent is missing or not obvious or novel type issues or a change in law, etc. If we want to capture something more, please let me know. My understanding is and/or my belief is; we don't need to capture everything under the sun. We were getting everything from the typical abortion rights activists to a community coming together to advocate for better education in their school district (typical c(4)).

Now that the media has ruffled our feathers; If we want to capture everything, no problem, but I would suggest we set up another secondary screening process or stick them all in 51.

I can relate to your baseball analogy you shared yesterday. Here is another; I can't compete in the Kentucky Derby unless I have thoroughbreds.

1. # advocacy cases -- Refer to Attachment 1 with numbers I sent to you on 2/15/2012. Is this acceptable or do you need numbers as of tomorrow morning?
2. All cases meeting BOLO criteria are supposed to go to full development. One of the California cases I referenced in an email sent to you a few minutes ago involving a TAS inquiry was inadvertently in status 62 (screening). This is an error and will be corrected on 2/23.
3. BOLO - Refer to Emerging Issues tab on attached BOLO spreadsheet (refer to Attachment 2).

9/29/2010 - Case assigned to screener
10/5/2010 - Case assigned to specialist (issues identified and elevated)

Case held pending guidance

2/6/2012 - Case assigned to specialist
[REDACTED] - Letter 1312, request for additional information sent to applicant with a response due date of [REDACTED] (refer to Attachment 3).

I spoke to the advocacy project coordinator who indicated that he reviewed the letter with the specialist prior to it being sent to the applicant. He indicated that the questions posed were within the auspices of the Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet provided by EO Technical. I reviewed the additional information and compared it to the guide. I agree the questions related to advocacy fall within the guide. There are a few general questions asking for a board member to sign application, for hardcopy prints of webpages, and for hardcopy prints of any social media. The other questions are regarding the specific details about the activities of the organization; the role of the members with the organization; details on public events; and contents of materials, speeches, forums, etc. The letter also asks whether candidate forums are conducted, whether they attempt to influence legislation, and whether they communicate with legislative bodies.

Please see below. Can you get me number of advocacy cases by 11 tomorrow? Also I think all meeting bolo criteria go to full development. Is that right? How do we currently have this described on the bolo? Sorry for the rush. Steve Miller now wants to meet with Lois tomorrow at 1.

OK--so for my afternoon meeting, I think I will also need to have numbers in the pipeline of all advocacy matters and status--that is, are any getting screened or all going to full development? Also, is there any history on similarly situated organizations? Rather than email--let's talk at the 10:30 meeting in the morning--

The Daily Caller via Yahoo! News On Tuesday Jamie Radtke, a Republican U.S. Senate candidate from Virginia, asked California Republican Rep. Darrell Issa to investigate what she said was unfair treatment of tea party groups by the Internal Revenue Service. Issa chairs the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform.

Advocacy Organizations Guide Sheet

Many different types of exempt organizations engage in advocacy in compliance with the applicable tax laws. However, it can be challenging to distinguish between permissible and impermissible types of advocacy; analyzing cases involving these issues is extremely fact-intensive.

This guide sheet aids agents working these cases in differentiating between types of advocacy, reminds them of the advocacy rules pertaining to various categories of exempt organizations, and provides a checklist of facts to gather and indicators of various types of advocacy.

PART 1: THREE TYPES OF ADVOCACY:

This guide sheet breaks down the broad concept of advocacy into three categories: political campaign intervention, lobbying, and general advocacy. They are defined as follows.

1) Political Campaign Intervention:

An organization engages in political campaign intervention when it participates or intervenes in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office. This includes attempts to influence political campaigns through both direct and indirect support of, or opposition to, a candidate.

2) Lobbying:

An organization engages in lobbying, or legislative activities, when it attempts to influence specific legislation by directly contacting members of a legislative body (federal, state, or local), or encouraging the public to contact those members, regarding that legislation. An organization also engages in lobbying when it encourages the public to take a position on a referendum. Lobbying is distinguished from political campaign intervention because lobbying does not involve attempts to influence the election of candidates for public office.

3) General Advocacy:

An organization engages in general advocacy when it attempts to (1) influence public opinion on issues germane to the organization's exempt purposes, (2) influence non-legislative governing bodies (e.g., the executive branch, regulatory agencies), or (3) encourage voter participation through get out the vote drives, voter guides, and candidate debates in a nonpartisan, neutral manner. General advocacy generally includes all other types of advocacy other than political campaign activity and lobbying.

Part 2: TYPES OF ADVOCACY ORGANIZATIONS:

The organizations that most commonly engage in advocacy are 501(c)(3), (4), (5), and (6) organizations and 527 organizations. Below are the rules governing which types of advocacy these organizations can engage in, along with a chart summarizing that information.

1) IRC 501(c)(3) organizations:

- Organizations described in 501(c)(3) are organized and operated exclusively for charitable, religious, educational, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes, or to foster national or international amateur sports competition, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.
- They can engage in an insubstantial amount of lobbying.
- They are absolutely prohibited from engaging in any type of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general advocacy as long as it is educational.

2) IRC 501(c)(4) organizations:

- Social welfare organizations described in IRC 501(c)(4) are organized and operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare, which involves promoting the common good and general welfare of people in the community.
- They can not be operated for profit.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(4) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(4) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.
- They can engage in lobbying as their primary activity if their legislative activities are related to their specific exempt purposes.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of general educational advocacy as long as the activities are related to their exempt purposes.

3) IRC 501(c)(5) organizations:

- Organizations described in IRC 501(c)(5) must be organized and operated for the purpose of bettering the conditions of those engaged in labor, agricultural, or horticultural pursuits.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is conducted with regard to issues that are related to their exempt purpose.

- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(5) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(5) activities, cannot make up an organization's primary activities.

4) IRC 501(c)(6) organizations:

- Business league organizations described in 501(c)(6) are associations of persons with a common business interest and their purposes must be to promote this common interest.
- They can not conduct a regular trade or business for profit.
- They can engage in unlimited general advocacy.
- They can engage in unlimited lobbying, so long as the lobbying is on issues related to their exempt purpose.
- They can engage in limited political campaign intervention. Political campaign intervention does not further (c)(6) purposes; therefore political campaign activity, along with all other non-(c)(6) activities, cannot make up the organization's primary activity.

5) IRC 527 organizations:

- Political organizations described in 527 are organized and operated for the primary purpose of engaging in political campaign intervention, including influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any Federal, State, or local public office or office in a political organization, or the election of Presidential or Vice-Presidential electors, whether or not such individual or electors are selected, nominated, elected, or appointed.
- They can engage in an unlimited amount of political campaign intervention.
- They can engage in lobbying, but would be taxed on that activity.
- They can engage in general advocacy, but would be taxed on that activity.

Part 3: ADVOCACY INDICATORS:

Distinguishing between types of advocacy requires knowledge of all the pertinent facts and circumstances. Therefore, careful and full development of a case is often required to gather very specific facts. The following are facts about an organization's activities that can be helpful in distinguishing between different types of advocacy:

- What does the organization consider to be its exempt purpose(s)?
  - How much time is devoted to each purpose?
  - How many financial resources are devoted to each purpose?
  - In what order of importance does the organization consider its exempt purpose? From most important to least important?
- What are the sources of the organization's income?
- Does the organization engage in fundraising activities? If so, what are the specific details, including:
  - Copies of all solicitations the organization has made regarding fundraising, including fundraising that occurs in an election year and non-election year.
  - Copies of all documents related to the organization's fundraising events, including pamphlets, flyers, brochures, webpage solicitations.
  - How much of the organization's budget is spent on fundraising? Determine the sources of fundraising expenses.
- How does the organization use its income? Are there detailed break-downs of these expenses?
- How many employees does the organization have? How many volunteers?
  - Are employees full-time, part-time, or seasonal? Explain.
  - If employees are part-time, when did/do they work?
  - If employees are seasonal, during what season (months) did/do they work?
- How many employees and volunteers are/were devoted to each activity of the organization throughout the year?
- How many and what sort of resources are devoted to volunteer activities?
- Does the organization conduct educational events, discussion groups or similar events? If so, what are the specific details, including:
  - Copies of all materials distributed with regards to the event.
  - When have the events taken place or plan to take place?
  - How much of the organization's resources and budget are devoted to these activities? What is the breakdown of expenses?

Report Exhibits - Page 000443

- Does the organization publish or distribute materials or conduct other communications that are prepared by or reviewed by another organization?
- Is the organization associated with any other IRC 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4) or 527 organizations? If so, describe in detail the nature of the relationship(s).
  - Does the organization work with those organization(s) regularly? Describe the nature of the contacts.
  - Do you share employees, volunteers, resources, office space, etc. with the organization(s)?
- Does the organization conduct candidate forums or other events at which candidates for public office are invited to speak? If so, what are the details, including the nature of the forums, the candidates invited to participate, the candidates that did participate, the issues discussed, the time and location of the event.
  - Are there copies of all materials distributed regarding the forum and provided at the forum, including any internet material discussing or advertising the forum?
- Have any candidates for public office spoken at a function of the organization? If so, what are the names of the candidates, the functions at which they spoke, any materials distributed or published with regard to their appearance and the event, any video or audio recordings of the event, and a transcript of any speeches given by the candidate(s)?
- Does the organization, or has it ever, conducted voter education activities, including voter registration drives, get out the vote drives, or publish or distribute voter guides? If so:
  - What is the location, date and time of the events.
  - Who on the organization's behalf has or will conduct the voter registration or get out the vote drives?
  - How many resources (funds/employees/volunteers) are devoted to the activity?
  - Are there copies of all materials published or distributed regarding the activities, including copies of any voter guides?
- Does the organization engage in business dealings with any candidate(s) for public office or an organization associated with the candidate, such as renting office space or providing access to a membership list? If so, what is the relationship in detail and are there any contracts or other agreements documenting the business relationship?
- Does the organization attempt to influence the outcome of specific legislation?
  - Are there copies of all communications, pamphlets, advertisements, and other materials distributed by the organization regarding the legislation?
  - Does the organization conduct media advertisements lobbying for or against legislation? Are there copies of any radio, television, or internet advertisements relating to the organization's lobbying activities?
  - Does the organization directly or indirectly communicate with members of legislative bodies? If so, determine the amount and nature of the communication.

Below are indicators used when determining whether an IRC 501(c)(3), IRC 501(c)(4), (5) or (c)(6), or IRC 527 organization is engaging in (1) political campaign intervention, (2) lobbying (legislative activities), or (3) general advocacy.

Section I: Political Campaign Intervention

The following are indicators of political campaign intervention:

| A. | Is there a "candidate" for "public office?" This is an individual who: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Offers himself, or</li> <li>• Is proposed by others</li> <li>• As a contestant for elective public office, whether national, state, or local public office.</li> </ul> An individual who has not yet announced an intent to seek election to public office may still be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for office. Has the individual taken sufficient steps prior to announcing an intent to seek election, so that he or she may be considered to have offered himself or herself as a candidate for public office? Have others proposed the individual as a candidate for public office, even if the individual has announced an intention of not seeking election to the office? Some action must be taken to make one a candidate, but the action need not be taken by the candidate or require his consent. This would include statements in opposition to a candidate for office, even before that candidate has necessarily declared themselves as a contestant for office. |     |    |
| B. | Is the candidate seeking an office to which he or she must be elected, as opposed to appointed? The political campaign intervention prohibition applies only to campaigns for offices to which a candidate must be elected. Factors indicating an elective public office include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The position was created by statute</li> <li>• The position is continuous</li> <li>• The position is not contractual</li> <li>• The position is for a fixed term of office</li> <li>• The office requires an oath of office</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |     |    |
| C. | Does the organization publish and/or distribute written or printed statements, including communications made on the internet, in favor of or against a candidate for public office? This includes material prepared by the organization itself or by other organizations or individuals. Do materials distributed by the organization encourage members to vote for or against a candidate?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |    |
|    | Has the organization made oral statements in support of or in opposition                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |     |    |

| E. | Candidate Forums: The presentation of public forums for candidates to speak or debate is not in and of itself prohibited political campaign intervention, but may be a permissible method of educating the public (See Rev. Rul. 66-256; Rev. Rul. 74-574; Rev. Rul. 86-95). All the facts and circumstances must be considered and the presence or absence of one factor is not determinative. Consider the following factors when determining whether the forum is operated in a manner that may constitute prohibited campaign intervention or a permissible educational event: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Does the organization operate the forum in a manner indicating bias or preference for one candidate or candidates over others, such as through biased questioning?</li> <li>• Has the organization indicated support for or opposition to a candidate (e.g., such as when the candidate is introduced)?</li> <li>• Does the organization invite only candidates who share the same position as the organization to participate?</li> <li>• Does the organization provide an equal opportunity for all candidates to participate?</li> <li>• Does the organization provide equal amounts of time for each candidate to answer questions and express their views?</li> <li>• Are questions prepared and presented by a nonpartisan, independent panel or moderator?</li> <li>• Does the moderator comment on questions or otherwise make comments that imply approval or disapproval of a candidate?</li> <li>• Does the organization make statements that the views expressed are those of the candidates and not of the organization, and/or that the organization does not endorse any candidate or viewpoint?</li> <li>• Do the topics discussed cover a broad range of issues that are of interest to the public?</li> <li>• Are the candidates asked to agree or disagree with positions, agendas, platforms, or statements of the organization, indicating prohibited campaign intervention?</li> </ul> |  |  |
| F. | Candidate Appearances: Has a candidate spoken at an official function of the organization in his or her personal capacity or capacity as a political candidate? Depending on the facts and circumstances an organization may invite political candidates to speak at its events without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status (See Rev. Rul. 2007-41). When determining if prohibited political campaign intervention occurred, consider the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Was the candidate invited to speak at the organization's event in his or her capacity as a political candidate?</li> <li>• Did the organization provide an equal opportunity to participate to political candidates seeking the same office? Rul. 2007-41) The candidate's presence at a public event, such as a lecture, concert, or worship service does not by itself indicate the organization is engaged in prohibited political campaign intervention. The following factors should be considered when determining if prohibited political intervention occurred: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Is the candidate publicly recognized by the organization or a representative of the organization during the event as a candidate for public office?</li> <li>• Did the organization clearly indicate the capacity in which the candidate is appearing and does not mention the individual's political candidacy or the upcoming election in any communications announcing the candidate's attendance at the event?</li> <li>• Is the individual chosen to speak solely for reasons other than his or her candidacy, such as their status as a public figure aside from being a political candidate, the individual currently holds or previously held a public office, is considered an expert in a non-political field, is a celebrity, or has led a distinguished military, legal or public service career.</li> <li>• Has any campaign activity occurred in connection with the candidate's attendance?</li> </ul> |  |  |

Subject: A Couple Items

I just got off our quarterly meeting with Appeals and wanted to raise a couple issues to make sure we are all on the same page. I'm raising with you because I am not familiar enough with your organization to know where I should be going, and at least with the second item, I think you do need to be aware.

Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations

2. During the meeting I gave them a heads up that, in the next few months we believe they will get a lot of business from our TPs regarding denials on 501 (c)(4) applications. I explained the issue is whether they are primarily involved in social welfare activities and whether their political intervention activities, along with other non-social welfare activities mean they don't meet the c4 requirements. I explained the issue was very sensitive and visible and there is a lot of interest—Congress, press, political groups, you name it. I personally have been up to the Hill at least 8 times this past year to explain the complexities of the rules—they are not black and white and they are not always intuitive. I offered a general tutorial session (non-case-related) on the law and the complexities because—as I pointed out—this is a new issue driven by a recent Supreme Court case expanding spending in elections to corporations, and a desire of some to make the expenditures without having their names show up on Federal Election Reports. The fact that these orgs can do some of this activity and still be a c4 further complicates the issue. I told them this is a place where we have worked very hard to be consistent and have all our cases worked by one group, and suggested they might want to do something similar. (PS we are under audit by TIGTA because of allegations of political bias on these cases) If I were you, this is definitely something I'd want to be aware of and have a high level person overseeing and reporting regularly to me. You were in TEGE long enough to understand how dangerous what we do can be.

From the call, I could tell you have a lot of acting folks who will be coming and going over the next year—I feel that pain. But, from my perspective, that only makes high level involvement more imperative. If you think it would be useful to have a meeting on this—let me know.

Hope this doesn't sound like I'm trying to run your shop—have enough trouble with my own. (-

Attachments: SCR report Table 2010 Final.doc

Please find attached a copy of the SCR chart for cases in EO Technical for the period ending April 28, 2010.

Of note, we added one new SCR concerning 2 Tea Party cases that are being worked here in DC. Currently, there are 13 Tea Party cases out in EO Determinations and we are coordinating with them to provide direction as to how to develop those cases based on our development of the ones in DC. We also closed one significant case last month --

6/02/1 -- 6/03

No, since it is with Hilary now. I will do it on our chart and update the file name.

Thanks for the reminder.

Attached are the June SCRs for July updates. Please send to me by COB July 22nd.

Send with track changes and update the estimated closure date if necessary.

Thanks, Darla

| CASE OR ISSUE SUMMARY:These organizations are "advocacy organizations," and although are separately organized, they appear to be part of a larger national political movement that may be involved in political activities. These types of advocacy organizations are followed closely in national newspapers (such as The Washington Post) almost on a regular basis and have also become the subject of congressional inquiries. Cincinnati has in its inventory a number of applications from these types of organizations that applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as educational organizations and from organizations that applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations. |  |                                                                                               |  |

CURRENT SIGNIFICANT ACTIONS ON CASE:

A. Applications Pending in EO Technical:

(1) 6103 - Closed FTE on 05/26/10 for failure to respond to a development letter.

(2) 6103 501(c)(4) - Open

EOT met with Counsel on August 10, 2011 to discuss further development of the case, and Counsel returned the case to EOT for additional development. The applicant submitted a response to the second development letter. The organization notified EOT that it has retained counsel who requested additional time to supplement its response to the second development letter. EOT granted the request and the new deadline to supplement its response to the development letter is May 15, 2012. After not receiving a response, the POA told the TLS assigned to the case that the organization was satisfied with the information previously submitted and would not be providing any supplemental materials and will wait for the Service's determination. EOT Group 1 forwarded a draft proposed denial to Sharon Light (technical advisor to the EO Director) for review. The draft proposed denial is still in review.

(3) 6103 - Closed FTE on 04/04/12 for failure to respond to a development letter.

Coordination between HQ and Cincinnati is continuing regarding information letters to applicants seeking exemption under §§ 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4). Additionally, EOT reviewed approximately 160 cases from EOD to assist in determining the types of activities in which these organizations may be engaging. EOT continues to assist EOD with development of these cases.

(5) 6103 - Closed

EOD sent EOT the case file for a section 501(c)(4) applicant 6103 to review its proposed favorable determination. EOT and EOG reviewed the file to assist EOD with the determination. EOT returned the case to EOD to be developed as part of the bucketing process established in Cincinnati.

(5) 6103 - Open

After meeting with Judy Kindell (technical advisor to the EO Director), it was determined that EOT would draft a new proposed denial. The case is being handled in EOT as a technical assistance to EOD.

- EOT is working approximately 9 other advocacy application cases in the office.

| CASE OR ISSUE SUMMARY:The various "tea party" organizations are separately organized, but appear to be a part of a national political movement that may be involved in political activities. The "tea party" organizations are being followed closely in national newspapers (such as The Washington Post) almost on a regular basis. Cincinnati is holding three applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as educational organizations and approximately twenty-two applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations. Two organizations that we believe may be "tea party" organizations already have been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(4). EOT has not seen the case files, but are requesting copies of them. The issue is whether these organizations are involved in campaign intervention or, alternatively, in nonexempt political activity. |                                                                                              |

| CASE OR ISSUE SUMMARY:The various "tea party" organizations are separately organized, but appear to be a part of a national politically conservative movement that may be involved in political activities. The "tea party" organizations are being followed closely in national newspapers (such as The Washington Post) almost on a daily basis. Cincinnati is holding three applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as educational organizations and ten applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations. Two organizations that might be "tea party" organizations already have been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(4), and one as a (c)(3) also may be a tea party case, but EOT is checking the case file in Cincy. The issue is whether these organizations are involved in campaign intervention or, alternatively, in nonexempt political activity. |  |                                                                                                                                                               |
| CURRENT SIGNIFICANT ACTIONS ON CASE:A development letter has been sent to the 501(c)(3) applicant in EOT, and a development letter to the 501(c)(4) applicant in EOT is being prepared. Steve,

We are going to have these cases assigned to Liz Hofacre. Liz reports to Joseph Herr in Brenda Melahn's area. After she gets the cases, who in EOT should she contact to coordinate development?

Steve,

None of these cases have been assigned. They have been sitting in our Screening Group waiting for guidance from EOT. I will discuss with Area Managers to find out who we will have work these cases and will get back with you. Thanks.

We are working on the 2 Tea Party cases here in EOT. One development letter has already been issued to the (c)(3) applicant and a development letter is being prepared for the (c)(4) applicant. I understand that you have a number of these cases in Cincy. It may not be a bad idea to coordinate with the individual(s) who have the cases in Cincy so that you can start developing them.

If you have the names of the agents and manager with these cases, please let me know. We should at least have a call and see how we can work together.

What about the SCR for the Tea Party cases? I believe that Chip has the cases. Can you or Chip make up the SCR, and confer with Cincy to include their information in the SCR? They have a few cases, and I believe that some have even been granted exemption. Thanks.

| CASE OR ISSUE SUMMARY:The various "tea party" organizations are separately organized, but appear to be a part of a national political movement that may be involved in political activities. The "tea party" organizations are being followed closely in national newspapers (such as The Washington Post) almost on a regular basis. Cincinnati is holding three applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code as educational organizations and approximately twenty-two applications from organizations which have applied for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(4) as social welfare organizations. Two organizations that we believe may be "tea party" organizations already have been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(4). EOT has not seen the case files, but are requesting copies of them. The issue is whether these organizations are involved in campaign intervention or, alternatively, in nonexempt political activity. |                                                                                               |

- Sensitive/Special case-related issues (Same Cases as Last Briefing as Resolution hasn't been reached):

1.  6103

2. ACORN: These are advocacy cases (similar to Tea Parties) where we have proposed denial and QA has agreed. There are two cases that are involved and both currently reside in EO Tech for review of the denial letters—cases have been in EO Tech for at least six months. At some point (months from now), the cases will ultimately return to the group to issue the denial letters and communicate with the applicants. When the denial letters are ultimately issued, media attention will almost certainly follow.

We can also modify the heading re: Commissioner elevation to be more clear - what it is intended to capture is whether it is being elevated in the current month.

Thanks—even if we go with a 4 on the Tea Party cases, they may want to argue they should be 3s, so it would be great if we can get there without saying the only reason they don't get a 3 is political activity.

I'll get with Nan Marks on the 6103 piece.

Tea Party - Cases in Determs are being supervised by Chip Hull at each step - he reviews info from TPs, correspondence to TPs, etc. No decisions are going out of Cincy until we go all the way through the process with the c3 and c4 cases here. I believe the c4 will be ready to go over to Judy soon.

Subject: RE: SCR Table for Jan. 2011

Thanks--a couple comments

1. Tea Party Matter very dangerous. This could be the vehicle to go to court on the issue of whether Citizen's United overturning the ban on corporate spending applies to tax exempt rules. Counsel and Judy Kindell need to be in on this one please needs to be in this. Cincy should probably NOT have these cases--Holly please see what exactly they have please.

Redacted by the
Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations

Also, please make sure estimated due dates and next step dates are after the date you send these. On a couple of these I can't tell whether stuff happened recently or not.

Question--if you have an estimated due date and the person doesn't make it, how is that reflected? My concern is that when Exam first did these, they just changed the date so we always looked current, rather than providing a history of what occurred. perhaps it would help to sit down with me and Sue Lehman--she helped develop the report they now use.

 Determined letters to him for review originally sent first ltr then he asked for files too in reviewing ltr worked w/ Lig Hefere Steve B. reviewed first few w/ them, then said he didn't need to what was issue - political activity activity test, not money where comes from never asked for donors or 1024
 B described his C4 experience explained standard - 50% political activity ltr - people would call him w/ questions b/c his name was on Gold

he said to work like normal case he did not work on boko cases he says he knew orga bot called tea party - so many cases in cases that name did not match what they did

he did not help develop boko criteria - evolved

ly modified it as based on his comments originally called tea party cases until Roisnady said call them advocacy

he worked on these cases for about a year transferred cases - we requested 1c3, 1c4, he worked ~~trans~~ sent development ~~the~~

1 responded

c3- 1 closed fte - embezzlement

org said would repph under c4 requested another c3, believes also closed fte open case w/ Hilary Boehausen why didn't ly close any cases?

why didn't Roisnady send cases here

Chip raised donor question asked here recently role: first involved last summer reviewed guidelinesheet, so did judy revising guidelinesheet goals: criteria came to his attention around briefing no involvement in developing criteria understanding of the emerging issue: getting citizens involved & holding reps accountable developing briefing: contacted Cindy, maybe Cor Bell too he is to search email for how to present criteria

note - A large primary Justin reviewed some, not all

Steve Grodnitzky

* Steve's spreadsheet case tracking

10/11 - coordinator advocacy cases in EOJ, not just Cincy advocacy cases no real other involvement - tangential issue - political activity, "advocating specific position" issues in the cases - C3 and C4 - political activity to some extent - too much, not sufficient C4 social welfare activity?

SCIS he has stop mid 2011 transferred cases to Hilary criteria Determs using - not sure he was ever aware his involvement ended 9/11

he did not talk to anyone in Cinoy originally referred to as tea party cases later advocacy

HP

role - met w/ Steve 3/23/12 he was concerned about (1) whether we were on
- track in handling inventory - delays, nature questions, (2) hearing prep is tech advisor to Reg commish not been involved

take a fresh look

first became involved just on guidelines back & forth inquiry - April 23

pre-look @ this - one agent - Stephen best lawyer than others

expressing no to 5 & 15 (states org, political activity) but other evidence says they're doing it got them about half the files

no (files w/ evidence) loss

App not trying to misrepresent confusion on all sides every request for add'l time granted why guidelines so hard? - lack published guidance, very fact oriented

HPI

options to address inventory bring all cases to DC - not enough people, not

John Shaefer

role: manager of screening group

2/25/10 - email from employee - issues seen in newspaper, "high profile"

consistency is his big issue

he forwarded to Cindy (thru Sharon Camarillo) not first one he had but first one brought to his attention issue in paper - political 527 he holds regular group meetings to discuss issues to ensure consistency supported by Jack Koester screening group - can be rotated out 120 & 130 correct to be reassigned or manager if unhappy can move employee

all volunteers, higher graded not assigned based on expertise, don't specialize searching for additional cases or tests? he wasn't involved

HP

he has paper on first one but not later ones

3 grade 13 so he relies on to review his review process not as in-depth because higher graded lolo: convenience not sure if date first became aware of wasn't involved in revising criteria or developing initial criteria used lolo's experience to determine what goes to advocacy group didn't just look for "tea party" looked at constitution - also legislative vs. campaign - (title was not criteria) used these activities & supporting docs to decide - not title test lolo updates: as updated, distributed out via email things goes to all agents high profile b/c of climate we are in & activities in misplative - how he would describe case look there if - some only tests of info so questions to verify

HP1

IRSR0000160037

how cases get from screeners to certain group? - worksheets, multiple specialty groups concerns about the process? no not from his standpoint how cases referred to? advocacy cases

* what boxes checked off on screening checklist?

HP19

IRSR0000168036

Liz Hefner

her role: April 2010 became involved managed by Joseph Hess, identified as emerging issue b/c # of cases they were seeing if met criteria for advocacy - at that time identifying tea party, 9/12, patients

says some screeners did word searches for these words lots - just evolving at that time she sent out first pre summer 2010

she was primarily responsible for constructing it involved from top project went back & forth w/ 3 test Bowling on 10/6 for Woodell consolidate top & emerging issues approval process - somewhat informal Steve, Jon, Cindy to some extent usually came from above

how refer to cases - advocacy, tea party - 2 primary ways referred to because # of cases identified w/ that name

HP 21

IRSR0000168039

got a "glut" of them 4001 50 when she left media attention, high profit worked w/ Steve Do Chip Hall to send out this email development but a fax file she implemented then changed letter & sent out process did not work well - turnaround too slow did not send out 2nd letter on any of these cases sent response to Chip

she is not sure what happened - no further development - she left she estimates working about 30 cases w/ Chip - all open when she left for QA; not closed

she was still getting phone calls from top until about 6 months ago never told to stop working cases

HP 21

IRS R0000168040

Joseph Herr

his role: initially as manager upheld a 'round' some times creating emerging issues groups - focus on consistency when new things come up new issues - foreclosure assistance seeing advocacy cases come in at this volume was different started in 2010, not sure of month his group kind of thing group - what was applicable below, what were the 'issues'?; make recommendations - who should work, etc.

not sure who made decision to create that group give it advocacy case usually advocacy cases focused on one issue - these different w/ focus or wide variety of issues searching for add'l cases that already went through - he was not involved not tracking sheet then, just list before working the cases

holo criteria: only criteria used to id. the cases?

he developed holo, he made suggestions, he worked close by/Blenda Melson

holo work in progress when this came up at the end of the first T.A. or there is in the end this group

HP 27

IRS0000169041

secondary screening - when did it start?

template emerging issues & procedures then group realigned 9/2010 & this went to Steve Boutling group, Ly followed him concerns about process to work the cases? - no, influx of stuff, had to figure out what going on timeliness of assistance from EOS? normal experience re: timeframe, lots of work & limited resources

how refer to cases? initially tea party, then advocacy to referred to as tea party? identifies "party" usually refers to political party in tax law circles (527) John Salvo emphasized 527s

why group realigned? other management reasons - he had several 6 part; wanted those cases in one location so cases did not stay w/

HF 23

IRSR0000168042

8/7/12 JBSA interviews

Jack Koester - screening group got 1st advocacy case C4 appeared to be significant amount of political activity - thought development needed - "527 implications"

"ensure consistency" political environment highly charged, high profile alerted his manager - John Shafer via email

3/20/10

Case sent to DC

found several other cases coming in he was not involved in search for other cases

Bobo - he has seen it

Bobo changes come through email when he sees case w/ political implications he is going to look at that.

other guidance used imm, code

Bobo "primary guidance" unless case goes

HP24

IRSR0000168043

if get case not tea party in name but has political he would send for further development or talk to manager if further implication screening checklist

check other - write in bold advocacy or could check "political issues - sensitive issues" how does case get from screening to correct group? - depends on case in category in tests

Carl Beckbridge - admin in screening - he gets it to next step out of 62 & into 72 he thinks referred to cases as politically sensitive he was not involved in develop or revise criteria

HP 25

IRSR0000168044

Steve Bowling

manager of group Aug 2010

inherited maintenance of bto list at that time get updates, send to coordinator to send out to everyone updates from upper management

he did not develop the criteria for bto cases got transferred to his group w/ coordinator

by Hofacre initially, Ron Bell then took over 10/2010 cases or hold them - upper management - Sharon Cornille awaiting further guidance can't remember when hold to start working them tracking sheet - he doesn't know when it started end 2011, begin 2012 - rejected suggestion of having cases where there was precedent be part of bto emerging issue - language added to make that clear secondary screening - one of his folks did that should be documented in case bto go back to these criteria we said were being used when briefed Lois he does not recognize for "template guidance questions" - group came together to come up with these questions - used to help w/ development letters

HP22

guidesheet - he believes they referred to it

EO's review fall 2011 - he does not recall that at all decision to hold cases early 2012 - thinks came from EO's group managers usually don't review before sent

"270 day rule" - is informed? he does not think so if case closed he reviews everything how do managers monitor age of cases? various reports group level, individual agents

AI status once dev. ltr sent no special training for advocacy team support by EO Technical - he recalls writing for guidance timelines could have been better - took time to get guidance he left group or detail April/May 2012

no more work on these cases

HP2

IRSR0000168046

Ron Bell

June 2010 - promotion moved to emerging issues group was doing a review.

took over for Liz Hefner (10/10)

told EOTJ had enough cases

he held them - waiting guidance from EOTJ told by Liz & David - verbally he thinks, not email started moving again 11/11 when guidance came in Stephen Beck took lead right before Xmas holo - initial wording was already established when he came on changed a couple times he was involved in talking about verbiage he sent to Steve Ron was "scribe"

he, Steve, Stephen involved in par. change they were getting too many things eg. advocating against puppy mill

* Ron the search email for all holo updates email & send to me briefing description - "these were the cases we'd get"

HP 28

IRSR0000168047

secondary screening - screeners sent to him if they thought they saw advocacy he tried to follow what was on Colo he read apps & looked at websites public policy issues - close call a lot of times tried to screen things out of advocacy case bucket documented w/ chronological entry started March 2012
 Steve's decision he thinks checklist if not kept in group & sent to full development

tracking sheet - had been started when he took over Liz may have created it he updated it as he screened or as he was sent paper cases from field interaction w/ RD - he was limited didn't work like he did w/ Chip - RD had enough cases; he'd ask for updates or guidance concerns - he likes what we're doing now new feature low from 600 make sure get it right, consistent felt bad for customers

he did think guidance took too long - he was getting lots of calls referred to as tea party initially, then changed to Be more sensitive to labels

HP29

IRSR0000160048

Stephen Cook

his role - Dec 2011 he went to group 7822 & was asked to lead group he assigned cases to team members, hold mtgs. of team, elaborating issues & questions to manager reviewed development ltrs & gave feedback also developed his own cases team to develop questions

has went out previous to effort to develop qs - used prior ltrs, guidelines from EOT, came up w/ own questions - goal was to come up w/ template ltr but on 2/20/12 but never went out - those went up to Steve Bowling & he sent to Cindy (Jabor March 26/12)

* email w/ template questions that went up tracking sheet already existed when he came to group cases added by recording screener w/ approval of manager that it was a primary case - Stephen got folders out on sheet

CCR documents recording screening - if not one of those cases gets back to normal inventory advocacy status report done by Stephen he did whenever there was need - only a few done

HP36

2 team mty. - reports

* Stephen to send to me

he took over to start moving cases, had guidance from ext concern w/ working of cases? no refers to? advocacy cases do - had input or last update (pre DC revision) list evolving more cases being included, different types of org coming in w/ political advocacy - lobby or waste party, later occupy groups no longer working on cases, when Washington became involved

do's - status briefing - want to be included

Tyler Chumney

March 2012 became acting manager of emerging issues group

Nov 11 - Mar 12 Staff assistant to Cindy Thomas - so aware of issue thru mtgs but not directly involved robot advocacy cases - Stephen coordinating when Tyler came on as manager, worked w/ him recording screening - Por Bell - came to Tyler if he had questions how document review?

"53 sheet" - fill out & give to agent if needs further work workload review for evaluative ~~purposes~~ purposes - if manager agrees w/ agent - goes to processing to close - closing sheet given to processing - sign off paper (8676), change status if needed. only manager can put in status 37 how monitor aging cases? BOBI report - broken down by agent can see control date plus unassigned inventory report - can see special case categories & control date

Subject: advocacy cases - next steps - revised

Below is a slightly revised version of the next steps - I have reflected that Faye and Janine are handling bucket 1 and revised the discussion of the bucketing process going forward.

Set forth below is a summary of the bucketing results. This email outlines the next steps to be taken with regard to each bucket.

83 c/3s bucketed:

16 approval
16 limited development
23 general development
28 likely denial

199 c/4s bucketed:

65 approval
48 limited development
56 general development
30 likely denial

Bucket 1:

C4s

Faye and Janine will make calls to all c4 applicants who were sent development letters but have not yet responded before favorable determination letters are sent using the script already provided. Faye and Janine will send the favorable c4 determinations using the letter already provided.

C3s

Faye and Janine will make calls to make calls to all c3 applicants who were sent development letters but have not yet responded before favorable determination letters are sent. The phone script already provided will be modified accordingly by Faye and Janine. Faye and Janine will send the favorable c3 determinations. Addendum 1 to the c4 letter will be added to our standard favorable c3 letter. The second addendum to the c4 letter referencing the section of the pub re: political activity is not necessary.

Donor Information

HP-40
IRSR0000168059

C3s and c4s that provided names of their donors in response to an additional information request from the IRS will be sent a letter (to be sent in a separate email) indicating that the request was made in error and we have destroyed that information. This applies to applicants that provided the information in response to a development request specifically requesting a list of all donors, a development request to detail all sources of revenue or any other additional development request by the IRS. It does not apply to organizations that provided this information in their application. In cases meeting this criteria, this letter must be sent before the favorable determination is sent.

Quality Review

In light of the small number of disagreed cases, Quality will now shift from 100% mandatory review of c4s to reviewing one of every 10 c4 cases in bucket 1. All c3s will be sent to Quality, but this will be reduced to a sampling based on the results of the review. Disagreed cases will be discussed by QA, the individuals who completed the bucketing worksheets and/or reconciliation sheet, and Sharon to reach a mutual decision re: the appropriate action on the case. The Determs bucketer will get the complete file back from Donna so they can discuss with the DC bucketer. If a mutual decision cannot be reached, the case will be elevated to me for decision.

Bucket 2:

Jodi, Faye, Grant, Janine, and Carly will draft the development letters consisting of the questions listed by the bucketers on the bucketing worksheets. Each letter is to be reviewed by Hilary, Matthew or Andy before it is sent based on the following partnering:

Andy -- Faye (all c/3 cases)

Matthew -- Carly and Grant (c/4 cases)

Hilary -- Jodi and Janine (c/4 cases)

Hilary and Matthew should consult with Andy if they have any questions.

Caveat: In light of the size of the files and the time it would take to get another specialist familiar with the files, 6103 and 6103 will remain assigned to Joseph. He will send the development letters for those two cases to Andy for review.

The DC reviewer will provide any comments or a response indicating no comments within 2 business days. If a response is not received within two business days, the drafter of the development letter should notify Sharon.

If an applicant was previously sent a development letter but has not yet responded, the individual assigned to write the development letter will first call the applicant to direct them to disregard the prior development letter and that a new letter will be coming (modifying phone script provided for bucket 1 cases). The new development letter should also contain such a statement (language can be pulled from first addendum to favorable c4 letter).

The assigned Determinations specialist should email the assigned DC reviewer the development letter. In reviewing the letter, the DC reviewer will look at the application on TEDS, the bucketing worksheets (and reconciliation worksheet, if applicable) and the organization's website (if available).

Quality will review the cases once a response has been received and the Determinations specialist has reached a decision on the case - just like a regular mandatory review case. Initially, all bucket 2 cases will be sent to Quality, but this will be reduced to a sampling based on the results of the review. I will send a message to the team when we are ready to shift to a sampling review.

Bucket 3:

Same as bucket 2 except the individual assigned the case will have to draft the questions. Bucket 2 cases should be started before bucket 3 cases. Given the number of c3s in this bucket, c3 cases may have to be assigned to more than one person.

Bucket 4:

Cindy will send me the 10 oldest c4 cases. Judy and Justin will draft a development letter for each case. Tom Miller will review the development letter. Judy and Justin will send the development letter to Ron Bell who will assign the case to either Mitch or Joseph -whichever is available at that time. Mitch and Joseph will send the development letters and coordinate with Judy/Justin on reviewing the responses.

Joseph is in the process of determining whether c3s in this bucket could qualify under c4 and, if so, is contacting the applicant to inform them that we do not believe they qualify under c3 but may under c4 and instruct them to submit 1024 if they are interested in pursuing c4 status.

Bucketing Going Forward:

Mitch and Joseph will each review and bucket all new receipts that meet the definition of advocacy case on the BOLO using the bucketing worksheets. Mitch and Joseph will hold a reconciliation discussion regarding any cases they place in different buckets. If they cannot reach agreement about the appropriate bucket for a case, they will elevate that case to Sharon and the three of them will have a reconciliation meeting.

Tracking Going Forward:

Ron Bell will be responsible for tracking the advocacy cases going forward. He will use a spreadsheet that combines the original tracking sheet created by Determinations and the spreadsheet created by Sharon and may modify it to add new columns as cases move through the process. Everyone should notify Ron when a case is sent to their manager for closing.

These were the issues that Susan and I highlighted when reviewing the development letters. Overall, there were 59 letters that had one or more of these questions, of which 25 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name. I have provided the same breakdown for each question:

- A. Requests Names of Donors (29 total, 15 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- B. Provide a list of all issues that are important to your organization. Indicate your position regarding such issue. (11 total, 2 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- C. In list of questions soliciting details about activity asked about the following: (1) the roles and activities of audience and participants other than members in the activity and (2) what type of conversations and discussions did your members and participants have during the activity. (1 total, 0 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- D. Asks whether officer, director, etc. has run or will run for public office (44 total, 19 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- E. Requests political affiliation of officer, director, speakers, candidates supported, etc. or otherwise refers to relationship with identified political party-related organizations (7 total, 2 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- F. Requests info re employment other than for org, including hours worked (11 total, 4 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)
- G. Letter requests information regarding activities of another org - not just relationship of other org to applicant (4 total, 2 did not have either "Tea Party," "Patriots" or "9/12" in their name)

COORDINATING TEA PARTY CASES Update Memorandum

This memorandum is to bring the file up to date concerning Tea Party Cases in Cincinnati. Exempt Organizations (HQ) is working Tea Party applications in coordination with Cincinnati. The bulk of the cases are under the jurisdiction of Cincinnati. However, HQ is also working a few applications in the Washington, D.C. office. Currently, HQ is working one IRC 501(c)(3) application and one IRC 501(c)(4) application. A development letter was sent to both organizations and replies have been received. The replies are being evaluated. These two Tea Party cases are the subject of an SCR, updated monthly.

Cincinnati is supplying HQ with copies of the Tea Party files they have identified, along with proposed development letters. The letters are reviewed and comments are made by telephone to the agent in Cincinnati, which then mails out the development letters. Mr. Grodnitzky, Acting Manager EO Technical, and the undersigned looked at the first proposed letter and discussed possible comments. The undersigned telephoned Mrs. Hofacre in Cincinnati and passed along the suggested changes. Mrs. Hofacre has continued to fax copies of the administrative files to the undersigned and has emailed copies of proposed development letters. She also mails the revised development letters to the organizations. Mr. Grodnitzky advised that he did not need to review further development letters. The undersigned continues to review Tea Party administrative files and the proposed development letters, and provide Mrs. Hofacre with suggestions.

There have been three cases assigned to me, with control numbers, here at HQ. They are (1) 6103 (an IRC 501(c)(3) application), (2) 6103 (an IRC 501(c)(4) application), and (3) 6103 (an IRC 501(c)(3) application). The 6103 case was closed as failure to respond to the development letter. 6103 and 6103 have both responded to first development letters, and second development letters may have to be sent to both organizations. Another case in HQ, 6103 assigned to Janet Gitterman in Group 2, is similar to the other cases in HQ, but not initially identified as a "Tea Party" case. A proposed exemption letter under IRC 501(c)(4) is currently being reviewed by Siri Buller, the PACI expert in Group 1.

The attached list shows the names of the Tea Party cases currently being worked in Cincinnati, with development letters being reviewed by the undersigned before being sent out. The cases marked with an asterisk (*) are applications under IRC 501(c)(3). All others are applications under IRC 501(c)(4).

- (1) The column entitled Cinn. Info. Ltr. Date shows the date on the proposed development letters, usually the date the letter was sent to HQ.
- (2) The column entitled Ltr.&File Reviewed indicates that the proposed development letter and the file was reviewed in HQ.
- (3) The column entitled Ltr.&File Discussed indicates that the HQ comments were passed along to Cincinnati.

Re: COORDINATING TEA PARTY CASES Update Memorandum

- (4) The column entitled Reply Reviewed indicates that the applicant has replied to the development letter, and that the reply was evaluated in HQ. Three organizations have replied to the development letters, and the responses are being evaluated.
- (5) The column entitled Reply Discussed indicates that the reply was discussed with Cincinnati.

Joel,

This e-mail is to inform you of an audit we plan to conduct of the IRS's process for reviewing applications for tax exemption by potential section 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations, which will be included in our Fiscal Year 2013 Annual Audit Plan. Currently, we do not have an associated audit number. Once we receive a number, I will provide it to you.

To develop an understanding of the controls in the area, we will be conducting a limited amount of planning to develop the appropriate scope for this audit. We will follow the established process of coordinating interviews and requests through the appropriate points of contact within the Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division's Exempt Organizations function. Once we have completed our planning, we will prepare and issue an engagement letter. If you have any questions or comments, please feel free to contact me or the research team mentioned below.

Absent:

Karl Beckerich
Rochelle Monford

— = Redacted by the Permanent
Subcommittee on Investigations

John opened the meeting and:

- Reminded everyone to take the Survey 2010.
- Karl will give out inventory reports weekly from the EDS EO NOCLR system.
- John discussed and the attendees reviewed the inventory reports generated from EDS EO NOCLR.
- John discussed control dates on [REDACTED] Give back the case to John if the case is assigned in error with the original submission date.
- John reminded everyone that correct grades of cases effects promotions to GS-12 and GS 13 per the business objects.
- Close TEDS cases via status 74 and notify Karl if you receive a case that has only pages 1 and 12 in the file. He will notify Sonya A. in processing.
- John suggested everyone add LINUS to their repertoire.
- Apprise John of the case when you send a case to AP to have page 12 signed when IRS has prepared page 12.
- John handed out and discussed the screening totals for March of 2010.

Report Exhibits - Page 000535

- John discussed the focus of our next screening workshop scheduled for Wednesday, April 28, 2010. We will focus on a couple of issues. They are:

"03" closures and what constitutes an "03" closure.

Processing IP cases and reiterate the IP rules.

Joan, Jack and Nancy found numerous cases that should have been placed in the IP inventory, but were sent to the 51 inventory in error. They also found that cases were being sent by IP agents to the 51 inventory in error.

John stated to also emphasize to leave the AP/IP worksheets in the case file during the workshop and to assemble cases correctly on FTE cases.

- John stated the control date as of today was 3/23/10. We had 1309 cases to be assigned and that overtime was helping in getting the dates in line with our goals.

Gary Muthert gave a presentation on "Tea Party Cases." He stated that 3 cases have been approved including one as a 501(c)(3). We are waiting guidance from HQ on these cases. John Shafer is holding these cases in his office if you identify one. Give case information to Gary Muthert as well.

Renee gave an update on expedite cases.

John asked the group if there was anything else. No other issues raised.

Meeting Adjourned.

Cindy,

Please see the attached memo setting forth procedures regarding the BOLO list. The procedures provide that any new entries and updates to the BOLO list must first be approved by the Emerging Issues group manager, then the EO Determinations manager and finally the EO R&A director. Please share this information with your staff.

Director, EO Rulings and Agreements

SUBJECT: Be On the Look Out (BOLO) Spreadsheet

The purpose of this memorandum is to set forth the procedures to be used with regard to the Be On the Look Out (BOLO) spreadsheet.

Abusive Transactions and Fraud Issues, Emerging Issues, and Coordinated Processing<sup>1</sup> cases will all be tracked on a single combined Be On the Look Out (BOLO) spreadsheet.

- (a) The spreadsheet is maintained to enable EO Determinations specialists to be informed about the current status of abusive transactions and fraud issues, emerging issues, coordination, and watch issues, and to process cases in a consistent manner.
- (b) Abusive Transactions and Fraud Issues, Emerging Issues, and Coordinated Processing will each occupy a separate tab of the spreadsheet.
- (c) A fourth tab, the "Watch List" will list recent developments such as changes in the law, current events, or specific issues that EO Determinations management believes has the potential to impact the filing of applications.

The Emerging Issues coordinator will maintain the combined spreadsheet including:

- (a) Creating original entries for new emerging issues and entering them on the appropriate tab of the spreadsheet.
- (b) Creating original entries for new coordinated processing cases and entering them on the appropriate tab of the spreadsheet.
- (c) Receiving issue updates from the abusive transaction and fraud group and entering them on the appropriate tab of the spreadsheet.

<sup>1</sup> Coordinated Processing cases are cases that present similar issues and thus are to be handled by a single team or group in order to facilitate consistency.

(d) Receiving "Watch List" updates from senior management and entering them on the appropriate tab of the spreadsheet.

(e) Updating the spreadsheet as necessary.

All original entries and updates to the BOLO must be approved by the group manager of the Emerging Issues Coordinator. The group manager of the Emerging Issues Coordinator must obtain the approval of the Manager, EO Determinations to all original entries and updates to the BOLO. The Manager, EO Determinations must obtain the approval of the Director, EO Rulings & Agreements to all original entries and updates to the BOLO.

Only after the approval of the group manager of the Emerging Issues Coordinator, the Manager, EO Determinations and Director, EO Rulings & Agreements have been obtained will EO Determinations groups be notified of new or updated Watch List items, Potential Abusive Transaction and Fraud Issues, Emerging Issues, and Coordinated Processing cases through single e-mail alerts. The Emerging Issues coordinator is responsible for issuing all e-mail alerts after all of the required approvals have been obtained.

The most recent updated copy of the spreadsheet will be posted on the EO Determinations shared drive folder.

The content of this memorandum will be incorporated in IRM 7.20.4.

For that part--Nan you're it!

Miller has asked for a briefing on our "review" of the referral process and any follow-up we have done. I believe he is referring to the review you guys were doing of the referral write-ups. I'm guessing doing anything about them has been side-tracked while you all work on c4 political activity? In any event, can someone put together a short paper explaining the issue, how it came to our attention, what we've done to see the depth and breadth and what our plans/actions are for making better? I'd want to know how many files you've looked at and what trends you see. I'd like by Tuesday if possible--let me know who is taking it and if that date works.

Fine. He took lots of notes and said we'd have several other opportunities to talk. I asked Greg and Troy to stay on afterwards. I told them flat out the report felt politically motivated with some of the inflammatory descriptions. As to "political" team--he made the point that that is what the criteria now says. I suggested perhaps they use a longer sentence to describe what the team is doing and then just short hand "the team"--we'll see. As to them not seeing eye to eye with us about the orgs getting put into the buckets, I told him we couldn't win. From our perspective we couldn't just ignore information we had from other experiences regarding words or phrases, and that was born out by them saying there was political intervention in some cases they thought should have been screened. Troy then said if we had documented why the org went to full development, they would have known our reason. I then explained the assembly line aspect of screening--if we stopped to document, it would slow things down and we'd have more of a backlog, so I didn't think we'd agree to that recommendation. Greg and I had a longer conversation in general, and I think he gets what's been going on and where this sits in the middle of things. Not sure he can do a whole lot, but I did feel like he was going to go back and think about this. All we can ask for. As to referring us, I asked that they flesh out what we had done to try and get the information they asked for--email and who developed criteria. He said he didn't think he had anything on that. So, I told him when you get back, you would put a paragraph together about what we had done to try and find the email and get who developed the criteria.

I am planning to leave for the airport around 9:30. That way, I hope to be through security and able to join the 11 by phone until I have to board. You asked me to shoot you an email reminding you of the two major points you wanted to make with TIGTA:

1. The report lacks any reference to or information regarding the broader context (such as how difficult it is to determine what constitutes political activity and whether political activity is a c4's primary activity). Without this broader context, the report could appear slanted in one direction.
2. The report contains several instances of speculation lacking any support (i.e. speculation that the wait for a determination adversely impacted org's fundraising, speculation that orgs did not file required 990s while awaiting a determination because they had not engaged in any activity).

Cindy,

Thanks for the heads up. We have one Tea Party case up here - that was sent up from Determs just a few weeks ago - but had not yet heard that there were more. I think we should take a few more cases (I'd say 2) and would ask that you hold the rest until we get a sense of what the issues may be. Then when we will work with Determs in working the other cases.

FYI - I will be on maternity leave starting tomorrow. Steve will be acting as head of EO Tech.

Sharon, this case will be sent to inventory for further development. Political campaigns on behalf or in opposition to any political candidate do not promote social welfare, but an exempt 501(c)(4) may intervene in political campaigns as long as its primary activity is the promotion of social welfare and would be subject to the tax imposed by IRC 527. I will hold this case for a decision concerning this type of organization may be considered a "High Profile Case".

Part II. Activities and Operational Information (Must be completed by all applicants)

Provide a detailed narrative description of all the activities of the organization—past, present, and planned. Do not merely refer to or repeat the language in the organizational document. List each activity separately in the order of importance based on the relative time and other resources devoted to the activity. Indicate the percentage of time for each activity. Each description should include, as a minimum, the following: (a) a detailed description of the activity including its purpose and how each activity furthers your exempt purpose; (b) when the activity was or will be initiated; and (C) where and by whom the activity will be conducted.

I told him that there were several areas where the way they had provided information made the report look political. He said it isn't political. I said, I didn't think it was, but they may want to take another look because it was coming across that way. We talked a bit about the larger context of what was going on in the world--I think he got it, but we'll have to see.

As to information we can't provide--I'd rather they do the IT route--the investigatory route means they'd go out and question staff, who are already freaked. Anymore info on our referral to TIGTA that I can provide?

Yes we have a copy of the draft--but it isn't the "real" draft. It is a preliminary draft so we could start talking. That was the reason for today's conversation. Based on today, they will be revising before they send the real draft. If the email exists, we could still have IT folks check and give it to TIGTA. Holly is back Wed. She has the details. I'll get them and then perhaps you can intercede with the folks who do this work?
I had no clue until getting the draft report that no one had responded back to them. Am on my way out of here for [REDACTED] back tomorrow.

In our response, based on what we were able to find out from staff, we told them that in 2010, someone in Determs sent out an informal email to all Determs folks asking them to forward all "Tea Party" applications to another specialist. TIGTA asked for a copy of the email. We asked everyone in Determs to check their email to find it--no one could find a copy. So we told TIGTA that. Then Troy asked me if IRS could check records of emails to see if they could find it. I knew we could do some checking because it had been done in response to the Congressional re: gift tax. So, I checked around to find out what office would be responsible for that type review and referred him there. I didn't think it was my job to say no as I don't have responsibility for that office. In any event, apparently, no one responded to Troy's request. That translated into the TIGTA report saying TIGTA asked--IRS did not respond--so we are referring IRS to TIGTA Office of Investigation--pretty tough stuff, which might have been avoided if we had checked to see if the email exists anywhere.

There is nothing public about why the regs say primarily instead of exclusively.

In the old drafting files from when the regs were written, both (c)(3) and (c)(4) regs originally said primarily. During the editing process, a reviewer commented on the (c)(3) regs that the primarily language was overbroad and should be restricted, so the insubstantial wording was added. There were no similar comments or changes made to the (c)(4) regs, so we don't know what the thinking was there.

For reference, 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1) reads: Primary Activities. An organization will be regarded as "operated exclusively" for one or more exempt purposes only if it engages primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of such exempt purposes specified in section 501(c)(3). An organization will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose.

1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2) reads: Promotion of Social

Reading the discussion draft again, I think they are focused specifically on who developed the criteria noted in the June 2011 briefing paper, rather than the other iterations of the BOLO criteria (which is how I had first read the draft report). So in the draft email, I have attempted to address both issues. The June 2011 briefing paper "criteria" has been the subject of much discussion (see below) as it differed from what was on the BOLO at that time. We explained that in November when we gave comments on the timeline - Cindy asked screening manager and he asked his employees how they were interpreting/applying the BOLO's brief reference to "organizations involved with the Tea Party movement." TIGTA even interviewed one of those screening group employees who responded to the screening manager's question.

Your reading of our response to question #1 is correct. The EO Determinations Program Manager and screener manager were not aware of the specific criteria being used prior to employees providing the criteria in response to the screener manager's request in June 2011. No one in the EO management chain sanctioned the use of the four criteria listed in your question #1 below.

Thank you again for the follow-up responses. In response to question #1, you mention that EO function executive management did not sanction the use of the 1-4 criteria we listed in our original questions. You also mention that the EO function Determinations Program Manager asked for the criteria from the screener manager and the screener manager asked his employees for the specific criteria. To be clear, does this mean that the EO function Determinations Program Manager and screener manager were not aware of the specific criteria being used prior to employees providing the criteria in response to the screener manager's request? In other words, no one in the EO function management chain sanctioned the use of the criteria.

Please see answers to your follow-up questions below. Please let me know if you have any further questions or if you think a discussion would be helpful.

Holly

1. In the response to questions 2 and 3, Lois states that the manager of the screening group responded that, "The following are issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential 'tea party' case and sent to Group 7822 for secondary screening. 1. 'Tea Party', 'Patriots' or '9/12 Project' is referenced in the case file. 2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes. 3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live. 4. Statements in the case file that are critical of the how the country is being run." Does this mean that the manager of the screening group developed this criteria? If not, who created the criteria? We're trying to determine if anyone in EO function management sanctioned the use of the criteria.

EO executive management did not sanction use of 1-4 above as criteria for identifying advocacy cases. Because the BOLO only contained a brief reference to "Organizations involved with the Tea Party movement applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4)" in June 2011, I, as Acting Director of EO Rulings & Agreements, sought clarification as to the criteria being used to identify these cases in light of the diversity of applications selected under this "tea party" label (e.g., some had "tea party" in their name but others did not, some stated that they were affiliated with the "tea party" movement while others stated they were affiliated with the Democratic or Republican party, etc.). My inquiry prompted the EO Determinations Program Manager to ask the manager of the screening group what criteria were being used to label "tea party" cases ("Do the applications specify/state 'tea party'? If not, how do we know applicant is involved with the tea party movement?"). We understand that the screening group manager asked his employees how they were applying the BOLO's short-hand reference to "tea party" and was told by his employees that they included organizations meeting any of criteria 1-4 above as falling within the BOLO's reference to "tea party" organizations.

2. On the May 14, 2012 entry on the timeline, the EO function changed the additional details column to read "Concluded, in light of case law on what is educational, that "propaganda" activities should be [emphasis added] considered part of an organization's social welfare activities in analyzing whether it is primarily engaged in promoting social welfare." Earlier, you provided an e-mail from Tom Miller that states "I could not find anything, but my analysis is that propaganda activities should not be [emphasis added] included in an organization's activities that promote social welfare in analyzing whether it is primarily engaged in promoting the SW within the meaning of the regulations. Did the EO function inadvertently leave out the word 'not' in its feedback or are we misinterpreting Tom Miller's e-mail?"

I am afraid that the wording of my question to Tom has contributed to the confusion. You can see I said we were seeing inflammatory talk, which I characterized as propaganda. "Propaganda," however, is a term with legal significance. So, Tom's email went on to discuss what constitutes "propaganda" versus what is "educational," for purposes of characterizing the inflammatory talk. He says that, "Posting of some questionable or snarky articles will not undue otherwise OK material . . . the bar [for whether material is educational] is quite low." The example in his second paragraph about the Institute for Historical Review shows just how difficult it is to conclude that inflammatory talk is actually "propaganda" rather than "educational." Senior members of the team bucketing the advocacy cases discussed Tom's email in light of the inflammatory talk we were seeing and concluded that it would be considered educational under existing precedents.

3. On the May 2012 entry on the timeline, the EO function deleted our wording that the EO Technical employee was reviewing all case files and closing letters prior to issuance. Our interview write-up states that case files were being reviewed and closing letters were being reviewed prior to issuance. Is this the case, or are only the development letters being reviewed?

EO Technical employees are reviewing all development letters to organizations in buckets 2 and 3 prior to issuance. Designated EO Technical employees are also available to answer questions the Determinations specialists may have after receiving responses to those development letters. While EO Technical employees are reviewing all development letters, typically on favorables, EO Technical does not review the closing letter itself because these are essentially form approval letters. All denial letters, however, are being closely coordinated between EO Technical and EO Determinations.

Holly,

Thank you again for taking the time to review and provide feedback on the 3 questions we submitted and the long timeline. We have a few follow-up questions.

1. In the response to questions 2 and 3, Lois states that the manager of the screening group responded that, "The following are issues that could indicate a case to be considered a potential 'tea party' case and sent to Group 7822 for secondary screening. 1. 'Tea Party', 'Patriots' or '9/12 Project' is referenced in the case file. 2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes. 3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live. 4. Statements in the case file that are critical of the how the country is being run." Does this mean that the manager of the screening group developed this criteria? If not, who created the criteria? We're trying to determine if anyone in EO function management sanctioned the use of the criteria.
2. On the May 14, 2012 entry on the timeline, the EO function changed the additional details column to read "Concluded, in light of case law on what is educational, that "propaganda" activities should be [emphasis added] considered part of an organization's social welfare activities in analyzing whether it is primarily engaged in promoting social welfare." Earlier, you provided an e-mail from Tom Miller that states "I could not find anything, but my analysis is that propaganda activities should not be [emphasis added] included in an organization's activities that promote social welfare in analyzing whether it is primarily engaged in promoting the SW within the meaning of the regulations. Did the EO function inadvertently leave out the word "not" in its feedback or are we misinterpreting Tom Miller's e-mail?
3. On the May 2012 entry on the timeline, the EO function deleted our wording that the EO Technical employee was reviewing all case files and closing letters prior to issuance. Our interview write-up states that case files were being reviewed and closing letters were being reviewed prior to issuance. Is this the case, or are only the development letters being reviewed?

As always, we appreciate the assistance and we look forward to your response.

Cindy,

Thanks for the heads up. We have one Tea Party case up here - that was sent up from Determs just a few weeks ago - but had not yet heard that there were more. I think we should take a few more cases (I'd say 2) and would ask that you hold the rest until we get a sense of what the issues may be. Then when we will work with Determs in working the other cases.

FYI - I will be on maternity leave starting tomorrow. Steve will be acting as head of EO Tech.

Sharon, this case will be sent to inventory for further development. John

Here is the case number for the "Tea Party" application for 501(c)(4) exemption that we discussed this morning. Recent media attention to this type of organization indicates to me that this is a "high profile" case. In addition to 501(c)(4) typical legislative activities, the applicant, in answer to Part II, item 15 of the 1024 application indicates possible future political candidate support. Shown below are excerpts from the application describing its legislative and possible future political activities.

Thanks
Jack

Part II. Activities and Operational Information (Must be completed by all applicants)

Provide a detailed narrative description of all the activities of the organization—past, present, and planned. Do not merely refer to or repeat the language in the organizational document. List each activity separately in the order of importance based on the relative time and other resources devoted to the activity. Indicate the percentage of time for each activity. Each description should include, as a minimum, the following: (a) a detailed description of the activity including its purpose and how each activity furthers your exempt purpose; (b) when the activity was or will be initiated; and (C) where and by whom the activity will be conducted.

We are looking at the latest draft and hope to have comments on the draft to you COB today or tomorrow morning. We appreciate you taking many of our discussed concerns into account with the new draft. As you know, we are a bit concerned about the 2 referrals for investigation in the draft report, and want to do all we can to clear up your concerns.

So, following our conversation last week, we again searched our records and spoke to EO Rulings & Agreements employees about the May 2010 e-mail regarding the pre-BOLO criteria, and the issue of who approved the criteria. We now believe that there was not a May 2010 e-mail sent to all Determinations personnel directing them to coordinate these cases with group 7825. Rather, Liz Hofacre, a Determinations specialist, and her group manager, Joseph Herr, were developing the concept and a sample for sharing emerging issues, which what would be called the BOLO. They exchanged drafts with each other via e-mail during this time period (see attached email dated May 6, 2010). The concept was then introduced to Determinations specialists at their CPE sessions held in June/July 2010 (see attached CPE schedule and materials from a session on heightened awareness issues - slide 7 discusses these cases). As reflected in the attached e-mails (which we provided to TIGTA in July 2012), these cases were initially held in the screening group until the cases were assigned to Liz Hofacre. The screeners had been alerted to lookout for these applications (see 7/2/10 email from Sharon Camarillo included in the attached e-mail chain) so there was no need to alert all of EO Determinations through an email.

In regard to who developed the criteria used to identify cases sent to the advocacy group, EO made 10 individuals from EO Determinations available for interview by TIGTA. Liz Hofacre and Joseph Herr both indicated that they were involved in the initial development of the BOLO criteria. Ron Bell indicated that he, Steve Bowling, and Stephen Seok were involved in the January 2012 revision to the BOLO. Cindy Thomas, the manager of EO Determinations, indicated in her interview with TIGTA that she was not involved in the development or revision of the BOLO criteria. All individuals interviewed indicated that the process of developing and revising items on the BOLO was very informal. In regard to the criteria described in the June 2011 briefing memo, as we explained in our Nov. 2012 comments on TIGTA's timeline and emails with TIGTA regarding those comments, and as reflected in the emails previously provided to TIGTA and TIGTA's interview of Gary Muthert (a specialist in the screening group), the Acting Director, EO Rulings & Agreements asked the EO Determinations manager in June 2011 what criteria Determinations was using to determine whether a case was a "tea party" case. Because the BOLO only contained a brief reference to "Organizations involved with the Tea Party movement applying for exemption under 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4)" in June 2011, the EO Determinations manager asked the manager of the screening group, John Shafer, what criteria were being used to label cases as "tea party" cases. ("Do the applications specify/state 'tea party'? If not, how do we know applicant is involved with the tea party movement?") The screening group manager asked his employees how they were applying the BOLO's short-hand reference to "tea party." His employees responded that they were including organizations meeting any of the following criteria as falling within the BOLO's reference to "tea party" organizations: "1. 'Tea Party', 'Patriots' or '9/12 Project' is referenced in the case file. 2. Issues include government spending, government debt and taxes. 3. Educate the public through advocacy/legislative activities to make America a better place to live. 4.

Report Exhibits - Page 000564

Statements in the case file that are critical of the how the country is being run." Gary Muthert indicated in his interview with TIGTA that he believed he provided some of this information to John Shafer, his manager.

So, we believe we have provided information that shows that no one in EO "developed" the criteria. Rather, staff used their own interpretations of the brief reference to "organizations involved with the Tea Party movement," which was what was on the BOLO list. The list is a compilation of the various staff responses to John Schafer's inquiry to staff.

Please let us know if there is any additional information you need regarding clearing up these issues.

- Definition and Examples of Each - Issue Tracking and Notification
- What Happens When You See One?

What are Heightened Awareness Issues?

- TAG
- Emerging Issues
- Coordinated Issues
- Watch For Issues

Your Role

- Per IRM 1.54.1.6.1, a Front Line Employee Should Elevate the Following Matters Concerning Their Work:
  1. Unusual Issues that Prevent them from Completing Their Work.
  2. Issues Beyond Their Current Level of Training.
  3. Issues that Require Elevation in Accordance with Statute, Revenue Procedure, or Field Directive.

What are TAG Issues ?:

- Involves Abusive Tax Avoidance Transactions:
  1. Abusive Promoters
  2. Fake Determination Letters
- Activities are Fraudulent In Nature:
  1. Materially Misrepresented Operations or Finances.
  2. Conducting Activities Contrary to Tax Law (e.g. Foreign Conduits).
- Issues Involving Applicants with Potential Terrorist Connections:
  1. Cases with Direct Hits on OFAC
  2. Substantial Foreign Operations in Sanctioned Countries
- Processing is Governed by IRM 7.20.6

What Are Emerging Issues?

- Groups of Cases where No Established Tax Law or Precedent has been Established.
- Issues Arising from Significant Current Events (Doesn't Include Disaster Relief)
- Issues Arising from Changes to Tax Law
- Other Significant World Events

Emerging Issue Examples

- Tea Party Cases:
  1. High Profile Applicants
  2. Relevant Subject in Today's Media
  3. Inconsistent Requests for 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4).
  4. Potential for Political/Legislative Activity
  5. Rulings Could be Impactful

- Pension Trust 501(c )(2):
  1. Cases Involved the Same Law Firm
  2. High Dollar Amounts
  3. Presence of an Unusual Note Receivable

Emerging Issues Examples Continued

- Historical Examples:
  1. Foreclosure Assistance
  2. Carbon Credits
  3. Pension Protection Act
  4. Credit Counseling

6103 is a political leadership training program for Democratic women in the state. 6103 is part of 6103, a national movement to address the under-representation of women in office at the local, state, and federal level. Click here to find out more about 6103

The 6103 mission is to identify, educate, and inspire Democratic women who want to pursue a career in politics at the local and state level in Kentucky.

We are dedicated to making a long-term investment in these future leaders by developing their political and media skills, expanding their knowledge of local issues, and connecting them with mentors.

The 6103 model was originally founded in 2002 by a group of Bay Area Democratic women who passionately believe that we need a larger representation of women in public office at every level. Currently, 6103 is the only organization in the state and one of only two in the country that provides Democratic women with the comprehensive training they need to achieve their political aspirations.

6103 was founded to fill this vacuum, not just in the state, but across the country, and to create a legion of Democratic women leaders for generations to come.

Nan,

The five organizations listed below were mistakenly referred to the ROO when they should have been sent to Classification. These five organizations are substantially similar to three organizations whose applications for 501(c)(4) status were recently denied by EO Technical. I have attached the three denials letters so Exam can see the rationale for the three denials. I would appreciate it if you could ensure that the administrative files on these five organizations that we mistakenly sent to the ROO get to Classification. I apologize for the inconvenience. I will remind the EO Technical staff of the correct process for referring matters to Exam.

Thank you for your assistance,

Holly

Hi Jason,

I hope you're well. I'm writing you to refer a number of organizations to Review of Operations. I hope this is the correct protocol, but please let me know if I should write someone else or follow a different procedure.

Recently, we denied the 1024 applications of three state chapters of [REDACTED] a Democratic candidate training school for women. We denied the applications on the basis that their primary activity confers a private benefit to a political party. In the course of reviewing these applications, we learned that Determinations had already approved the 1024 applications of several other state chapters and the national organization. These are the organizations that we are referring. I have attached the proposed denial letters, which later became final. The organizations did not protest. The names and EINs of the referred organizations are below.

I also have the administrative files from some of the organizations, which I will fax or email if you think they would be helpful.

Dear :

This is our final determination that you do not qualify for exemption from Federal income tax under Internal Revenue Code section 501(a) as an organization described in Code section 501(c)(4).

We made this determination for the following reason(s):

You are not operated primarily to promote social welfare because your activities are conducted primarily for the benefit of a political party and a private group of individuals, rather than the community as a whole.

You must file Federal income tax returns on the form and for the years listed above within 30 days of this letter, unless you request an extension of time to file. File the returns in accordance with their instructions, and do not send them to this office. Failure to file the returns timely may result in a penalty.

We will make this letter and our proposed adverse determination letter available for public inspection under Code section 6110, after deleting certain identifying information. Please read the enclosed Notice 437, Notice of Intention to Disclose, and review the two attached letters that show our proposed deletions. #### LAW

Section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code ("Code") exempts from federal income tax organizations described in section 501(c)(4).

Section 501(c)(4)(A) of the Code describes civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare. Section 501(c)(4)(B) indicates that subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an entity unless no part of the net earnings of such entity inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations ("regulations") states that an organization may be exempt as an organization described in section 501(c)(4) of the Code if it is not organized or operated for profit and is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.

Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i) of the regulations states that an organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community, such as bringing about civic betterments and social improvements.

Rev. Rul. 73-306, 1973-2 C.B. 179, provides that an organization formed for the purpose of promoting the common interest of tenants who reside in a particular apartment complex does not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code. Any person regularly living in the complex was eligible for membership. The organization represented its member-tenants in negotiations with the management of the complex in order to secure better maintenance and services, as well as reasonable rentals. The ruling holds that the organization was not described in section 501(c)(4) because it operated essentially to benefit its members and, thus, was not primarily engaged in activities that promote the common good and general welfare of the community. In contrast, Rev. Rul. 80-206, 1980-2 C.B. 185, holds that an organization formed to promote the legal rights of all tenants in a community, instead of limiting its benefits to member-tenants, does qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 73-349, 1973-2 C.B. 179, holds that an organization formed to purchase groceries for its members at the lowest possible prices on a cooperative basis is not exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Code. Rather, the organization was a cooperative enterprise operated primarily for the private economic benefit or convenience of its members, and provided only incidental benefit to the community.

Rev. Rul. 75-286, 1975-2 C.B. 210, describes an organization that was formed by the residents of a city block to preserve and beautify that block, to improve all public facilities within the block, and to prevent physical deterioration of the block. Its activities consisted of paying the city government to plant trees on public property within the block, organizing residents to pick up litter and refuse in the public streets and on public sidewalks within the block, and encouraging residents to take an active part in beautifying the block by placing shrubbery in public areas. Much of the public area improved by the organization was part of the public roadway lying between the sidewalk and the street in front of private property owned by members of the organization. Membership in the organization was restricted to residents of the block and those owning property or operating businesses there.

Because the activities enhanced the value of the members' property rights, the organization served the private interests of its members and did not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(3). The restricted nature of its membership and limited area in which improvements were made were further indicators of private benefit. However, by beautifying and preserving public property in cooperation with the local government, the organization was considered to primarily promote the general welfare of the community even though its activities also benefited its members. Therefore, the organization did qualify under section 501(c)(4).

In Erie Endowment v. United States, 316 F.2d 151 (3d Cir. 1963), the court held that to qualify for exemption within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code, "the organization must be a community movement designed to accomplish community ends." Id. at 156.

In Commissioner v. Lake Forest, Inc., 305 F.2d 814 (4th Cir. 1962), a corporation was organized by World War II veterans for the purpose of purchasing a government housing project and converting it to cooperative, nonprofit housing for its members. Individuals became members in the corporation by purchasing an apartment unit and, as such, the number of members was limited to the number of units available. The court held that the organization was not described

In section 501(c)(4) of the Code because it was "a public-spirited but privately-devoted endeavor" that provided only incidental benefit to the community. Id. at 818. The organization did not promote social welfare because it furnished housing only to a certain group of individuals, rather than on a community basis, and did not offer a service or program for the direct betterment or improvement of the community as a whole.

In New York State Association of Real Estate Boards Group Insurance Fund v. Commissioner, 54 T.C. 1325 (1970), an association organized by a small group interested in obtaining group insurance did not qualify for exemption because it offered its benefits to only a limited class of its members and their employees. The court noted "[t]here is not in such an organization the requisite civic concern to constitute social welfare" required for qualification under section 501(c)(4). Where the primary benefit from an organization is limited to that organization's members, and not provided to the community as a whole, the organization is not operated primarily for the social welfare.

In Contracting Plumbers Cooperative Restoration Corp. v. United States, 488 F.2d 684 (2d Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 827 (1974), plumbers working in New York City were responsible for the cuts they made in the city streets. Prior to the organization's existence, the city had repaired the cuts and billed the plumbers individually in what proved to be a highly inefficient system. The organization was formed in order to restore the city streets. It only repaired cuts made by its members. The joint effort of the plumbers reduced their liability and their expenses, and more efficiently repaired the city streets. While the court found that the program provided substantial benefits to the public, it concluded that the organization primarily served the private economic interests of its members and, thus, could not be considered exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

In American Campaign Academy v. Commissioner, 92 T.C. 1053 (1989), the organization's primary activity was to operate a school ("the Academy") training individuals for careers as political campaign professionals. The organization represented on its application for exemption that the Academy was an outgrowth of programs operated by the National Republican Congressional Committee ("NRCC") that were designed to train candidates and to train and subsequently place campaign professionals in Republican campaigns. In addition, the NRCC contributed physical assets to the Academy, two of the Academy's six full-time faculty members had been previously involved in the NRCC's training program, one of the Academy's three initial directors was the Executive Director of the NRCC at the time, and another initial director was a member of the Republican National Committee at the time. The Academy's activities were exclusively funded by the National Republican Congressional Trust. The Academy's curriculum included discussions concerning "How some Republicans have won Black votes," "NRCC/RNC/NRSC/State Party naughtiness," and "Use of GOP allies," without a counterbalance of comparable studies of other political parties.

While applicants to the Academy were not required to formally declare their political affiliation to attend the organization's school, the admission panel could deduce such affiliation from the campaign experiences and political references in the applications. The court found that this knowledge of an applicant's political affiliations allowed the admission panel to limit enrollment to applicants who were likely to subsequently work in Republican organizations and campaigns. Indeed, the court found that no graduate was known to affiliate with any political party other than the Republican Party. A substantial number of the members of the Academy's admission panel were affiliated with the Republican Party.

The Service determined that the organization operated for a substantial, non-exempt private purpose. The Tax Court agreed, holding the organization did not operate exclusively for exempt, educational purposes under section 501(c)(3) of the Code because it conducted its activities to benefit the private interests of Republican entities and candidates. Although these entities and candidates were not organization "insiders," the court stated that the conferral of nonincidental benefits on disinterested persons may cause an organization to serve a private interest. While the school had a legitimate educational program, it conducted these activities with the partisan objective of benefiting Republican candidates and entities. As such, a more than incidental private benefit was conferred on Republican entities and candidates who employed the Academy's students, one that precluded exemption under section 501(c)(3).

ANALYSIS

Based on the information you submitted with your application and in subsequent correspondence, you are not operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code because your activities primarily serve private interests. Therefore, you do not qualify for exemption from federal income tax as an organization described in section 501(c)(4).

Your activities do not primarily promote social welfare because you primarily benefit private individuals and interests.

An organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i) of the regulations. An organization recognized under section 501(c)(4) is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements. Id.

To qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4), an organization must primarily benefit the community as a whole, rather than select individuals or groups. See Contracting Plumbers Coop. Restoration Corp., supra; New York State Ass'n of Real Estate Boards Group Ins. Fund, supra; Lake Forest, Inc., supra; Rev. Rul. 75-286, supra. A section 501(c)(4) organization must be "a community movement designed to accomplish community ends." Erie Endowment, supra. As such, a tenants' organization that benefits all the tenants in the community qualifies for exemption, while one that directs its activities toward benefiting only its member-tenants does not. Compare Rev. Rul. 80-206, supra, with Rev. Rul. 73-306, supra; see also Rev. Rul. 73-349, supra. Therefore, conferring a sufficient amount of private benefit on select individuals will preclude exemption under section 501(c)(4) for an organization that would otherwise qualify. Even if an organization substantially benefits the community, it will fail to qualify for exemption if it primarily benefits private interests. See Contracting Plumbers, supra.

Educational activities undertaken to provide a partisan benefit are considered to serve private interests, rather than the common good. In American Campaign Academy, supra, the court denied exemption under section 501(c)(3) to a school organized to train individuals for careers as political campaign professionals because its educational activities were operated with the partisan purpose of benefiting Republican Party entities and candidates. The private benefit conferred on these persons was more than incidental, and thus demonstrated a substantial non-exempt purpose that precluded exemption. While you are requesting recognition as an organization described in section 501(c)(4) and not section 501(c)(3) (as was American Campaign Academy), the standard for determining what constitutes private benefit described in American Campaign Academy applies to both sections. As such, for purposes of both section 501(c)(3) and section 501(c)(4), an organization which conducts its educational activities to benefit a political party and its candidates serves private interests. And, as discussed above, an organization that primarily serves private interests fails to qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4).

Thus, notwithstanding any benefit your educational activities may provide to the community, you fail to qualify for exemption because your training program primarily benefits the interests of the Party and its candidates. According to your Articles and Bylaws, your primary activity is to train and recruit who are members of the Party to run for political office. Like the school in American Campaign Academy, your purpose in conducting this activity is to provide education solely to individuals affiliated with a certain political party who want to enter politics. Indeed, you measure your success in terms of the number of your graduates who have run for, or won, elective office representing the Party.

Because your primary activity is an educational program that is limited to who are members of the Party and that is conducted with the partisan objective of increasing the number of the Party's elected officials, you primarily serve private interests. Therefore, the operation of your program does not promote social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

CONCLUSION

In summary, you are not operated primarily to promote social welfare because your activities are conducted primarily for the benefit of a political party and a private group of individuals, rather than the community as a whole. Accordingly, you do not qualify for exemption as an organization described in section 501(c)(4) of the Code and you must file federal income tax returns.

LAW

Section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code ("Code") exempts from federal income tax organizations described in section 501(c)(4).

Section 501(c)(4)(A) of the Code describes civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare. Section 501(c)(4)(B) indicates that subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an entity unless no part of the net earnings of such entity inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations ("regulations") states that to be described in section 501(c)(4) of the Code, an organization must not be organized or operated for profit and must be operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.

Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2) of the regulations states that an organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. Additionally, it states that an organization described within this section is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements.

Rev. Rul. 73-306, 1973-2 C.B. 179, provides that an organization formed for the purpose of promoting the common interest of tenants who reside in a particular apartment complex does not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code. Any person regularly living in the complex was eligible for membership. The organization represented its member-tenants in negotiations with the management of the complex in order to secure better maintenance and services, as well as reasonable rentals. The ruling holds that the organization was not described in section 501(c)(4) because it operated essentially to benefit its members and, thus, was not primarily engaged in activities that promote the common good and general welfare of the community. In contrast, Rev. Rul. 80-206, 1980-2 C.B. 185, holds that an organization formed to promote the legal rights of all tenants in a community, instead of limiting its benefits to member-tenants, does qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 73-349, 1973-2 C.B. 179, holds that an organization formed to purchase groceries for its members at the lowest possible prices on a cooperative basis is not exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Code. Rather, the organization was a cooperative enterprise operated primarily for the private economic benefit or convenience of its members, and provided only incidental benefit to the community.

Rev. Rul. 75-286, 1975-2 C.B. 210, describes an organization that was formed by the residents of a city block to preserve and beautify that block, to improve all public facilities within the block, and to prevent physical deterioration of the block. Its activities consisted of paying the city government to plant trees on public property within the block, organizing residents to pick up litter and refuse in the public streets and on public sidewalks within the block, and encouraging residents to take an active part in beautifying the block by placing shrubbery in public areas. Much of the public area improved by the organization was part of the public roadway lying between the sidewalk and the street in front of private property owned by members of the organization. Membership in the organization was restricted to residents of the block and those owning property or operating businesses there.

Because the activities enhanced the value of the members' property rights, the organization served the private interests of its members and did not qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(3). The restricted nature of its membership and limited area in which improvements were made were further indicators of private benefit. However, by beautifying and preserving public property in cooperation with the local government, the organization was considered to primarily promote the general welfare of the community even though its activities also benefited its members. Therefore, the organization did qualify under section 501(c)(4).

In Erie Endowment v. United States, 316 F.2d 151 (3d Cir. 1963), the court held that to qualify for exemption within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code, "the organization must be a community movement designed to accomplish community ends." Id. at 156.

In Commissioner v. Lake Forest, Inc., 305 F.2d 814 (4th Cir. 1962), a corporation was organized by World War II veterans for the purpose of purchasing a government housing project and converting it to cooperative, nonprofit housing for its members. Individuals became members in the corporation by purchasing an apartment unit and, as such, the number of members was limited to the number of units available. The court held that the organization was not described in section 501(c)(4) of the Code because it was "a public-spirited but privately-devoted endeavor" that provided only incidental benefit to the community. Id. at 818. The organization did not promote social welfare because it furnished housing only to a certain group of individuals, rather than on a community basis, and did not offer a service or program for the direct betterment or improvement of the community as a whole.

In New York State Association of Real Estate Boards Group Insurance Fund v. Commissioner, 54 T.C. 1325 (1970), an association organized by a small group interested in obtaining group insurance did not qualify for exemption because it offered its benefits to only a limited class of its members and their employees. The court noted "[t]here is not in such an organization the requisite civic concern to constitute social welfare" required for qualification under section 501(c)(4). Where the primary benefit from an organization is limited to that organization's members, and not provided to the community as a whole, the organization is not operated primarily for the social welfare.

In Contracting Plumbers Cooperative Restoration Corp. v. United States, 488 F.2d 684 (2d Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 827 (1974), plumbers working in New York City were responsible for the cuts they made in the city streets. Prior to the organization's existence, the city had repaired the cuts and billed the plumbers individually in what proved to be a highly inefficient system. The organization was formed in order to restore the city streets. It only repaired cuts made by its members. The joint effort of the plumbers reduced their liability and their expenses, and more efficiently repaired the city streets. While the court found that the program provided substantial benefits to the public, it concluded that the organization primarily served the private economic interests of its members and, thus, could not be considered exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

In American Campaign Academy v. Commissioner, 92 T.C. 1053 (1989), the organization's primary activity was to operate a school ("the Academy") training individuals for careers as political campaign professionals. The organization represented on its application for exemption that the Academy was an outgrowth of programs operated by the National Republican Congressional Committee ("NRCC") that were designed to train candidates and to train and subsequently place campaign professionals in Republican campaigns. In addition, the NRCC contributed physical assets to the Academy, two of the Academy's six full-time faculty members had been previously involved in the NRCC's training program, one of the Academy's three initial directors was the Executive Director of the NRCC at the time, and another initial director was a member of the Republican National Committee at the time. The Academy's activities were exclusively funded by the National Republican Congressional Trust. The Academy's curriculum included discussions concerning "How some Republicans have won Black votes," "NRCC/RNC/NRSC/State Party naughtiness," and "Use of GOP allies," without a counterbalance of comparable studies of other political parties.

While applicants to the Academy were not required to formally declare their political affiliation to attend the organization's school, the admission panel could deduce such affiliation from the campaign experiences and political references in the applications. The court found that this knowledge of an applicant's political affiliations allowed the admission panel to limit enrollment to applicants who were likely to subsequently work in Republican organizations and campaigns. Indeed, the court found that no graduate was known to affiliate with any political party other than the Republican Party. A substantial number of the members of the Academy's admission panel were affiliated with the Republican Party.

The Service determined that the organization operated for a substantial, non-exempt private purpose. The Tax Court agreed, holding the organization did not operate exclusively for exempt, educational purposes under section 501(c)(3) of the Code because it conducted its activities to benefit the private interests of Republican entities and candidates. Although these entities and candidates were not organization "insiders," the court stated that the conferral of nonincidental benefits on disinterested persons may cause an organization to serve a private interest. While the school had a legitimate educational program, it conducted these activities with the partisan objective of benefiting Republican candidates and entities. As such, a more than incidental private benefit was conferred on Republican entities and candidates who employed the Academy's students, one that precluded exemption under section 501(c)(3).

ANALYSIS

Based on the information you submitted with your application and in subsequent correspondence, you are not operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code because your activities primarily serve private interests. Therefore, you do not qualify for exemption from federal income tax as an organization described in section 501(c)(4).

Your activities do not primarily promote social welfare because you primarily benefit private individuals and interests.

An organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i) of the regulations. An organization recognized under section 501(c)(4) is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements. Id.

To qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4), an organization must primarily benefit the community as a whole, rather than select individuals or groups. See Contracting Plumbers Coop. Restoration Corp., supra; New York State Ass'n of Real Estate Boards Group Ins. Fund, supra; Lake Forest, Inc., supra; Rev. Rul. 75-286, supra. A section 501(c)(4) organization must be "a community movement designed to accomplish community ends." Erie Endowment, supra. As such, a tenants' organization that benefits all the tenants in the community qualifies for exemption, while one that directs its activities toward benefiting only its member-tenants does not. Compare Rev. Rul. 80-206, supra, with Rev. Rul. 73-306, supra; see also Rev. Rul. 73-349, supra. Therefore, conferring a sufficient amount of private benefit on select individuals will preclude exemption under section 501(c)(4) for an organization that would otherwise qualify. Even if an organization substantially benefits the community, it will fail to qualify for exemption if it primarily benefits private interests. See Contracting Plumbers, supra.

Educational activities undertaken to provide a partisan benefit are considered to serve private interests, rather than the common good. In American Campaign Academy, supra, the court denied exemption under section 501(c)(3) to a school organized to train individuals for careers as political campaign professionals because its educational activities were operated with the partisan purpose of benefiting Republican Party entities and candidates. The private benefit conferred on these persons was more than incidental, and thus demonstrated a substantial non-exempt purpose that precluded exemption. While you are requesting recognition as an organization described in section 501(c)(4) and not section 501(c)(3) (as was American Campaign Academy), the standard for determining what constitutes private benefit described in American Campaign Academy applies to both sections. As such, for purposes of both section 501(c)(3) and section 501(c)(4), an organization which conducts its educational activities to benefit a political party and its candidates serves private interests. And, as discussed above, an organization that primarily serves private interests fails to qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4).

Thus, notwithstanding any benefit your educational activities may provide to the community, you fail to qualify for exemption because your training program primarily benefits the interests of the Party and its candidates. According to your Articles, Bylaws, and website, your primary activity is to train and recruit who are members of Party to run for political office. Moreover, your program application asks prospective students to disclose specific details of their political participation as a member of Party, and clearly discloses that you limit your membership to registered members of the Party. Like the school in American Campaign Academy, your purpose in conducting this activity is to provide education solely to individuals affiliated with a certain political party who want to enter politics. Indeed, you measure your success in terms of the number of your graduates who have won elective office representing the Party.

Because your primary activity is an educational program that is limited to who are members of Party and is conducted with the partisan objective of increasing the number of Party's elected officials, you primarily serve private interests. Therefore, the operation of your program does not promote social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

CONCLUSION

In summary, you are not operated primarily to promote social welfare because your activities are conducted primarily for the benefit of a political party and a private group of individuals, rather than the community as a whole. Accordingly, you do not qualify for exemption as an organization described in section 501(c)(4) of the Code and you must file federal income tax returns.

You have the right to file a protest if you believe this determination is incorrect. To protest, you must submit a statement of your views and fully explain your reasoning. You must submit the statement, signed by one of your officers, within 30 days from the date of this letter. We will consider your statement and decide if the information affects our determination.

Your protest statement should be accompanied by the following declaration:

Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this protest statement, including accompanying documents, and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the statement contains all the relevant facts, and such facts are true, correct, and complete.

You also have a right to request a conference to discuss your protest. This request should be made when you file your protest statement. An attorney, certified public accountant, or an individual enrolled to practice before the Internal Revenue Service may represent you. If you want representation during the conference procedures, you must file a proper power of attorney, Form 2848, Power of Attorney and Declaration of Representative, if you have not already done so. For more information about representation, see Publication 947, Practice before the IRS and Power of Attorney. All forms and publications mentioned in this letter can be found at www.irs.gov, Forms and Publications.

If you do not intend to protest this determination, you do not need to take any further action. If we do not hear from you within 30 days, we will issue a final adverse determination letter. That letter will provide information about filing tax returns and other matters.

Please send your protest statement, Form 2848 and any supporting documents to this address:

Holly,

I just read the email below. A subteam from those working the advocacy cases put together a draft list of template questions. Andy and Justin may find this helpful. I know you're not available on 3/1 and 3/2 and not sure you're still on computer. If I don't hear back from you by 3/1 in the a.m., I'll pass the attachment off to Andy and Justin.

Also, based on information in the attached document, I believe it is clear that our folks were instructed not to ask questions if information is in the case file. But, I'm still going to verify with Steve Bowling that this was accurate for prior cases and will let you know what he says.

Cindy,

Attached are some template questions the team has developed. I told Stephen to hold off on sending them to our EOT contacts (Justin Lowe and Hilary Goehausen) as I'm not sure who all is involved now. I didn't want to duplicate our efforts.

Counsel has been very uncomfortable about applying c3 stuff even to c4 and wasn't willing to include the c5 and 6s. They also were unwilling to use the c4,5, and 6, rev rule because it was designed to talk about 527 political activity, which has a slightly different articulation. I find that silly since the entire regulated community has been relying on that guidance as a look at how the IRS might think about specific factual scenarios. Nikole asked me whether I thought this would actually help our guys practically--for example does it provide direction in how the determine which activity is primary. I told her I think it is cumbersome and not the best practical tool, but--with some discussion about where to focus--could work. I would like the c4,5,6, stuff included and would like this expanded as the dual track piece has some 5 and 6 orgs--what's my training for that?! As to the weighing piece--I think they need to coordinate with DC in any close cases--not sure we can articulate completely how to parse. Perhaps could add language that reminds them its a look at all the facts and circumstances including, but not limited to, expenditures, volunteer activity, communications, etc

Nikole,

Here is the revised guidesheet we sent to Lois' shop yesterday. It reflects some fine-tuning on the 4/20 version. The changes were predominantly clean-up, more consistency in language, added precision and clarity, and better conformity to the published ruling examples (resulting in more "derived from" notations). We also removed, combined, or massaged a number of factors that were neutral (or unnecessary).

Let us know if you have any specific questions. (Erik, you already have this version)

We have met with TIGTA on this several times. From our perspective, they are taking a very narrow view of the program and how we ran it. They also seem to be focused on the initial articulation of the BOLO list as a "bad" thing without looking at the entire program. I think we have a basic difference in our view of their audit. We thought it was to determine whether IRS had a biased program, which would include looking at every aspect. they seem to think the question is narrower--did we "target based on the articulation of the BOLO?" We will continue to keep you apprised as we see their written document.

Lois,

After the discussion last week, the team went over some cases on Friday afternoon and Monday morning. We then met yesterday afternoon to discuss the cases and our thoughts on moving forward.

As far as the cases go, the team has reconsidered some cases based on input from Holly, Hillary, and Judy last week. In addition, I think we have one case that is still up in the air awaiting some additional documentation. After that, I believe we will have approximately 90 cases that we could not resolve. For these cases, I'm not sure there is much more we can discuss because most involve our literal view of the application package versus the EO function's interpretation of the application package based on experience. For example, in our literal view, we may not pick up on code words or know based on past experience that certain activities or sets of activities could actually be significant political campaign intervention, whereas the EO function may. On our side, we'll have to determine how we present both sides in the report.

As far as moving forward, I began working yesterday morning on a very rough version of the report that I had asked the team to prepare while we were awaiting your feedback. There is a lot of information currently in the report and a lot of information that is currently not in the report. On our side, we have a lot of difficult decisions coming up on what is relevant to include and what our interpretation is regarding, not only the allegations that led to us initiating this review, but the actions the EO function has taken since that time. At this point, we have not determined what will or will not be included in the report and how we will present everything.

If you would like to meet to discuss your concerns, I am available. If you would rather wait until I have a clearer view of what are considering for the report, we can do that also. How would you like to proceed?

We were disappointed that you couldn't attend the meeting today. I think it would be useful for you, your group, and mine to have another conversation about approach. We feel your folks are being too narrow in their view and have decided that because of the language on the earlier BOLO list regarding Tea Party, everything that followed was tainted. They seem to believe that if a case was initially sent to the advocacy group, but ultimately determined to be an approval, that our action in putting it into the advocacy group in the first place is incorrect, and illustrates "targeting." I think they remain confused about the purpose of screening vs., bucketing--and we have tried to explain several time. They also don't seem to be taking a big picture look at what we have done. That is, we've already owned up to the fact that we recognized in mid-process that Cincinnati was struggling with the issues. That is why we sent our experts in this area to Cincinnati for 3 weeks to work hand in hand with the Determ folks to train them and then walk through their post training assessments to ensure they understood and we were getting the right treatment for the cases. When we describe that process, they acknowledge that that approach sounds reasonable, but seem to be saying that reasonableness is overshadowed by the fact that the criteria look bad to folks on the outside, so there is no way we could cure the initial bad impression.

We understand why the criteria might raise questions. In fact we refined it to more accurately reflect what we are doing. I met with the group today and asked your folks what they thought the TIGTA audit was all about. The response was that they were here because there were allegations that the IRS was "targeting." When asked, they didn't seem able to provide me with a clear definition of what they meant by targeting, and they confused me when they said it wasn't necessarily political. I told them my understanding is that the audit was to determine whether the IRS was acting in a politically motivated manner--not whether the earlier articulation of the criteria looked bad. However, that doesn't seem to be the focus. They have said they aren't looking at whether the organizations are conservative or liberal because that is too difficult to figure out. They have also acknowledged that there are both conservative and liberal organizations on the list of advocacy cases.

So, I'm not sure how they are looking at whether we were politically motivated, or what they are looking for with regard to targeting. They didn't seem to understand the difference between IRS acting in a politically motivated manner and front line staff people using less than stellar judgment. I am willing to take the blame for not having provided sufficient direction initially, which may have resulted in front line staff doing things that appeared to be politically motivated, but I am not on board that anything that occurred here shows that the IRS was politically motivated in the actions taken.

So, I suggested to the group that we all get together after they have had a chance to talk to you. I asked both sides to think about the main points they wanted to make or better understand, so the meeting can be most fruitful. This is the toughest one you and I have worked on together. But, I'm hoping the meeting will get us all to an improved understanding so that your report can better reflect what occurred and why.

Not sure I sent this to you--but thought you'd want to know that is looking like it won't go as smoothly as we'd hoped. As you can see at the bottom, I had some serious conversations about the purpose of the audit. Rather than taking the broad view of whether IRS program shows bias, they appear to be taking a narrow view as to whether the BOLO list and cases selected show targeting. They are unwilling to consider anything, but what is on the applications--that is, we told them that we send these to an experienced group so we can be consistent and because those folks have broad experience with the applications so they know that certain descriptions that may not use political turn out to be political activity. With that background, we believe it is appropriate to put the case in advocacy bucket and ask the question to make sure we have a clear record of what we are approving. Apparently--they disagree. So, I'm guessing our response will be lengthy.

Lois,

As requested, here is a listing of 93 application cases. There is one case that we are working on with Polly (case #142). This one may or may not stay on the list.

Lois,

After the discussion last week, the team went over some cases on Friday afternoon and Monday morning. We then met yesterday afternoon to discuss the cases and our thoughts on moving forward.

As far as the cases go, the team has reconsidered some cases based on input from Holly, Hillary, and Judy last week. In addition, I think we have one case that is still up in the air awaiting some additional documentation. After that, I believe we will have approximately 90 cases that we could not resolve. For these cases, I'm not sure there is much more we can discuss because most involve our literal view of the application package versus the EO function's interpretation of the application package based on experience. For example, in our literal view, we may not pick up on code words or know based on past experience that certain activities or sets of activities could actually be significant political campaign intervention, whereas the EO function may. On our side, we'll have to determine how we present both sides in the report.

As far as moving forward, I began working yesterday morning on a very rough version of the report that I had asked the team to prepare while we were awaiting your feedback. There is a lot of information currently in the report and a lot of information that is currently not in the report. On our side, we have a lot of difficult decisions coming up on what is relevant to include and what our interpretation is regarding, not only the allegations that led to us initiating this review, but the actions the EO function has taken since that time. At this point, we have not determined what will or will not be included in the report and how we will present everything.

If you would like to meet to discuss your concerns, I am available. If you would rather wait until I have a clearer view of what are considering for the report, we can do that also. How would you like to proceed?

We were disappointed that you couldn't attend the meeting today. I think it would be useful for you, your group, and mine to have another conversation about approach. We feel your folks are being too narrow in their view and have decided that because of the language on the earlier BOLO list regarding Tea Party, everything that followed was tainted. They seem to believe that if a case was initially sent to the advocacy group, but ultimately determined to be an approval, that our action in putting it into the advocacy group in the first place is incorrect, and illustrates "targeting." I'd say the primary reason for the first letter was to create a public side of the file bridge that explains how a favorable emerged when there was a substantial information request that was never responded to. It was also to reassure the taxpayer that when the favorable shows up it is not a mistake (given that the taxpayer is aware that they never responded to an outstanding request).

The alternative of trying to build that into the boiler plate approval letter seemed awkward. I suppose another approach would be to have a second caveat on the boiler plate approval letter for those taxpayers who had received a developmental letter and that caveat could contain the you can ignore our earlier developmental request because we found on rereview that we had adequate information.

I think we need two letters. We already being criticized for treating these orgs differently. We don't want their determination letters to look different than regular c4 letters. A determ letter that mentions disregarding a development letter will look a little squirrley to the public. I don't think there will be a large time gap between the phone call letter and the determ letter so maybe we leave the bit about favorable out of that letter. Seems a little weird that we'd tell them on the phone that it is favorable but not say the same in a letter. I guess I don't see what the harm is.

On the determ ltr, only change is very last paragraph of last page under heading addendum. The optional pattern paragraphs are for all determs--just disregard those. Some are c4 (vol fire dept can get deductible contrib even if c4).

Sorry guys--don't think we're quite there yet.

I have to agree with Judy. I don't believe we need to tell them they are approved. How long after they get this will the approval letter go out? I guess what I thought was going to happen was that this letter would be there determ letter with additional info--not 2 letters--will that work?

I have comments on the script that I've added to the doc. --really need to make it plain language enough that the agents don't feel stilted following the script.

As to the determ letter, I can't really tell how, if at all it is different than the one we usually use--As noted, I think we should collapse the after call letter into the regular letter. I assume the choice paragraphs relate to all determs as there is a bunch of info re contribution deductions?

Script -- Phone Calls to Favorable Advocacy Org Cases With Outstanding Development Letter
Question—is the person calling them that same RA that sent them the initial development letter? If so, he/she should just say

Hello. My name is _____. I am calling about the application for recognition of tax-exempt status submitted by _____. The IRS previously sent you a request for additional information, and I know you haven't yet responded. But, we've taken another look at your application materials, and have concluded that we have sufficient information to make a decision without the requested information. We'll be back in touch if we need anything more, but right now it looks like you should receive your ruling within two weeks.

IF asked why it took so long:

I'm sorry for the difficulty you have had getting exempt status. We received an increased number of applications for 501(c)(4) status that were different from what we have seen in the past. We needed to understand the activities being conducted so we could make sure that those activities are consistent with what the tax law allows.

If it is a different person calling, then it can get adjusted to say so and so sent you a request.....The case has been reassigned to me and I have taken another look.....

Using the "royal" we doesn't make sense to me unless we are trying to make the point that a new set of eyes has looked at it—if so we should just so have just taken another look at your application file. Based on your application and materials, we have concluded that we have sufficient information to make a decision. We realize you received a request for additional information and have not yet responded to that request, but we have concluded that we are able to make a decision without that additional information.

Scrutiny of Political Nonprofits Sets Off Claim of Harassment By JONATHAN WEISMAN

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is caught in an election-year struggle between Democratic lawmakers pressing for a crackdown on nonprofit political groups and conservative organizations accusing the tax agency of conducting a politically charged witch hunt.

In recent weeks, the I.R.S. has sent dozens of detailed questionnaires to Tea Party organizations applying for nonprofit tax status, demanding to know their political leanings and activities. The agency plans this year to press existing nonprofits like American Crossroads, on the Republican side, and Priorities USA, on the Democratic side, to justify their tax-protected status as "social welfare" organizations, a status that many tax professionals believe is being badly abused.

Senate Democrats are readying a fresh legislative push to demand that such groups disclose their donors and attach disclaimers to their political advertising identifying the advertisement's primary funders. Tax experts are also raising concerns that corporate donors to "super PACs" may be deducting their contributions as business expenses.

"The shadowy attack ads we see every day should be brought into the light," said Senator Michael Bennet, Democrat of Colorado. "The largest contributors should stand by the ads they've paid for, the voters should know who's behind these ads, and these super PACs should not be allowed to abuse our tax code by masquerading as nonprofit charities."

The pushback is likely to be just as fierce. Jay Sekulow, a conservative lawyer known more for his stands on religious freedom than for his tax work, said he is representing 16 Tea Party groups that are claiming harassment by the I.R.S., and the number is growing. He said he intended to demand an explanation from the Treasury Department on Wednesday for what he called "McCarthyism" tactics and that he would contact Republican lawmakers this week.

"This is obviously a coordinated effort by the I.R.S. to stifle these Tea Party and Tea Party-affiliated groups, and to stifle free speech activities," Mr. Sekulow said. "It's as onerous as what they did to the N.A.A.C.P. in the 1950s, and I plan to make that point."

With independent political groups already dominating the 2012 campaign cycle, their treatment under tax and campaign finance law is likely to be a recurring theme in the coming months. Senate Democrats have formed a task force behind Mr. Bennet to plan hearings and a legislative response. Republicans suspect political motivations.

Into that charged atmosphere, the I.R.S. is heightening its own push to ensure that nonprofits are sticking to their primary role as social welfare groups, an effort that began gingerly in 2011.

At issue are groups large and small formed as 501(c)(4)s under the tax code, a designation created for social welfare groups but which include such overtly political organizations as American Crossroads — co-founded by Karl Rove, the former political adviser to President George W. Bush, to help elect Republicans — and Priorities USA, founded by former Obama White House aides and overtly backed by President Obama.

Report Exhibits - Page 000632

"To be tax-exempt as a social welfare organization described in Internal Revenue Code (IRC) section 501(c)(4), an organization must be primarily engaged in the promotion of social welfare," I.R.S. officials said in a statement e-mailed in response to inquiries about the I.R.S.'s activities. "The promotion of social welfare does not include any unrelated business activities or intervention in political campaigns on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office."

But, the service added, such organizations can engage in some political activity "so long as, in the aggregate, these nonexempt activities are not its primary activities." Nobody is quite sure how that is measured.

"This is really the last loophole," said James P. Joseph, a tax lawyer in Washington at Arnold & Porter, and it has made way for a profusion of political activities and questionable tax issues.

For instance, individual donations to groups like American Crossroads are not tax deductible as charitable contributions, and most tax lawyers would say company donations should not be deducted either. But in some circumstances, companies could try to justify donations to political nonprofits as a "necessary" business expense, said Frances R. Hill, a tax law professor at the University of Miami.

Tax professionals suspect — but cannot prove — that some donors are tucking their contributions to the groups into their marketing or advertising budgets and deducting them from their taxes, she said.

Recent Supreme Court rulings have heightened concern about the issue, since companies can now give unlimited amounts to so-called super PACs as long as those political action committees do not coordinate directly with candidates. Outfits like Crossroads and Priorities USA run both tax-exempt 501(c)(4)s and more overtly political arms, known as 527 organizations. Under current law, there is little or no way to tell whether contributions are being deducted, especially because many of the most political companies are privately held.

"I think the story here is that we have a system in which we think this is happening, and there's absolutely no way we can find out legally," Professor Hill said.

The Democratic group Priorities USA uses a blanket disclaimer on its Web site that says, "Contributions to Priorities USA are not deductible for federal income tax purposes." American Crossroads leaves unaddressed the business tax deductibility issue, stating, "Contributions to American Crossroads are not deductible as charitable contributions for federal income tax purposes."

Officials at the organization say they tell their donors, including companies and individuals, that they should contact their financial advisers and tax counsels to determine the ramifications of their contributions.

Democrats, whose 501(c)(4)s have been outraised significantly by their Republican counterparts, have been pressing the I.R.S. for a response on the tax questions, and the agency responded earlier this year. The I.R.S. noted that under existing tax law, new 501(c)(4)s simply declare themselves to be social welfare organizations, but they are supposed to justify that status each year with their tax returns' Form 990s. The agency promised that it "will review organizations to ensure that they have classified themselves correctly and that they are complying with applicable rules."

The questionnaire being sent to agencies was identified as one way to check compliance. I.R.S. officials would not say whether that effort had gotten off the ground with the big groups that Democrats want examined. But what the I.R.S. called "a companion process" with new applicants was begun in recent weeks.

Small Tea Party-aligned groups say they have become collateral damage.

Eric Wilson, director of the Kentucky 9/12 Project, which spun out of an effort by the television and radio personality Glenn Beck, said his group applied for tax-exempt status in December 2010, and a month later was informed by the I.R.S. that it would get a response in 90 days. In February it got a response, a seven-page questionnaire with 30 multi-part questions, 88 inquiries in all.

ONUS FALLS ON INDUSTRY TO SHAPE FINAL FATCA REGIME, OFFICIAL SAYS

AUTHOR: Stewart, David D.

Now that the IRS and Treasury have released proposed FATCA regulations, it is up to the financial industry, through the comment process, to guide the final outcome of the rules, Steven Musher, IRS associate chief counsel (international), said March 6.

Speaking at a session of the Institute of International Bankers annual conference in Washington, Musher said the onus has shifted to the financial industry, which needs to suggest specific improvements to the proposed regs to make implementation easier on institutions while still achieving the intended compliance gains under FATCA. (For prior coverage, see Doc 2012-2586 or 2012 TNT 27-1. For REG-121647-10, see Doc 2012-2485 or 2012 TNT 27-7.)

Laurie Hatten-Boyd of KPMG LLP praised the government for including industry concerns in the proposed regs but said there is "still some room for tweaking."

Musher said outside stakeholders have a "fair skepticism" of the government's ability to present a full picture of the obligations created by the statute in the proposed regs.

"I think we met the initial burden on us to take into account your initial comments on the notices, and I think that is our deposit of good faith," Musher said. He urged financial institutions to "follow through now on your obligation to help us with concrete input so that we can reach that goldilocks balance between compliance goals of the statute and what is feasible for the outside stakeholders."

Musher said the government has been responsive to comments on identification and due diligence requirements and that industry participants should submit comments about issues that remain problematic. He suggested that the comments include practical solutions, rather than just identifying the problems, so the government can meet its summer deadline for finalization of the FATCA rules.

Michael Caballero, Treasury international tax counsel, discussed what he envisions for the information sharing agreements outlined in the joint statement issued by the United States, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and the United Kingdom. He noted that the European countries that joined in the statement are not the only countries that have been discussing information sharing agreements with the United States, but that "someone has to be first" and that the European countries have the ability to "build on what they are already doing within the EU Savings Directive." (For the statement, see Doc 2012-2510 or 2012 TNT 27-28.)

While the agreements will be made on a country-by-country basis, Caballero said the intent is not to have agreements that are analogous to tax treaties, where every aspect is subject to negotiation. He explained that financial institutions and governments will benefit from consistency among the agreements, to the extent that consistency is possible.

"The central theme of this is simply an agreement to allow reporting to go from the financial institution to the government and then to the IRS rather than to the IRS directly," Caballero said.

The panel's moderator, Yaron Z. Reich of Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton LLP, raised the issue of the separate provision of the Hiring Incentives to Restore Employment Act that repealed rules allowing the issuance of bearer bonds to foreign investors. Reich noted that the provision takes effect on March 18 but that the IRS and Treasury have not yet issued guidance on questions raised by the change.

Musher and Caballero said the guidance is in its final stages and will be issued soon. "It is extremely imminent," Caballero said.

Small Business: Tips Offered for Small Business Health Care Credit

Small businesses and tax-exempt organizations should look into the Small Business Health Care Tax Credit, which was designed to help such entities provide insurance coverage for employees, the Internal Revenue Service said March 6.

The agency spotlighted the credit in its latest e-newsletter (IRS Tax Tip 2012-44) by offering key tips on form filing for tax-exempt organizations and qualifying businesses.

Those not qualifying in 2011 may be eligible in the future. Eligible small employers can claim the credit for 2010 through 2013 and for two additional years beginning in 2014, IRS said.

The maximum credit for eligible business employers for tax years 2010 to 2013 is 35 percent of premiums paid. The maximum credit for the same time frame for eligible tax-exempt organizations is 25 percent of premiums paid.

TAX REFUND SCAM TARGETS SENIORS, POOR

By Patricia Sabatini

The Internal Revenue Service is warning people about a new tax scam that tricks low-income and elderly people into filing for fraudulent refunds.

Under the scheme, people are told they are entitled to a tax refund based on the American Opportunity Tax Credit, which is worth up to $2,500 for reimbursement of college expenses.

The scammers claim they can obtain refunds for the victims even if those individuals were not enrolled in or paying for college. Some victims are duped into believing that the credit is available to compensate them for paying taxes on groceries, the IRS said.

"This is a disgraceful effort by scam artists to take advantage of people by giving them false hopes of a nonexistent refund," IRS Commissioner Doug Shulman said. "We want to warn innocent taxpayers about this new scheme before more people get trapped."

Besides seniors and low-income households, other frequent targets include church congregations, the IRS said.

Victims may be charged exorbitant upfront fees to file the claims. By the time they discover they've been cheated, the thieves are long gone.

The agency said it has identified and stopped thousands of these fraudulent claims in recent weeks.

"The IRS is actively investigating the sources of the scheme, and its promoters may be subject to criminal prosecution," the agency said.

Besides being fooled into paying bogus filing fees, taxpayers are on the hook for repaying any fraudulent refunds they receive since they are legally responsible for the accuracy of their returns.

Taxpayers should choose tax preparers carefully, the IRS said.

Typical warning signs of a tax fraud include:

- * Refunds based on false statements about tax credits.
- * Unfamiliar for-profit tax services promising refunds to local church members.
- * Internet ads that direct people to toll-free numbers and then ask for Social Security numbers.
- * Homemade flyers and brochures advertising refunds without proof of eligibility.
- * Promises of refunds with no documentation required.
- * Unsolicited offers to prepare a return and split the refund.

* Claims for the expired Economic Recovery Credit Program or for economic stimulus payments.

Tax Administration: IRS Practitioner Phone Line Highlights Declining Service for All Strata of Taxpayers

By Diane Freda

Taxpayer Advocate Nina Olson said March 2 that the Internal Revenue Service's practitioner phone line is a good example of how cutbacks in personal service are affecting not just low-income taxpayers, but higher-income taxpayers as well.

While the taxpayer advocate is best known for defending the rights of low-income taxpayers, Olson told a Federal Bar Association annual meeting that all segments of the tax world are suffering from less personal contact with IRS and a drive toward automation.

From Jan. 1 to March 1, the level of service on IRS's practitioner priority telephone line was 69.9 percent, Olson said, with an average wait time of 26 minutes. "I would say bring your knitting to the phone," she quipped to an audience of attorneys who represent many taxpayers with sizable means.

Her concerns about reductions in IRS service were backed up by numerous practitioners who told Bloomberg BNA March 6 that wait times on the practitioner phone line have increase significantly in recently years. The reports varied on how successful IRS was in resolving problems once the calls were answered.

Olson largely blamed the cutbacks in service on cutbacks in IRS funding.

"There is simply too much work and not enough employees to do the work," she said. While Congress' reduction in funding from 2010 to 2011 was 0.2 percent, in 2012 the drop will be 2.5 percent, she said. That represents an increase for enforcement efforts and a continued decrease for taxpayer services, Olson said.

Unreasonable Wait Times.

The practitioner priority line is a phone line IRS has dedicated for practitioners—as opposed to taxpayers—to call IRS about return-related issues. It is their first line of direct communication with IRS.

Many practitioners said they understand the predicament IRS is in, with fewer employees to shoulder an increasing workload, but said wait times have become unreasonable.

"This is a national phone line and I don't expect that they are just sitting around waiting for me to call," Evan Golar, a certified public accountant and enrolled agent from Airmont, N.Y., said. "A 10- or 15-minute wait would be acceptable, but I don't expect to be extended indefinitely. It's very rude for anybody to have to wait that long when it's a number especially designed for practitioners."

Worse yet, Golar said that after waiting 45 minutes recently for his call to be answered, he was transferred to another line where the wait was an additional 20 minutes. In the end the problem was not resolved by either of the people he spoke to, and he hung up, being forced to write a letter to IRS.

Report Exhibits - Page 000640

Golar said the voice prompts provide every possible explanation for a problem, except the one a practitioner needs. "According to the IRS voice prompts it's all your fault that the problem developed," he said.

"The wait times seem to have increased quite a bit over the past three years, from four- to seven-minute waits to more than 30 minutes," depending on which option of help the practitioner is choosing, BDO USA partner Todd Simmens said.

Practitioners are often making many calls to the line in a week related to many cases. "It can be quite a disruption in your day, especially in the busy season," he said. "Even 15 minutes is too long."

Once the call is answered, Simmens said IRS personnel are generally able to help, although willingness and ability to help can also depend on whether it is a business call being answered from IRS offices in Cincinnati and Ogden, Utah, for instance, or an individual question being answered in Memphis, Tenn.; Long Island, N.Y.; and Philadelphia.

Simmens said IRS also needs to address additional areas on the phone line, such as international and entity classification issues, which would cut down on calls made to other divisions of IRS.

Adding to the Problem.

If the lines are designed to address inadequate staffing because of budget constraints, they are adding to the problem rather than fixing it, according to Claudia Hill, an enrolled agent with TaxMam Inc. of Cupertino, Calif.

"The IRS needs all the help it can get, in a confined budget situation, and when they don't service the practitioner hotlines in such a way that we can get through and resolve problems it creates additional problems that take additional time, that falls on the IRS."

Practitioners have learned to do other things while they wait for the phones to be answered, but that also is a problem for some.

"It ties up my telephone, which is a huge problem for me," said Mary Lou Gervie, with CPA firm Watkins Meegan in Bethesda, Md. "I pride myself on my services to my clients and I want to be available when they call me," said the former IRS revenue agent. While the business line is answered much more quickly than the collection line, for instance, the wait is too long, she said. However, once she gets on, she said she is usually able to resolve her problem.

While IRS itself, apart from Olson, has laid the blame for less personal contact, in areas such as phone lines and increasing audits conducted through correspondence, on the budget, Lonnie Gary, an enrolled agent and partner with Young, Craig + Co. in Mountain View, Calif., said the drive toward less human contact at IRS might be that IRS is making a choice between taxpayer service and enforcement.

"I think the IRS is torn," Gary said. "They have this party line where people are staffing the phone, and I think they might be saying that while it provides good customer service, it doesn't bring in dollars," he said. "They often decide to move resources into other activities. The IRS won't tell you that, but I think that kind of trade-off must be going on."

Taxpayer Services at Issue.

Report Exhibits - Page 000641

IRS declined to comment March 6.

However, during 2011 budget negotiations, IRS Commissioner Douglas Shulman warned lawmakers that budget shortfalls would lead to dramatic cuts in the level of support for taxpayers.

Approximately half of the nation's taxpayers attempting to call IRS "would either be unable to get through or hang up in frustration," he said. He promised to "try hard" to minimize the degradation of services (201 DTR G-1, 10/18/11).

He reminded lawmakers that taxpayer service needs would be competing against other critically important, but unfunded activities, such as combating growing identity theft fraud, cracking down on offshore tax evasion, processing thousands of offshore asset disclosures, and meeting new legislative requirements such as merchant card information reporting and securities basis reporting.

EXAM PROJECT FOR SECTION 401(K) SAFE HARBOR PLANS UNDERWAY

AUTHOR: Trivedi, Shamik

The interim findings of a nearly three-year-long employee plans research project have led the IRS to undertake an examination project on safe harbor section 401(k) plans, an IRS official said March 6.

"We have begun an exam project as a follow-up where we're looking at plans that identify themselves as safe harbor plans, but [for which] there were no contributions made," Janice Gore, IRS employee plans team audit manager for the Great Lakes area, said on an IRS-sponsored phone forum.

For those plans that suspended safe harbor contributions, the examination project seeks to make sure that they did so properly, with the proper notice, and that when they were no longer under the safe harbor, they complied with nondiscrimination testing, Gore said.

A safe harbor section 401(k) plan is similar to a traditional section 401(k) plan, but it must provide for some employer contributions that are fully vested when made, among other requirements. Sponsors of safe harbor plans must notify eligible employees with a written notice of the employee's rights and obligations under the plan, and the notice must comply with content and timing requirements, according to an IRS resource guide.

The follow-up exam project stems from information gleaned from the section 401(k) compliance check questionnaire that the IRS Tax-Exempt and Government Entities Division developed in 2009 and 2010. The questionnaire was administered to approximately 1,200 section 401(k) plan sponsors in 2010 by the Employee Plans Compliance Unit, with data analyzed in 2011, according to Monika Templeman, director of employee plan examinations at TE/GE. A final report is expected later this year.

The interim report on the questionnaire's findings, which was released February 3, shows that nearly 43 percent of the section 401(k) plans reported that they were safe harbor 401(k) plans, Gore said, adding, "We were surprised by that." (For the interim report, see Doc 2012-2241 or 2012 TNT 24-52. For prior coverage, see Doc 2011-17839 or 2011 TNT 161-2.)

Templeman said that the next steps for TE/GE, based on the results of the questionnaire's findings, are to improve compliance and outreach and then encourage plan sponsors to use the IRS's Employee Plans Compliance Resolution System (EPCRS). She said practitioners should also expect "both hard and soft guidance" based on the findings.

Anticipated guidance in the form of an updated revenue procedure that will expand the EPCRS to include section 403(b) plans is expected within the next few weeks, according to comments made by an IRS official in February.

Freddie Mitchell Faces IRS Charges

PHILADELPHIA - Former Philadelphia Eagles player Freddie Mitchell faces federal tax fraud charges for allegedly recruiting professional athletes in a scheme to get false tax returns.

Mitchell and two other people, Jamie Russ-Walls and Richard Walls, face federal charges in the case in Florida, in an indictment obtained by Fox 29.

The indictment filed by the U.S. attorney in Orlando, Fla., says a company set up by Mitchell, Chameleon Enterprises, was involved in the alleged scam.

The target of a scheme was a professional athlete with the initials A.G., who investigators said had no knowledge of the scheme, but paid for a firm connected with Mitchell to do his taxes.

According to the indictment, the plan was to file for false federal tax returns electronically.

Jamie Russ-Walls and Richard Walls allegedly filed the tax returns, claiming refunds ranging from $170,000 to $1.9 million. The two men also attached false documents to support the refund claims, the indictment says.

The men enlisted Mitchell to recruit professional athletes as tax-return customers.

A meeting was set up with the professional athlete, where Jamie Russ-Walls claimed she was a trained tax preparer who dealt with professional athletes.

Mitchell then took a $100,000 down payment for tax preparations from A.G., and the defendants who file three tax returns to get a $1.2 million refund.

Then, either Jamie Russ-Walls and Richard Walls filed false tax returns without A.G.'s knowledge.

Jamie Russ-Walls was to get $600,000 and Mitchell about $280,000 from the false refund.

In addition, Jamie Russ-Walls or Richard Walls filed false returns for Mitchell's company, Chameleon Enterprises, claiming more than $2 million in refunds.

A second count in the indictment pertains to the filing of false tax returns in the name of A.G.

A Bensalem, Pa., police report on the Web site Patch.com said that Richard A. Walls, 41 and Jamie Russ-Walls, 37, of the 3600 block of Red Lion Road, Philadelphia, were picked up on Sunday on outstanding Federal Fugitive from Justice warrants, and turned over to the Feds.

Man Says He Sold Fake Tax Forms *Documents used to defraud IRS

Mary Sparacello East Jefferson bureau

A Honduran man illegally in the United States was held without bond Tuesday after confessing to selling fake tax forms to undocumented foreigners, who used them to defraud the Internal Revenue Service, Kenner Police Chief Steve Caraway said Tuesday.

Marvin Baca, 28, who lives in LaPlace, was arrested Friday, and police found $20,000 in his vehicle. He sold bogus W-2 forms, and possibly more, Caraway said. "The information we got is that he was the guy people would call when they were looking for forged documents."

Baca's arrest shows how lucrative the business of fabricating official papers for illegal immigrants is, Caraway said.

"It's a sign that it obviously is widespread, and there's a lot of money involved in this," he said.

Officers Brad Boyd and Ethan Hales encountered Baca when they responded to a disturbance in the 3000 block of Loyola Drive in Kenner. He was arguing with a man upset that the fake W-2 forms Baca had previously sold didn't work, Caraway said. "The other individual was trying to get his money back."

Baca was picked up on 2006 attachments from Jefferson Parish for cocaine possession and battery on a police officer.

He confessed to detective George Hoffman about fake W-2 forms, saying he had been selling fictitious forms for $1,500 to Hispanic people who also are in the U.S. illegally. Police said the scam worked like this:

Undocumented foreigners work in the U.S. but don't file tax returns in their own names for fear of being arrested and deported. So they buy phony W-2 forms and file returns under others' names and receive refund checks, normally cashed using a fake identification card. Baca told Hoffman he had two envelopes in his vehicle containing a total of $20,000, cash police think he obtained by selling fake documents, Caraway said. The money was seized as evidence.

Police booked Baca with identity theft and two counts of forgery concerning two W-2 forms. One of those forms contained the Social Security number of a Virginia resident, police said.

Kenner police notified the IRS and Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials, who detained Baca because of his immigration status, Caraway said. Kenner is working with both federal agencies on the case. "The investigation is ongoing," Caraway said.

Baca remained Tuesday in the Jefferson Parish Correctional Center in Gretna.

South Bay Tax Evasion Scam Lands Luxury Car Buyer in Prison By Mike Rosenberg

A South Bay white collar criminal will spend 30 months in prison after pleading guilty to tax evasion, authorities said Tuesday.

The U.S. Attorney's Office said Gary Linn Packer, 51, did not report $8.8 million in stock earnings to the IRS after liquidating shares from his former company, Sunnyvale-based Network Appliance, in 2000. He was supposed to pay the IRS $1.8 million in taxes from the stock earnings, but concealed the profits in trusts and by using false identification numbers.

That year, Packer moved from San Jose and bought a $1.2 million home in Morgan Hill using a trust that was not registered with the IRS. He also used cash to buy an Audi TT, BMW X5 and Volkswagen Cabriolet, and a condo in Nashville, Tenn.

Most recently living in Wyoming, Packer pleaded guilty to one count of tax evasion in a San Jose court in November. On Monday, he was sentenced to 30 months on prison, followed by three years of supervised release, and ordered to pay $1.8 million in restitution.

FEDERAL DIARY: Florida Congressman Ross Discusses Federal Workforce Issues By Joe Davidson

Lining the walls of many Capitol Hill offices are politicians' photos showing them with fellow politicians and other famous folks.

In Dennis Ross's office, visitors are greeted by the wall-mounted heads of two wild boars and a deer. Nearby sits a stuffed turkey.

The trophies mark Ross, a Republican congressman from Florida, as an avid hunter. He can kill creatures with a rifle or a shotgun, but he prefers the bow and arrow. "I'd much rather archery hunt," Ross said. "It's just a relaxing challenge."

As chairman of the House federal workforce subcommittee, Ross also presents a challenge, though not a relaxing one, for federal workers who feel like prey these days. They are the target of more than 20 bills sponsored by Republicans, including Ross, that would hit their pay or benefits or reduce their number in the name of deficit reduction.

Ross talked with the Federal Diary on Tuesday about hunting, the Detroit Tigers (another passion) and federal workforce issues. Here is a transcript of that conversation, just the workforce part, that has been edited for clarity and length.

Report Exhibits - Page 000647

Federal Diary: Federal employees, their unions and Democrats say federal employees have sacrificed enough, through the two-year freeze on basic pay rates that will cost them $60 billion over 10 years and increased pension contributions for new workers that will save another $15 billion.

Ross: I understand their feelings. None of this is personal. Obviously, it would never be personal. But when we look at a workforce that's larger than it's ever been [actually government figures indicate it was larger 20 years ago and under President Ronald Reagan] ... in order to make sure there is a legacy benefit for them in the future, we've got to make these changes now.

I will point out that my pension bill [which would among other things increase employee contributions toward retirement] — the only reason I pushed that is because it applied to members of Congress and brought us into parity with federal workers. I have a very difficult time believing that we should change the federal workforce without changing congressional pensions the same way. ...

I'm never going to be popular, anything but popular, with them, but it's an issue [the government's financial situation] that we can't ignore, that we have to address. ...

If I had my druthers, I'd reshape the federal workforce to go after the GS, the General Schedule, because I think that's not adequately paying those who are performing well in the federal workforce. ... I think we hamstring the managers and supervisors because of the GS schedule.

How would you change the schedule?

I believe there should be some performance-based reward. ...

I think federal workers provide an incredibly valuable service to us. There is no question about it. I want to see us recruit and retain the best that we possibly can. ... To get the most out of employees who want to perform well, I think an incentive-based, a performance-based program is a good idea. We're not going to see that happen in this Congress. But it's a discussion. I would love to bring the federal employees to the table and get their input on it. They're the ones that know better.

President Obama's budget says there was one federal employee for every 92 residents in the 1950s and 1960s, and in 2011 it was one for every 145 residents. Do you feel the workforce needs to be cut even more?

There are a couple of things we need to look at, and one of them is contracting. We need to put just as much scrutiny on private contracting as we do on the federal workforce.

While ratio-wise we have reduced the size of the federal workforce, I think what we have to do is to start to fundamentally determine what are essential government functions. And then anything on top of that, if it is a private-sector function, then we shouldn't contract it, we should let the private sector handle it.

You favor cutting the federal workforce by attrition. What services are you willing to cut?

Report Exhibits - Page 000648

The GAO [Government Accountability Office] did an assessment of duplication of services. That's our starting point. We look at their report and find out what duplications we have and what we can consolidate. That might be more than enough to bring things in line. That data is available to us. It would be good to act on that.

As you can imagine, employees and managers in EO Determinations are furious. I've been receiving comments about the use of your words from all parts of TEGE and from IRS employees outside of TEGE (as far away as Seattle, WA).

I wasn't at the conference and obviously don't know what was stated and what wasn't. I realize that sometimes words are taken out of context. However, based on what is in print in the articles, it appears as though all the blame is being placed on Cincinnati. Joseph Grant and others who came to Cincinnati last year specially told the low-level workers in Cincinnati that no one would be "thrown under the bus." Based on the articles, Cincinnati wasn't publicly "thrown under the bus" instead was hit by a convoy of mack trucks.

Was it also communicated at that conference in Washington that the low-level workers in Cincinnati asked the Washington Office for assistance and the Washington Office took no action to provide guidance to the low-level workers?

One of the low-level workers in Cincinnati received a voice mail message this morning from the POA for one of his advocacy cases asking if the status would be changing per "Lois Lerner's comments." What would you like for us to tell the POA?

How am I supposed to keep the low-level workers motivated when the public believes they are nothing more than low-level and now will have no respect for how they are working cases? The attitude/morale of employees is the lowest it has ever been. We have employees leaving for the day and making comments to managers that "this low-level worker is leaving for the day." Other employees are making sarcastic comments about not being thrown under the bus. And still other employees are upset about how their family and friends are going to react to these comments and how it portrays the quality of their work.

The past year and a half has been miserable enough because of all of the auto revocation issues and the lack of insight from Executives to see a need for strategic planning that included having anyone from EO Determinations involved in the upfront planning of this work. Now, our leader is publicly referring to employees who are the ones producing all of this work with fewer resources than ever as low-level workers!

If reference to low-level workers wasn't made and/or blame wasn't placed on Cincinnati, please let me know ASAP and indicate what exactly was stated so that I can communicate that message to employees.

This may already have been decided by now, but, for my part, I think it would be a good idea to have TIGTA review this. I, of course, would want to have Sarah's input. If it is still an open question we could take it up on our evening call today. Is the call on?

I hope all is well.

Thanks - Joseph

This letter was published today in Paul streckfus ' EO Tax Journal 2012-53 . The letter is also on the organizations' web site. FYI, Landmark Legal was the organization that brought, and lost, a FOIA suit against IRS seeking disclosure of third party requests to investigate tax-exempt status of various politically active entities.

Conservative Legal Foundation Calls for Investigation of EO Division

March 23, 2012

Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration
P.O. Box 589
Ben Franklin Station
Washington, DC 20044-0589

Re: REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION INTO IRS AGENCY MISCONDUCT

To Whom It May Concern:

Landmark Legal Foundation ("Landmark") requests an immediate investigation into possible misconduct by the Internal Revenue Service's Exempt Organization (EO) Division that calls into question the integrity of federal tax administration and IRS programs.

Recent media reports indicate that the EO Division is using inappropriate and intimidating investigation tactics in the administration of applications for exempt status submitted by organizations associated with the Tea Party movement. (Exhibit A, Perry Chiaramonte, "Numerous Tea Party chapters claim IRS attempts to sabotage nonprofit status," FoxNews.com, <http://www.foxnews.com/politics/2012/02/28/numerous-tea-party-chapters-claim-irs-attempting-to-sabotage-non-profit-status/print/> (February 28, 2012)). Reports indicate that as many as 20 groups are being targeting for improper treatment. (Exhibit B, "IRS Accused of 'Intimidation Campaign' Against Tea Party," CNSNews.com, <http://cnsnews.com/news/article/irs-accused-intimidation-campaign-against-tea-party-groups> (March 7, 2012)).

The information demanded in many cases goes far beyond the appropriate level of inquiry regarding the religious, charitable and/or educational activities of a tax-exempt entity. The inquiries are not relevant to these permitted activities. Inquiries extend to organizational policy positions and priorities, personal and political affiliations, and associations of staff, board members and even family members of staff and board members. (Exhibit A). In at least one reported incident, the IRS requested an organization's relationship with a private individual who does not have any relationship with the applicant or with any political candidate or organization. (Exhibit C, Justin Binik-Thomas, "Why is the IRS asking Tea Party groups if they know me?", Washington Examiner, (<http://washingtonexaminer.com/2012/03/why-irs-asking-tea-party-groups-if-they-know-me/377566>) (March 16, 2012)).

Specific examples of improper inquiries from one IRS investigation include, but are not limited to, questions seeking:

5. List each past or present board member, officer, key employee and members of their families who:
  - a) Has served on the board of another organization.
  - b) Was, is or plans to be a candidate for public office. Indicate the nature of each candidacy.
  - c) Has previously conducted similar activities for another entity.
  - d) Has previously submitted an application for tax-exempt status.
8. Please provide the following regarding your merchandise sales:
  - a) A vendor list. Indicate if the vendor is a related party.
  - b) A list of items sold.
  - c) Your cost for each item.
  - d) The selling price of each item.

Report Exhibits - Page 000653

13. Fully describe your youth outreach program with the local school district.

14. Provide information regarding the Butler County Teen Age Republicans and your relationship.

16. Provide a list of all issues that are important to your organization. Indicate your position regarding each issue.

25. It appears you have received training (EmpowerU). Provide the following for all persons or organizations that have provided educational services to you:

- a) The name of the person or organization.
- b) A full description of the services provided.
- c) The political affiliation of the person or organization.
- d) A copy of the educational material used.

26. Provide details regarding your relationship with Justin Bink-Thomas (sic).

34. Has your organization engaged in any activities with the news media? If so, please describe those activities in further detail and, if available, provide copies of articles printed or transcripts of items aired because of that activity. News media activity may include the following:

- a) Newspaper advertisements
- b) Press releases
- c) Interviews with news media
- d) Letters to the editor
- e) Op-ed pieces

(Exhibit D, March 1, 2012 IRS Letter, http://binkthomas.com/sunshine/IRS\_Redact.pdf).

This level of inquiry goes well beyond the scope of the Form 1023 application for exempt status and appears to be improper. As you are aware, to qualify as a tax-exempt organization under 501(c)(3), the organization must prove that it is both organized and operated exclusively for tax-exempt purposes. Treas. Reg. Sec. 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(i)(a). To meet the organizational test, it must show that its Articles of Incorporation do not authorize it to undertake any non-exempt activity. 26 U.S.C. Sec. 501(c)(3)-1(b)(i)(iii). To meet the operational test, the organization must show that it operates exclusively for exempt purposes, that it has no substantial non-exempt purpose, and that no benefits inure from it to private individuals. Treas. Reg. Sec. 1.501(c)(3)-1(c). Any inquiry by the Service should be limited to determining whether an applicant satisfies both the "organizational" and "operation" tests. The questions presented herein go well beyond making such a determination.

Moreover, inquiries about personal associations and political viewpoints are not only inappropriate, but impinge upon constitutionally-protected freedoms of speech and association. Although the Internal Revenue Code has limited the tax exemption subsidy of 501(c)(3) organizations to groups that do not participate in political activity, the Service must still tread lightly when dealing with fundamental constitutional rights. Inquiring about the positions a prospective organization adopts on various policy issues serves no valid purpose if the organization does not engage in political activity. Such inquiries appear to be designed only to intimidate the applicants. As it has been upheld repeatedly by the Supreme Court, the government cannot regulate political speech with laws that chill permissible speech. Finally, reports that Tea Party-related organizations are being singled out for the IRS's intrusive inquiries raises serious questions about the propriety of the personnel involved in the evaluation of tax exemption applications.

Landmark Legal Foundation respectfully requests an immediate and thorough investigation to determine whether IRS employees are acting improperly in the evaluation of exempt status applications. This investigation also must determine whether the relevant IRS employees are acting at the direction of politically motivated

Yes, but Ron Bell already suggested that to them back in 2011. In their letter to Lungren, they wrote that they had carefully considered it and under IRS rules they are sure they are a c3.

Justin and I went over this one today. We are writing them an educational development letter. They do a lot of lobbying and haven't made the 501(h) election. That's their big problem. They don't have a lawyer and think that they qualify for c/3 as long as they don't endorse or give money to candidates. They also have some ubit issues (offering Tea Party stuff for a "donation"), some political intervention (again, it seems like they don't know the rules), and their website links to lots of orgs which could cause them attribution problems.

At this point, they haven't demonstrated they qualify for c/3. I'm not sure they can, but we figured one more development letter that educated them (in the absence of having their own counsel) would be more appropriate (and understandable) than a denial.

Lois,

Attached is the incoming and draft response to the Lungren letter. You had seen this earlier but I updated the letter with the Nikole's language from Marchant with a sentence or two from Bousanty and Levin - the comments indicate where the language was taken from.

The organization referred to in the correspondence is a c3 applicant that we bucketed in Cincinnati. The reviewers recommended a proposed denial. The response to Rep. Lungren does not mention that the applicant may be receiving a denial.

The file does contain a privacy release.

I'll walk down paper copies for you if you would like .

Thanks,
Andy

Lois,

Attached for your review and transmission to Counsel is the first draft advocacy case denial. [REDACTED] attachment to the letter and this case is not a close call, I would recommend that we ask Counsel to limit its review to the letter and not plunge into its own review of this sizeable file. As we discussed a few weeks ago, we have roughly 70 cases in bucket 4 (many of which date back to 2010) so we really do need to move this letter that we think will serve as somewhat of a template for other denials. I realize Counsel has many other things on its plate so I'm not asking for them to turn this around in a few weeks but I think we can help speed their review by limiting what we are asking them to review.

B. Timeline for informal technical assistance which was provided by EOT Personnel to EOD between May 2010 to October 2010

- 4/25/2010 → EOD emailed EOT (Manager Steve Grodnitzky) regarding who EOD should contact for help on "advocacy organization" cases being held in screening.
- 5/17/2010 → EOD personnel (Liz Hofacre) contacted and referred 2 proposed development letters to an EOT personnel (Chip Hull) for informal review.
- Between May, 2010 to October 2010, EOT personnel (Chip Hull) informally reviewed approximately 26 case exemption applications and development letters on behalf of EOD. Mr. Hull provided feedback on most of the 26 exemption applications.
- From early October to late November, 2011, EOT personnel screened 162 exemption applications (via TEOS) pending in EOD to determine whether the organizations are in fact advocacy organizations, and whether the applications needed to be developed.

C. Timeline for preparation of the Guide sheet

- Late July 2011 - started drafting the guide sheet to help EOD personnel working political advocacy cases in differentiating between the different types of advocacy and explaining the advocacy rules pertaining to various exempt organizations.
- Early November 2011 - forwarded to EOD for comments. No comments were received.

Thank you very much Lois for the initial feedback.

We welcome the opportunity to collaborate with your team to get this document to meet your needs and objectives. It might be helpful for us to have a call/meeting where we can walk through what we were trying to accomplish and why we took out some things. We often were trying to streamline and avoid duplication, but also wanted to deliver something we were completely comfortable with (even if incomplete). We're happy to discuss needed additions/changes. The chart was tough for us, as we found it somewhat misleading and not completely accurate in its brevity; we'll think about ways to revive it.

Please let us know when it might be helpful to talk/meet.

Thanks--we are all looking and will probably have comments. I looked quickly last night and overall like the approach. I do think, however, that we need more upfront text explaining why this is a difficult determination. Your paper is great for lawyers who understand the facts and circumstances grayness, but I think we need to add a more "practical" piece in the introduction, as well. Also, I noticed you took out the chart on different types of orgs and what they can do--I'd like that added back in--I think it clearly illustrates to the non-expert that this isn't even once size fits all for the requirements--we have given it to the press with good results in the past.

I just spoke with Chip Hull and Elizabeth Kastenbergh about 6763 cases they have that are related to the Tea Party - 6763 a (c)(3) application and the 6763 a (c)(4) application. I recommended that they develop the private benefit argument further and that they coordinate with Counsel. They also mentioned that there are a number of other (c)(3) and (c)(4) applications of orgs related to the Tea Party that are currently in Cincinnati. Apparently the plan had been to send one of each to DC to develop a position to be applied to the others. Given the sensitivity of the issue and the need (I believe) to coordinate with Counsel, I think it would be beneficial to have the other cases worked in DC as well. I understand that there may be TAS inquiries on some of the cases.

The last information I have is that there are approx. 40 Tea Party cases in Determinations. With so many EOT and Guidance folks tied up with ACA (cases and Guidance) and the possibility looming that we may have to work reinstatement cases up here to prevent a backlog in Determinations, I have serious reservations about our ability to work all of the Tea Party cases out of this office.

I just sent Nan the email we discussed a few minutes ago. I will forward to you as well. [REDACTED] was referred by someone outside but it was also in our list of referred orgs that we mistakenly sent to the ROO. I have kept that in our list of referrals for completeness even though Exam already has that one. For expediency sake, I sent the redacted versions of the denial letters. Do you think we need to send the unredacted versions? I will need to get my hands on those.

I have tracked down the pending [REDACTED] app. It was in EOT. We issued a proposed denial and TP did not protest. Case is now closed as protest time has elapsed.

Michelle, here is today's New York Times article about the 501(c)(4) organizations denied exempt status. The article suggests that organizations applying for exempt status may receive disparate treatment based on the location of the IRS office reviewing the application.

3 Groups Denied Break By I.R.S. Are Named

By STEPHANIE STROM

Three nonprofit advocacy groups that were denied tax exemption by the Internal Revenue Service were all units of Emerge America, an organization devoted to cultivating female political leaders for local, state and federal government.

The I.R.S. denied tax exemption to the groups — Emerge Nevada, Emerge Maine and Emerge Massachusetts — because, the agency wrote in denial letters, they were set up specifically to cultivate Democratic candidates. Their Web sites ask for evidence that participants in their training programs are Democrats.

News of the I.R.S. decision, which surfaced in heavily redacted denial letters to the groups that were posted to the agency's Web site last Thursday, raised concerns among advocacy groups, known as 501(c)(4) organizations after the section of the tax code that governs them, at large.

Crossroads GPS, a conservative advocacy organization with ties to Karl Rove, the Republican strategist, sent an e-mail to supporters on Tuesday, assuring them that it was not one of the three groups denied exemption.

Karen Middleton, president of Emerge America, acknowledged on Wednesday that the three state organizations had been denied an exemption. She said the groups were in the process of converting into 527 organizations, which are also tax-exempt but disclose their donors, unlike 501(c)(4) groups.

"We're all small organizations," Ms. Middleton said. "We train about 25 Democratic women each year in each state where we work, and we don't engage in any work that involved candidates or campaigns."

The I.R.S. has approved five other state Emerge organizations — in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Wisconsin and Kentucky — as advocacy groups.

"It's just bizarre," said Kimberly Ellis, executive director of Emerge California. "Nevada has been around and waiting for approval for the last five years, and in the interim, Oregon and Kentucky are established and file for their approval — and Kentucky gets it but Nevada, Maine and Massachusetts don't."

Michelle Eldridge, an I.R.S. spokeswoman, said the agency could not comment on individual taxpayers.

Paul Streckfus, a former I.R.S. official, said such inconsistency was not unusual. In part, it is because the office that handles approval of tax-exempt groups, he said, receives hundreds if not thousands of applications a day at its office in Cincinnati. Some of the applications are then sent for processing at field offices around the country, and, in some cases, to headquarters in Washington.

"My guess is that the one that recently got approved went to a different office than the ones that were denied, which seem to have been handled in Washington," Mr. Streckfus said.

Ms. Ellis said Kentucky's application was processed in an I.R.S. office in the Western United States. She did not know where the still-pending application of Emerge Oregon ended up.

Lois,

In preparation for the meeting this afternoon, I asked the team to forward the criteria we used during our review of case files. I believe this may shed some light on the basis of our opinions as to whether cases should have been sent to the advocacy group or not. Since the IRS criteria changed several times over the years, we first asked Holly what should be in the advocacy group and then followed up later in the review to ensure that we were using the correct criteria. Holly stated that "the screeners are looking for cases with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention, not lobbying or issue advocacy." Therefore, our criteria focuses upon political campaign intervention similar to the IRS criteria that is in effect today: "501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), 501(c)(5), and 501(c)(6) organizations with indicators of significant amounts of political campaign intervention (raising questions as to exempt purpose and/or excess private benefit)".

Below is the specific criteria we used to determine if cases should go to the advocacy group:

- Any candidate forums/debates or candidate speakers which do not specifically state they are non-partisan.
- Any voter registration, voter education, voter guides, or get-out-the-vote drives which do not specifically state they are non-partisan.
- Any activity or relationship with an elected official or candidate for office.
- Any relationship with a Political Action Committee (PAC) that shows possible co-mingling of funds or activities.
- Response to Form 1024, Part II, Question 15, is Yes with no statement about the current amount of activity (percentage) being planned or performed. (Statements about possible future activity were not considered political campaign intervention.)
- Response to Form 1024, Part II, Question 15, is blank
- Response to Form 1023, Part VIII, Question 1, is Yes with no statement about the current amount of activity (percentage) being planned or performed. (Statements about possible future activity were not considered political campaign intervention.)
- Response to Form 1023, Part VIII, Question 1, is blank
- Any political campaign activity that totals 35 percent or more. (We considered 35 percent a significant amount of activity warranting follow-up to ensure it is not the primary activity of the organization.)

I'm looking forward to our discussion.

Draft January 24, 2008 9 pm

TO: Lois G. Lerner
Director, Exempt Organizations

FROM: Steven T. Miller
Commissioner, Tax Exempt and Government Entities

SUBJECT: 2008 Political Campaign Season

This outlines what I believe TE/GE should accomplish in the Political Activities Campaign Initiative for the 2008 election cycle.

As you know, this is the fourth year third election year in which we have used of our focused approach to this area. Our goals for 2008 include those we have established in the past, including a continued emphasis on PACI's education and compliance components. As described below, I also believe it is an appropriate time to shift the program's focus in two key areas:

- ~~The Which~~ cases we pursue for examination.
- ~~Additional Targeted~~ guidance in ~~targeted-specific~~ areas of concern.

Education.

Our first goal ~~has been, and continues to be,~~ is to educate the community. I continue to believe that the vast majority of individuals and organizations will comply with the rules that Congress has established in this area if they have sufficient notice of those rules and guidance concerning them.

~~To meet that goal, we therefore need to use the knowledge we have gained through two previous elections, and redouble our outreach efforts to reach out to the tax-exempt community, and to continue our very real efforts to educate in this area. In this regard, I ask you to consider the following believe we need to pursue steps:~~

- ~~Targeted Communications to reach the right targeted at the various (the most vulnerable? Not sure where we're going) segments of the tax-exempt community.~~
- ~~More widespread use of our new-outreach methods (e.g., EO Update, phone forums).~~

Please put together an educational plan that we can discuss later this month.

Administrative Tolerances.—While, Although I believe most taxpayers will comply with the law, once they know what it is understand the rules, it is also is clear that some will seek to approach the outer boundaries of what is permissible, and others will test the waters beyond.

As we know, in addition, experience has shown that some well intentioned people will take these actions of concern as a matter of faith or conviction. We need to be attuned to the sensitivity of this area, and the presence of various rights and responsibilities that at times may seem difficult to reconcile.

Even recognizing this sensitivity, however, our second goal this year is to maintain a credible enforcement presence that will both promote voluntary compliance and confront instances of meaningful noncompliance.

Due to the vagaries of the budget process we will not have the resources in 2008 we originally expected. Moreover, PACI is but one of a large number of competing priorities within TE/GE. Therefore, I ask you to consider some shifts in approach for this year's PACI program and focus on the more egregious cases of political intervention.

- In cases in which the allegation indicates an apparent minor violation of the campaign intervention rules, I ask that you not open an examination, but rather design an alternative approach that would, but address the situation by educational contacts and follow-up as appropriate with the organization. By "minor" violation, I mean one that is unlikely to lead to revocation because it involves a single discrete event, or the imposition of section 4955 excise taxes because it does not involve significant expenditures.
- In the case of churches, section 7611 procedures will have to be followed, but it may be possible to close these cases at the inquiry stage rather than opening an examination.
- By "minor" violation, I mean one that is unlikely to lead to revocation or the imposition of section 4955 excise taxes. Generally, this would involve an allegation of a single discrete event that does not call the organization's tax-exemption into question, or appear to involve significant expenditures.

While Although this will result in fewer cases being pursued through traditional examinations, this does not mean we will not pursue all cases. It is not my intent to remove ourselves from in this area.

Instead, I ask that you to continue to work with Counsel to pursue -- and litigate as necessary -- those particular cases that are either the more egregious, have widespread impact, or that raise core issues of law we feel believe must be pursued.

Focus areas for 2008. There are several areas, which have raised particular challenges for PACI, which that I believe are ripe for focus in 2008. These are among the areas that have raised particular challenges for us in PACI. These focus areas upon which we will focus are intended to illustrate and reinforce the boundaries of the political intervention prohibition, thereby advancing -- This will advance the ability of the well-intentioned to comply, as well as our ability to regulate.

We must pursue the right cases in these areas that will best clarify the boundaries of the prohibition. In some instances these cases will need that will mean to proceeding to litigation, so it is imperative that we continue to work closely with Counsel.

The Focus Areas are:

Internet. The first area I would like you to focus on is selecting the right cases in which the Internet is used as an issue advocacy tool, but arguably, also can be considered also for political campaign purposes a tool for political intervention. Specifically, we need to consider:

- What is the consequence of an organization placing a link on its website a link that leads the visitor to objectionable campaign material?
- Whether is such a link more in the nature of a referral or of a distribution? That is, when is the material shall we attribute the material on the linked sites attributable to the charity?

I would pursue cases to best focus on these issues. You should pursue cases where the content on the (c)(3) site contains violative campaign material or where the charity site links to violative campaign material, and it would be reasonable for a person seeing the content on the (c)(3) site would reasonably load the viewer to believe campaign material appears on the linked site [lets play with this]. I continue to believe that a charity has the responsibility for its decisions to link to other sites and the obligation to review such sites for objectionable material on a regular basis. That does not mean an organization is responsible for all material on the links (See, 2007-41, example --). Moreover, it

Comment [MSOffice6]: again I think you are telling us that what we will do is select, this doesn't sound like a directive.

Comment [MSOffice6]: seems this should only be included in report if so, we need to specify otherwise and the focus would be on the material used seems to me that the proximity of the objectionable material to the (c)(3) site is quite important in the review of the facts surrounding a particular case.
Formatted: font color: Black, Not Hidden, Highlight

That's what I said, however, as we select cases in this area, I believe we need to delay pursuing cases involving a link between the (c)(3) organization and its own affiliated (c)(4)'s landing page. I would reserve work on links between related organizations (at least links between the charity site and the landing page of the affiliated social welfare organization) until we have resolved, through guidance or otherwise, the constitutional implications of any restrictions. These implications are outlined in the Taxation With Representation of Washington (TWR) case (See, Mr. Justice Blackmun's concurring opinion). Although I do not believe TWR bars action by the IRS on all related links, before taking a position, we must review the area and ensure the community is on notice of our concerns in the area of links to related sites. Perhaps it is time to once again discuss the suggested project for 2008 that would review the flow of funds and other resources by and between a number of affiliated groups of organizations that include a (c)(3), a (c)(4) and a 527 organization.

I would reserve work on links between related organizations (at least links between the charity site and the landing page of the affiliated social welfare organization) until we have resolved, through guidance or otherwise, the constitutional implications of any restrictions. These implications are outlined in the Taxation With Representation of Washington case (See, Mr. Justice Blackmun's concurring opinion). Perhaps it is time to once again discuss the suggested project for 2008 that would review the flow of funds and other resources by and between a number of affiliated groups of organizations that include a (c)(3), a (c)(4) and a 527 organization.

Issue Advocacy. A second focus area is the boundary between issue advocacy and campaign intervention in what is outside the internet area. Revenue Ruling 2007-41 sets forth factors to analyze in making a determination whether an act is issue advocacy or campaign intervention or both.

There have been sufficient challenges to our position in this area involving a multitude of divergent fact patterns. It may be prudent to pursue one or more cases to allow a court to review the factors outlined in the revenue ruling. In fact, we may wish to include in those cases selected one that raises not only the validity of the factors, but some of the arguments being proffered concerning religious speech (see the RFRA discussion below).

At this time I would only proceed only on cases that identify, directly or otherwise, specific candidate(s) or election(s). This is not to say that I wish we should to Comment (MSOffice7): Should we be working on that case?

Formatted: Font color: Black, Not Hidden, Highlight Formatted: Font color: Black, Highlight follow an express advocacy standard. However, I believe that the examples given in 2007-41 indicate the need for some specificity, even if a name or other specific identifier is not present.

So, for example, a single issue voters' guide that does not focus directly or indirectly on a particular candidate or election will present unique issues. Such a guide may not be ~~an~~ meet the test to be an educational voters' guide under our Revenue Rulings, but may be issue advocacy versus campaign intervention based on whether it serves to specifically identify a particular candidate or election. Of course, all the facts ~~might~~ would have to be reviewed, including the method of distribution. The context in which such an issue advocacy piece is distributed must be analyzed. If such a guide is distributed with a statement or other action tying a particular candidate or election to a position, campaign intervention may occur. [Don't even remotely like the flow here...]

Political contributions. I applaud your efforts to address ~~direct~~ contributions made by charities to political candidates, and expect that those types of cases will remain an important examination focus during 2008.

Section 527. Due to the application of election laws, we may see some drift of political work from PACs to social welfare organizations and other non-charities. I expect your office to develop an examination project to ensure that such organizations are not exceeding permissible limits on political activity, should not in reality be taxed as section 527 organizations, and are in any event paying the appropriate tax on political expenditures as required under section 527(f). HUH? Can we at least make it clear that this won't happen this year? We can't look at their returns until next year.

Guidance.

This leads to the third goal for this year: I believe we must clarify our interpretation of the law in certain areas, and act to obtain certainty with respect to several of our legal positions. We can do some of this by issuing additional guidance, or, where our guidance is challenged, by seeking confirmation of our position in the courts. But guidance is preferred. The following areas are preferred topics for guidance:

[What areas do we think? Internet? American Campaign Academy? C4/527 payments?]

I believe we ~~ourselves~~ need guidance to better understand ~~ac 40~~ the impact of ~~the~~ Religious Freedom Restoration Act. We need to work through the possible application of the RFRA, and whether ~~it~~ Although I do not believe it presents a bar or is applicable in this area (See, wasn't it Church of Pierce Creek? Pull from counsel support memo on AS), it may make sense to resolve any debate by asking for the views of the Department of Justice. As we proceed, I ask that you work with Counsel to raise this with the Tax Division of DOJ, and with the Office of Legal Counsel, if necessary if imposes substantive and procedural constraints on our work in this area.

While I do not believe it presents a bar or is applicable in this area (See, wasn't it Church at Pierce Creek? Pull from counsel support memo on AS), it may make sense to resolve any debate by asking for the views of the Department of Justice. As we proceed, task that you work with Counsel to raise this with the Tax Division of DOJ, and with the Office of Legal Counsel, if necessary.

Conclusion

At the same time that we focus on the areas I have outlined above – education, enforcement presence, and guidance – we must continue to use our PACI experience to assess the effectiveness of the limited, and somewhat flawed, statutory tools available to us to address instances of political intervention, and to identify any trends that cause concern in this area.

The PACI initiative has given us an important insight into a variety of activities and issues in the political campaign area. As we continue our work in this area during the 2008 campaign season, we must focus our examination resources on more egregious cases, and work to identify those issues where we should enhance clarity or obtain certainty through administrative guidelines or litigation. We must continue to use education, including through the PACI referral review process and our outreach programs, to notify organizations of the political intervention rules.

Godspeed....

- ① We have seen increase in # of Applications 2008 1400
2011 2342
12 3400
- ② Including those doing Advocacy Work
- ③ Front Line folks in C&N decided to centralize the work - to group cases for consistency
- ④ Do this in difficult areas where we see trends credit counseling
- ⑤ Problem came in how we centralized
- ⑥ Front line folks collected based on name - Tea Party / Patriot were used
- ⑦ This ~~was not done by~~ is not how we should do things - it was a mistake
- ⑧ But not a political vendetta - it was an error in judgment efficient but not sensitive nor appropriate Our PB is looking at this
- ⑨ These cases ~~are~~ also lingered for too long and received development letters that were too broad - example donor lists
- ⑩ We took action when it was raised
- A) Fixed the process to centralize -- High level Review
  - B) Sorted the cases now half of the 300 C4 are done 120 approved to WH
  - C) Gave more flexibility on responding to requests for info
  - D) Improved coordination
- ⑪ So - we did make errors -- and people waited too long in some instances for which I apologize but we have fixed the issues

I can live with their draft, because I am assuming Counsel wants to make the point that that there is no percentage established for any term in the regulations (not for exclusively, not for primarily, not for anything else).

That being said, the issue on the table, as the comments in the press in the last few months demonstrate, is that many practitioners, public interest types, and some members believe that "less than primary" means less than 50%. Levin seems to think that too, as his question is not about "exclusive" but instead about the "primary" standard and he seems to think is the apparent 51-49 percentage test. (Specifically, Levin asks if it is the position of the IRS that a (c)(4) can engage in what he calls nonpartisan political intervention as a secondary activity, "and that political activity can consume up to 49% of the entities expenditures and resources?"

FYI, among the questions I would ask an IRS witness at a hearing is why, after all these years, the IRS has not defined primary, or given any indication as to what facts and circumstances the IRS uses in determining whether a (c)(4)'s activities primarily benefit public or private interests. Mr/Ms Witness, don't you think vagueness might scare honest folks away from doing things they are permitted to do, but be exploited by those who want to take advantage of (c)(4) although they are not legitimate social welfare orgs? Doesn't vagueness leave the IRS open to charges of arbitrary enforcement?

Section 501(c)(4) describes organizations that operate exclusively for the promotion of social welfare. The Treasury regulations provide that an organization operates exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it primarily engages in promoting the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. The regulations also provide that the promotion of social welfare does not include direct or indirect participation or intervention in political campaigns on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office. Treasury and the Service have stated in published guidance that an organization may carry on lawful political activities and continue to be described in section 501(c)(4) as long as it is primarily engaged in activities that promote social welfare.

The regulations do not establish an explicit percentage test. Rather, to determine whether an organization operates primarily for the promotion of social welfare, the courts and the Service consider all the facts and circumstances, including but not limited to the organization's stated purposes, expenditures, principal source of revenue, number of employees and volunteers, and time and effort.

I'm concerned that this response will meet with a fair amount of frustration on the Hill because the question asks very specifically whether 49% works. I recognize the regulations don't specify a percentage and that we have not taken a position on one but I don't think we can completely ignore the percentage portion of the question but rather have to indicate that the regulations do not establish a specific percentage but rather establish a "principle" activity standard . . . .

In other words don't think the answer can pretend the word percentage is not in the question although I do understand why it is hard to engage with.

Steve and Sharon,

We have discovered some new components to the Acorn-Related Category listed on the BOLO Tab as Issue #3. Specifically, we have identified two additional Acorn-Related coming out of Pennsylvania both sharing the same address. As was the situation the currently assigned two New York cases, one is applying as a c(3) and one as a c(4). The officers of the organizations had prior affiliations with Acorn as members of boards on various chapters. The names of the applicants are as follows:

1. [REDACTED] = 501(c)(3) Applicant
2. [REDACTED] = 501(c)(4) Applicant

Overall, I would suggest an alert be sent informing agents/screeners that to be on the lookout for the following name an application factors associated with Acorn related cases. Additionally, during the next spreadsheet update, add these factors to the Watch Issue Description section for this category. Name and Application Factors are as follows:

1. The name(s) Neighborhoods for Social Justice or Communities Organizing for Change
2. Activities that mention Voter Mobilization of the Low-Income/Disenfranchised
3. Advocating for Legislation to Provide for Economic, Heathcare, and Housing Justice for the poor.
4. Educating Public Policy Makers (i.e Politicians) on the above subjects

This document is still very much a work in progress (various Counsel and IRS people have worked on it), but it gives some insight into the state of things and what they should be.

EXCLUSIVELY STANDARD UNDER § 501(c)(4)

Questions Considered:

1. How have courts interpreted the exclusively standard under § 501(c)(4)?
2. How has the IRS interpreted the exclusively standard under § 501(c)(4)?
3. How is the amount of activity not furthering exempt purposes measured?

Part I provides the statutory and regulatory background. Part II summarizes cases that discuss the exclusively standard under § 501(c)(4). Part III covers IRS administrative materials (Rev. Ruls., the IRM and GCMs and other memoranda). The appendix contains some sample questions that could be used as guidance for agents when measuring the amounts of activity that do and do not further exempt purposes.

I. STATUTE & REGULATIONS

The (c)(3) and (c)(4) statutes use nearly identical language in establishing the operational standard required for an organization to be described within the meaning of either section: the organization must be "operated exclusively for" the exempt purposes approved under § 501(c)(3) or § 501(c)(4).

§ 501(c)(4)(A)

"Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare"

§ 501(c)(3)

"Corporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes"

As shown below, the regulations under each subsection use nearly identical language in relevant parts, stating that an organization is operated exclusively for its respective purposes if it:

| § 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i)                                              | § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1)                                                                   |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "...is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good..." | "...engages primarily in conducting activities which accomplish its exempt purposes..." |

However, the (c)(3) regulations go on to state that an organization will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose.

§ 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)

"(i) An organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. An organization embraced within this section is one which is operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements."

"(ii) Political or social activities. The promotion of social welfare does not include direct or indirect participation or intervention in political campaigns on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office. Nor is an organization operated primarily for the promotion of social welfare if its primary activity is operating a social club for the benefit, pleasure, or recreation of its members, or is carrying on a business with the general public in a manner similar to organizations which are operated for profit."

§ 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1)

"An organization will be regarded as 'operated exclusively' for one or more exempt purposes only if it engages primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of such exempt purposes specified in section 501(c)(3). An organization will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose"

Notes from the Archived Files on T.D. 6391

The regulations under sections 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) above were written as part of the same T.D. A draft of the proposed (c)(3) regulations dated December 5, 1958 contains this language:

1.501(c)(3)-1(c) Operational Test -- (1) Primary activities. An organization is operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes only if it engages primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of the purposes specified in section 501(c)(3). An organization shall not be considered to be engaged primarily in activities which accomplish one or more exempt purposes if a substantial part of its activities are not in furtherance of an exempt purpose.

This draft was reviewed by Arch M. Cantrall, who in a signed memorandum to one of the drafters, Mr. Rose, dated January 12, 1959, stated:

Report Exhibits - Page 000692

To me there is one particularly dangerous possibility of a variation in the meaning being ascribed to a difference in wording. This runs throughout this draft.

... the phrase "otherwise than as an insubstantial part of its activities" [in § 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(1)(i)(b)] is, to me, a well-stated and important test, and I think that this formula should be consistently used throughout.

But, for example, [in § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1)] I see the test of "primary", which implies that something is "secondary" and, if "secondary" is permissible. I doubt that proposition.

And in the same paragraph, (c)(1), the test is "a substantial part" [referring to the draft language cited above].

Now if these are necessary or proper, I will not argue. But I do not think so. And these variations run on in other places, to create even more confusion.

The question is, I believe, how much leeway do we intend to allow. Code 501(c)(3) says that the organization shall be organized and operated "exclusively".

But, for example, in [(c)(1)] we interpret "exclusively" to mean "primary" and say also that it "will not be so regarded if a substantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose".

I cannot read "exclusively" as "primary" or as allowing a degree of nonexempt activity up to the "substantial" level. I think we concede too much.

... Now I agree that "exclusively" in the statute may by regulation be construed to mean "not more than an insubstantial part" under the de minimis rule, and I think it should be. But I feel strongly that when we have once done so, we should stick to it.

I do not think that we have authority by regulation to construe "exclusively" as "primary" or "substantial", etc.

The language in § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1) was changed two days later, in a draft dated December 7, 1958, to read "no more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose." This phrase matches the language of the existing final regulations.

An even earlier version of § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1), dated August 6, 1958, read:

For an organization to . . . be operated exclusively for one or more of the purposes specified in section 501(c)(3), its operations must be conducted exclusively for the accomplishment of an exempt purpose that is set forth in the articles of organization, and such operations must be duly authorized in the manner prescribed by its constitution, by-laws or articles of organization, which must be in accordance with state law. In case an organization properly acts under an implied power which is necessary or appropriate to carry out its stated exempt purpose and is not forbidden by the terms of its articles of organization, such acts will ordinarily be regarded as being within the exempt purpose. However, any act of the organization not devoted to the accomplishment of its exempt purpose, or not incidental thereto, exceeds the organization's power and authority and, if substantial, constitutes a proper basis for denying or revoking an exemption.

This August 6, 1958 draft was submitted to Treasury for its views. Hand revisions made on this draft delete this language entirely without explanation.

The "primarily" language contained in current Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2) was not present in the August 6, 1958 draft submitted to Treasury. Rather, the regulation provided:

A civil league or organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it engages in a civic enterprise in which individuals cooperate to promote in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community.

This version did contain "primarily" in the next sentence, which appears in the existing, final regulation: "Organizations embraced within this section include those which are operated primarily for the purpose of bringing about civil or social changes." There were no other relevant notes or revisions to the (c)(4) regulations.

II. § 501(c)(4) CASE LAW

Many courts, when discussing the requirements for tax-exemption under § 501(c)(4), follow the Supreme Court's holding in Better Business Bureau v. United States for the proposition that the presence of a substantial non-exempt purpose will prevent exemption. 326 U.S. 279, 283-284 (1945) (interpreting a provision of the Social Security Act that "was drawn almost verbatim from" § 501(c)(3)). Courts have not differentiated between having a "substantial non-exempt purpose" and failing to be "primarily operated for exempt purposes"; sometimes they equate the two concepts. These cases post-date the issuance of the regulations under §§ 501(c)(3) and (4).

1. CIR v. Lake Forest, Inc.

305 F.2d 814, 818, 820 (4th Cir. 1962)

In 1947, Lake Forest Inc., a nonprofit, nonstock corporation, was incorporated by World War II veterans to acquire a public housing project to provide housing to veterans of WWI and WWII. Membership in the corporation was established by purchasing a dwelling unit in the project, and membership was limited to the number of dwellings available. Each member paid a monthly operating payment to satisfy the monthly debt owed on the purchase price of the project. Upon dissolution, all assets would be distributed to the members in accordance with their respective equities.

The court held that the organization and operation of Lake Forest was not "exclusively for the promotion of social welfare" because it largely was in the nature of an economic and private cooperative undertaking.

Relevant language from CIR v. Lake Forest, Inc.:

- "At all events, taxpayer's operations are not 'exclusively' of the type the statute demands. 'Civic' pretensions and considerations of 'social welfare' aside, plainly other substantial realizations motivated and are envisioned by the corporation."
- "But we do decide that the organization and operation of Lake Forest, Inc. are not 'exclusively for the promotion of social welfare', since they partake largely of the nature of an economic and private cooperative undertaking."
- "The impact on the tax status of purposes other than those required to be 'exclusive' under such an act of Congress is bluntly stated in Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283, 66 S.Ct. 112, 90 L.Ed. 67 (1945) in not too different circumstances: '* * * In order to fall within the claimed exemption, an organization must be devoted to educational purposes exclusively. This plainly means that the presence of a single noneducational purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly educational purposes.'"

2. People's Educ. Camp Soc'y, Inc. v. CIR, 39 T.C. 756, 767, 769 (1963), aff'd 331 F.2d 923, 930-931, 932 (2d Cir. 1964)

People's Educational Camp Society (the corporation) was incorporated in 1920 and purchased 2,196 acres in the Pocono Mountains that had served as a summer camp and recreation area. The corporation named the property Tamiment. During the year in issue (1956), Tamiment was one of the most modern resorts in Pennsylvania, and it charged guests substantial amounts for access to Tamiment. The corporation also "sponsored and promoted several activities relating in general to social welfare" in New York City. From 1953 through 1957, the corporation's total revenues were more than $4.76M (approximately $4.45M from Tamiment), and its expenditures on social welfare activities were $204,969.

Report Exhibits - Page 000695

Relevant language from People's Educ. Camp Soc'y, Inc. v. CIR:

- The court concluded "that petitioner's activities in operating the resort at Tamiment . . . [were] not 'exclusively,' or even principally or primarily, 'for the promotion of social welfare' within the meaning of the statute."
- "The word 'exclusively' as used in the statute has not been given a strict interpretation, so as to foreclose every operation for a non-exempt purpose no matter how insubstantial, but rather has been interpreted to mean 'primarily.' Debs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc. v. Commissioner, supra, 148 F.2d at 952; see Sugarman & Pomeroy, Business Income of Exempt Organizations, 46 Va.L.Rev. 424, 425 (1960). Stated another way, 'the presence of a single * * * (non-exempt) purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly * * * (exempt) purposes.' Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283, 66 S.Ct. 112, 114, 90 L.Ed. 67 (1945)."

3. American Women Buyers Club, Inc. v. U.S., 235 F. Supp. 668, 672-673 (S.D.N.Y. 1963), aff'd 338 F.2d 526, 528-529 (2d Cir. 1964)

American Women Buyers Club (the Club) was incorporated to promote the welfare of ready-to-wear buyers, conduct social engagements for members, maintain a spirit of cooperation among members, and aid members in times of distress. Membership was limited to women with at least three years experience as principal ready-to-wear buyers. The Club helped members get work when they were unemployed, held lectures that helped members in their various positions, and assisted members in locating merchandise. During the years in issue the Club's total contribution to charitable organizations totaled $1,700 and it had an accumulated surplus of $92,587.15.

The court held that the Club was not operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare because only a limited number of women buyers were admitted to the club; the services were primarily, if not exclusively, rendered to the members; benefits solely were for members and not the public; and payments to charities were incidental to the operation of the Club. The court noted "even a cursory examination of the [Internal Revenue] rulings [the Club relied on] reveals a substantial difference in the scope and breadth of services rendered by those taxpayers compared to the present taxpayer."

Relevant language from American Women Buyers Club, Inc. v. U.S.:

- "[D]o taxpayer's other activities recited above preclude a finding that taxpayer is operated 'exclusively' for this purpose? A recent decision of this court, People's Educ. Camp Soc'y, Inc. v. Commissioner, 331 F.2d 923, 931 (2 Cir. 1964), cert. denied 85 S.Ct. 75 (U.S. Oct. 12, 1964), furnishes us with the legal standard to be applied:
- The word 'exclusively' as used in the statute has not been given a strict interpretation, so as to foreclose every operation for a non-exempt purpose no matter how insubstantial, but rather has been interpreted to mean 'primarily.' Debs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc. v. Commissioner, supra, 148 F.2d at 952; see Sugarman & Pomeroy, Business Income of Exempt Organizations, 46 Va.L.Rev. 424, 425 (1960). Stated another way, 'the presence of a single * * * (non-exempt) purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly * * * (exempt) purposes.' Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283, 66 S.Ct. 112, 114, 90 L.Ed. 67 (1945)."

Report Exhibits - Page 000696

- "The district court's finding that taxpayer pursues substantial non-exempt purposes was supported by substantial proof."
- "Taxpayer contends that these non-exempt activities are merely ancillary to its basic purpose . . . We disagree . . . Taxpayer's statement of purposes . . . confirms our conclusion that these are not merely ancillary activities."

4. Contracting Plumbers Coop. Restoration Corp. v. U.S., 488 F.2d 684 (2d Cir. 1974)

Plumbers formed a private, nonprofit cooperative whose sole purpose was to ensure efficient repairs of "cuts" made in streets by its members in the course of plumbing activities.

The court held that the cooperative provided substantial and different benefits to both the public and its private members. Accordingly it was not "primarily" devoted to the common good "by even the most liberal reading of IRC § 501(c)(4)."

Relevant language from Contracting Plumbers Coop. Restoration Corp. v. U.S.:

- "[W]e adhere to the rule that the presence of a single substantial non-exempt purpose precludes exempt status regardless of the number or importance of the exempt purposes." [Citing in part Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283 (1945)]
- "In applying this standard, we think at least four factors are relevant. First, we must look to the formative history of the organization (was there a substantial business interest in taxpayer's formation). . . . Second, we have the embodiment of that completely legitimate, but nevertheless private, interest in the taxpayer's bylaws. . . . while . . . it is not conclusive, we nevertheless think it is probative as to the taxpayer's non-exempt purpose . . . Third, we have the taxpayer's actual operation. Here there can be no doubt that the cooperative is of tremendous value to the private economic interests of its members — a clearly non-exempt purpose. . . . Finally, we have the fact that each member of the cooperative enjoys these economic benefits precisely to the extent that he uses, and pays for, it . . ."

5. Mutual Aid Ass'n of the Church of the Brethren v. U.S., 578 F. Supp. 1451, 1456-1457 (D. Kan. 1983), aff'd 759 F.2d 792, 795-796 (10th Cir. 1985)

Mutual Aid Association of The Church of the Brethren (MAA) was an unincorporated church-sponsored insurance company.<sup>1</sup> MAA provided Church of the Brethren members with insurance protection against fire, storms, vandalism, and other casualties continuously since its inception. MAA also provided the same coverage to Church of the Brethren structures and insured some small businesses provided they were owned only by Church of the Brethren members. MAA's stated purpose, set forth in its bylaws, was to provide Church of the Brethren members with mutual protective fire and extended coverage property insurance. MAA operated primarily to provide economic and non-economic benefits to its members. MAA restricted membership to Church of the Brethren members. MAA generated income primarily through premiums and investment of surplus funds.

The court held that promotion of religion is not necessarily the promotion of social welfare, and that in view of economic benefits conferred on members by redistribution of surpluses or reduced premium rates, MAA did not qualify as a social welfare organization despite its mutual aid purposes. The court of appeals held that MAA was not dedicated exclusively or primarily to the advancement of religion.

Relevant language from Mutual Aid Ass'n of the Church of the Brethren v. U.S.:

- "We are simply not convinced that a religious purpose is, per se, a promotion of social welfare." Although MAA's policies and practices "appear to be largely consistent with the religious beliefs of the Church of the Brethren, these practices and policies clearly benefit a select few . . . far more than they benefit the general public or community as a whole."
- "MAA does not give succor to souls; it sells insurance coverage. . . . MAA primarily provides property insurance, an admitted economic activity. MAA treats its surplus and profit as would any mutual insurance company: '[t]he ultimate considerations of [MAA] in creating and using its surplus and profit are to provide a reasonable and adequate security margin, and to provide better protection and service to its members.' The presence of a substantial non-exempt purpose – providing property insurance for its members on the basis of assessed premiums – precludes MAA's exempt status as an organization . . . primarily engaged in the promotion of the social welfare."

6. Vision Serv. Plan v. U.S., 96 A.F.T.R.2d 2005-7440 (E.D. Cal 2005), aff'd 265 Fed. Appx. 650 (9th Cir. 2008)

<sup>1</sup> This case predates the enactment of §501(m), which prohibits some insurance activities of (c)(3) and (c)(4) organizations.

VSP contracted with subscribers to arrange for the provision of vision care services and vision supplies to the subscribers' employees or members. A non-enrolled individual would not receive care. VSP provided some services to charity programs.

The court held that VSP did not operate primarily for the promotion of social welfare. VSP's primary purpose was to serve VSP's paying members. Although VSP provided vision care services to non-enrollees under VSP's charity programs, the provision of these services (free of charge to the individual) was comparatively small in relation to VSP's revenue and number of enrollees.

Relevant language from Vision Serv. Plan v. U.S.:

- "Although the words 'exclusively' and 'primarily' have different meanings, courts interpret the word 'exclusively' to mean 'primarily.' See American Women Buyers Club, Inc. v. United States, 338 F.2d 526, 528 (2nd Cir.1964) ("The word 'exclusively' as used in the statute has not been given a strict interpretation ... but rather has been interpreted to mean 'primarily.'") (citing Debs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc. v. Commissioner, 148 F.2d 948, 952 (2nd Cir.1945))."
- "Moreover, it has also been held that '[t]he presence of a single substantial non-exempt purpose precludes exempt status regardless of the number or importance of the exempt purpose.'" Contracting Plumbers, 588 F.2d at 686."
- "The test for qualification under 501(c)(4) is stringent."

7. In re Vision Serv. Plan Tax Litig.
105 A.F.T.R2d 2010-2979 (S.D. Ohio 2010)

Same facts as VSP # 6. The court held VSP's charitable and community outreach efforts were minimal in relation to its overall operations and it was not operating "exclusively for the promotion of social welfare." VSP provided charitable and community outreach services to, at most, 0.8% of its total paying enrollment. Although VSP argued that it aspired to spend up to 40% of excess net revenue annually to provide charity care, the court looked at the actual dollar amounts expended and found those amounts to be insignificant.

Relevant language from In re Vision Serv. Plan Tax Litig.:

- "In determining whether an organization is primarily engaged in promoting the general welfare, courts typically compare or weigh an organization's purported charitable activity against its non-exempt activity, which here is plaintiffs' delivery of vision care services to paying subscribers. See, e.g., Better Business Bureau v. United States, 326 U.S. 279, 283 (1945) ("[T]he presence of a single [non-exempt] purpose, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly [exempt] purposes."); Harding Hospital, Inc. v. U.S., 505 F.2d 1068, 1072 (6th Cir.1974) ("The term 'exclusively' ... means that an organization is not exempt if it has any substantial noncharitable purpose.'). Ohio Teamsters Educational and Safety Training Trust Fund v. Comm'r, 692 F.2d 432, 435 (6th Cir.1982) (same).

III. IRS RULINGS, IRM & MEMORANDA

The IRS has, in some instances, interpreted the requirement established by the §501(c)(4) regulations – that an organization be “primarily engaged” in promoting the common good and general welfare – to mean that (c)(4) organizations may engage in more non-exempt activity than (c)(3) organizations. The Service has based these interpretations on the reasoning that the §501(c)(4) regulations lack the “insubstantial part” language that is present in the §501(c)(3) regulations. However, several internal memoranda have questioned whether the “primarily” language in the regulations is an accurate interpretation of the statute.

Rev. Rul. 66-179

A garden club was held to be eligible for (c)(4) status if a substantial, but not primary, activity consisted of providing social benefits to its members. The social benefits did not further exempt purposes, but because they were less than primary did not prevent exemption under (c)(4), even though they were substantial and would therefore bar exemption under (c)(3).

IRM 7.25.4.6 – Exemption under IRC § 501(c)(3) and (4)

(1) Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)–1(d)(2) includes the promotion of social welfare as a charitable purpose within the meaning of IRC § 501(c)(4). Accordingly, there is considerable overlap between IRC § 501(c)(3) and (4).

(2) IRC § 501(c)(4) exempt organizations generally are allowed greater latitude than IRC § 501(c)(3) exempt organizations. Because the IRC § 501(c)(4) test for exemption is one of primary activities, an IRC § 501(c)(4) exempt organization may engage in substantial non-exempt activities.

GCM 32395 (September 14, 1962)

In this GCM, the Office of Chief Counsel considered a proposal to revoke the §501(c)(4) status of a Post of the American Legion. At issue was whether the Post's operation of a staged theatrical production, from which it derived 90% of its annual income, violated section 501(c)(4)'s requirement that an organization described within that section of the Code be “operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.” Chief Counsel postulated that a revocation of exemption would not be upheld by a court because, “the only way a court could logically uphold such an administrative action would be by saying in effect that the regulations prescribe a less restrictive test than is required by a proper reading of the statute involved.”

In its review of the statute and the regulations, Chief Counsel compared the "operated exclusively" requirement of the statute with its interpretation in the regulations, specifically, that the statute's exclusivity requirement is met if the organization is "primarily engaged" in the promotion social welfare. Chief Counsel then opined that, "the cumulative effect of the cited provisions requires the interpretation that anything less than primary engagement in non-exempt activity by an otherwise qualified organization will not bar its exemption under section 501(c)(4)." In view of this reading Chief Counsel concluded that the statute would support a holding which would deny exemption under section 501(c)(4) to an organization substantially engaged in carrying on an activity for profit, but the regulations would not support such a holding. For this and other reasons, the office declined to concur in the proposed revocation of the Post's exemption.

Chief Counsel also stated that the Service should reach a policy decision as to which language controlled — the statute or the regulations — before any significant ruling position was adopted, particularly if the IRS sought to adopt a standard whereby any substantial non-exempt activity would defeat exemption under section 501(c)(4).

GCM 33495 (April 27, 1967)

The GCM considers the interplay between (c)(3) and (c)(4) when an organization engages in "action" activities. The GCM provides a history of the (c)(4) statutory language and states that recent court decisions (American Women Buyers Club) interpret "exclusively" to mean "primarily." The GCM also states "We do not accept the premise that once an organization participates substantially in activities of the action type, it necessarily must follow that it no longer operates "exclusively" for the promotion of social welfare."

GCM 38215 (December 31, 1979)

The GCM does not define "primary," rather it states that so long as social welfare is primary then everything else is permissible. See also GCM 32394 (Sept. 14, 1962) (no quantitative test on non-primary activities if meet primarily test); GCM 32395 (Sept. 14, 1962) (can do anything less than primary and remain exempt).

GCM 38215 notes that "the implementing regulations have remained unchanged since their issuance in 1959" (then 20 years ago). GCM 38215 states that the regulations were questioned in GCM 32395 and that regulation projects were initiated shortly thereafter, in 1963, but no further formal action was taken on them after referral to the Exempt Organizations Council.

Copies of three memoranda attached to GCM 38215 (Mar. 31, 1978, memorandum from Director, Interpretative Division to Deputy Chief Counsel (Technical); Nov. 21, 1979, memorandum from Director, Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division to Technical Advisor; Dec. 6, 1979, memorandum from Technical Advisor to Chief

Counsel-to Director, Interpretative Division -- each discussed infra further discuss proposed amendments to the IRC § 501(c)(4) regulations.

GCM 32394, upon which GCM 38215 relied, concluded that if the exempt organization's primary activity is social welfare then there is no quantitative test applied to nonexempt activity. GCM 32395, upon which GCM 38215 relied, concluded that anything less than "primary" will not bar exemption pursuant to IRC § 501(c)(4).

Background Information Note 75-05-04822 (March, 1975)

The Background Information Note (BIN) 75-05-04822 (Mar. 1975) cites GCM 33495 (Apr. 27, 1967) for the same proposition espoused supra: that a IRC § 501(c)(4) organization is permitted to conduct as much non-exempt activity as it wants so long as it is "short of being the organization's primary activity." See GCM 33495. The BIN also cited GCMs dealing with IRC § 501(c)(5) and (c)(6) as analogies, requiring that the exempt activity be the primary activity. See GCM 36286 (May 22, 1975) (non-exempt receipts and expenditures were 1/5 the amount of qualified IRC § 501(c)(5) exempt expenditures; if primary purpose and activities of an organization qualify pursuant to IRC § 501(c)(5) then some non-qualifying participation in activities or expenditures will not disqualify organization); GCM 34233 (Dec. 3, 1969). The BIN provides no definition of what "primary" means or how it is to be measured. However it notes:

Shortly after our ruling letter to the organization was issued the Philadelphia Inquirer ran a story entitled "It's Active Politics N.O.W." indicating that the I.R.S. had officially permitted the organization to engage in up to 49 percent of its activities in politics. This story generated numerous Congressional and public inquiries concerning the Service's position on the political activities of exempt organizations.

In the markup of the ruling attached to the BIN, the proposed ruling states (strikeouts in ~~strikeout~~ additions in double underline italics):

In order to qualify for exemption under 501(c)(4) of the Code, an organization must be primarily engaged in activities that promote social welfare. . . Thus, an organization that is exempt under section 501(c)(4) may carry on some political activities so long as the organization's primary activities ~~remain these~~ are activities that constitute the promotion of social welfare.

Interpretative Division Memorandum (March 31, 1978)

The March 31, 1978, memorandum from Director, Interpretative Division to Deputy Chief Counsel (Technical) begins by noting that the proposed revenue ruling "prompted a reexamination of a perennially troublesome question: Should the Regulations implementing 501(c)(4) be changed?" because the regulatory language ("primarily") differs from the statutory language ("exclusively"). The memorandum states "it has long been recognized that they [the IRC § 501(c)(4) regulations] are an unduly broad interpretation of the statute."

The March 1978 memorandum cites GCM 32394, GCM 32395, and GCM 33495 and interprets, as discussed supra, these GCMs concluding that the rule for an IRC § 501(c)(4) organization is that it can engage in any non-exempt activity so long as it is less than primary. "[I]f an organization is primarily engaged in activities promoting the social welfare, there is no additional quantitative test to be applied to it activities that are not promoting social welfare. . . ."

In light of all of this, EO suggested recommending to Treasury that the "primary activities" test be eliminated from the regulations and inserting an "exclusive" test permitting no more than an insubstantial amount of activities not in promotion of social welfare. The Director, Interpretative Division, however, recommended against amending the regulations at that time. The Director believed that it was highly unlikely that an IRC § 501(c)(4) reg. project would be approved at the time even though there was "substantial agreement that the current Regulations are deficient." The Director noted that:

The big difference between the "primary" tests of the respective Regulations as finally adopted is . . . [the] 501(c)(3) Regulations . . . [have more stringent language requiring that no] more than an insubstantial part of its activities is in furtherance of an (c)(3) purpose. Thus, at least, no 51% - 49% dichotomy between the quantum of qualifying and nonqualifying activities will be tolerated under the section 501(c)(3) Regulations, as it seems to be under the section 501(c)(4) Regulations.

He went on to state: "While we believe the test in Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1) is wrong as applied to section 501(c)(3) organizations . . . we are inclined to think it might be a reasonable test under section 501(c)(4)." He further stated that extensive and protracted efforts from 1975 to 1977 were made, without success, to amend the IRC § 501(c)(3) regulations. Additionally, the impact of recent legislation (UBIT and IRC § 527) which have "diluted" the IRC 501(c)(4) exclusively/primarily problem.

Memorandum from Director EP/EO (November 21, 1979)

The November 21, 1979, memorandum from Director, Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division to Technical Advisor concurred with the recommendation of Interpretive Division "that any proposal to amend the Regulations under section 501(c)(4) be dropped at this time, and the position reflected in Rev. Rul. 67-368" continue to be followed regarding a "quantitative test" for non-qualifying activities of an IRC § 501(c)(4) organization.<sup>2</sup> The Director also concurred that the "most serious problems emanating from the 'primary' test have been eliminated by the extension of the unrelated business income tax to section 501(c)(4) organizations if the non-qualifying, <sup>2</sup> Rev. Rul. 67-368 states that political intervention does not further social welfare and that an organization whose primary purpose is political intervention therefore does not qualify under § 501(c)(4).

Report Exhibits - Page 000703

but less than primary, activity of a social welfare organization is business activity." He also agreed with the assessment regarding the impact of IRC § 527.

The December 6, 1979, Memorandum

The December 6, 1979, memorandum from Technical Advisor to Chief Counsel to Director, Interpretative Division concurred with the recommendation that no project to amend the regulations be taken at that time. The Technical Advisor was of the opinion that "the problems with the § 501(c)(4) 'primary activities' test are clearly lessened by § 527 and the extension of the unrelated business income tax.

Measurement of activities not in furtherance of exempt purposes

The IRS has not published a precise method of measuring exempt activities or purposes in any of its published guidance, though three revenue rulings have stated that all of the organization's activities must be considered and that there is no pure expenditure test. See Rev. Ruls. 68-45, 68-46, 2004-6.

Internal training materials have stated that time, financial resources, and number of employees are factors that must be considered in a determination of whether a certain activity constitutes a primary activity of an organization.

for the call--I appreciate it--you and I just have very different styles--I express my frustrations openly and I'm guessing you are a bit more close to the vest. Having said that, I also think we live in 2 different worlds. I live in a more "real" world than yours where my staff can't wait for formal guidance to do their jobs. Cases come in and we need to work them with the information we have. When the c4, 5, and 6 guidance on political intervention came out, folks wanted to know where the 3c guidance was. We said loud and clear, while the guidance is about c4,5, and 6, it gives you information about how the IRS would view the activity that will be helpful to you in thinking about where activity c3s contemplate. That is the kind of practical information we need to provide to agents. These are live cases and if all we can give them is published guidance on the extreme ends of the spectrum, they will get themselves in trouble. That is why said I don't care if we have to caveat--we need to provide direction. In any event, we'll keep plugging away. (-:

First,

Organizations seeking IRS recognition under section 501(c)(4) file a Form 1024 application, which instructs the applicant to provide a detailed description of each of its activities, including the purpose of the activity, how it furthers the organization's exempt purpose, when the activity is initiated, and where and by whom the activity will be conducted.

Whether an organization meets the statutory and regulatory requirements of section 501(c)(4) depends on all of the facts and circumstances, and no one factor is determinative. So, if the applicant organization does not provide sufficient detail to make a determination, or the information provided raises additional issues, such as political intervention or other non-exempt activity, the IRS contacts the organization and solicits the additional information needed to determine whether the organization meets the statutory and regulatory requirements for section 501(c)(4) status.

IRS Statement

Between 2010 and 2012, the IRS saw the number of applications for section 501(c)(4) status double. As a result, local career employees in Cincinnati sought to centralize work and assign cases to designated employees in an effort to promote consistency and quality. This approach has worked in other areas. However, the IRS recognizes we should have done a better job of handling the influx of advocacy applications. While centralizing cases for consistency made sense, the way we initially centralized them did not. Mistakes were made initially, but they were in no way due to any political or partisan rationale. We fixed the situation last year and have made significant progress in moving the centralized cases through our system. To date, more than half of the cases have been approved or withdrawn. It is important to recognize that all centralized applications WHICH INCLUDE ORGANIZATIONS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE POLITICAL SPECTRUM received the same, even-handed treatment, and the majority of cases centralized were not based on a specific name. In addition, new procedures also were implemented last year to ensure that these mistakes won't be made in the future. The IRS also stresses that our employees - all career civil servants -- will continue to be guided by tax law and not partisan issues.

Hi -

I am writing an on-deadline editorial on the Tea Party/IRS issue, filing by 4:30 p.m. at the latest. At the moment, I have three questions:

Why weren't there protections in place to ensure that selecting out groups of a particular political stripe was not possible? What procedures are in place now to prevent this, both in the tax-exempt office and elsewhere in the IRS?

The IRS recognizes we should have done a better job of handling the influx of advocacy applications. While centralizing cases for consistency made sense, the way we initially centralized them did not. Mistakes were made initially, but they were in no way due to any political or partisan rationale. We fixed the situation last year and have made significant progress in moving the centralized cases through our system. To date, more than half of the cases have been approved or withdrawn.

It is important to recognize that all centralized applications received the same, even-handed treatment, and the majority of cases centralized were not based on a specific name.

In addition, new procedures also were implemented last year to ensure that these mistakes won't be made in the future. The IRS also stresses that our employees - all career civil servants -- will continue to be guided by tax law and not partisan issues.

Who has led the investigation into this episode? Is someone else inside or outside of the IRS going to investigate further?

The IRS has internally reviewed this matter. Additionally, this issue is being reviewed by the Treasury Inspector General.

Thanks in advance.

As you both know, we are getting beaten up in the press for all the wrong reasons. Not sure there is much we can do about it--other than hang in and ride it through. When the report comes out, it will start all over again. We need to keep remembering, we did not do what they are alleging. We need to support each other and help our staff get through it too. I did send an voicemail to Cindy and Donna to distribute to impacted employees, who are feeling pretty bad. Cindy is planning on holding a town hall with EO Determinations. Not sure whether you want to do anything with others--if so, please coordinate with each other and talk to Nan Marks before you actually do it. I apologize for being gone during the aftermath, but I can't change that.

Advocacy Feedback from QA

Three cases involved:

2. [REDACTED] 6103 501(c)(4), Bucket 2
3. [REDACTED] 6103 501(c)(4), Bucket 2

All three cases were worked by Determinations specialists and submitted to QA for mandatory review. QA approved the case and provided some additional feedback on the cases.

Overall Comments:

All of the cases were granted exemption. Much of the feedback involves distinctions of professional opinion. An overall theme for the feedback focuses on what type of documentation is needed for political advocacy cases.

Recommendation:

Because these political advocacy cases will receive higher scrutiny both internally from QA and likely by third-party FOIA requests, it may be worthwhile to have specialists document their opinions more thoroughly. It may be worthwhile to discuss HOW to document such a grey area. A group discussion on best practices for documentation could be beneficial.

Relevant prints from their web site should have been printed and sent to the org with directed questions regarding the intent and political activities, how the org is under the 51% limits, how they are not just pushing an agenda and platform rather than promoting general social welfare. While the measure of whether they are over or under accepted political amounts is difficult to gauge we never really challenged them on their purposes and activities.

From QA Manager:

Admin record does not support decision. Memo to file not substantiated. % social welfare not certain.

Comment: Disagree

There is no prohibition to having an opinion for a 501(c)(4) organization. "Just pushing an agenda and platform" can be considered social welfare. There is no absolute 51% primary activity test. Because the law is so grey, the conclusion that the organization qualifies for exemption under section 501(c)(4) is ultimately a professional assertion of the specialist.

Case 2: the feedback is as follows:

From Reviewer:

8. If you have any comments regarding whether the file was appropriately documented please insert them here.

Org has related board. Per research, president/chair of the board is running for state representative for the Republican Party. Research indicates unrelated individual is now the interim executive director. No documentation on this issue.

From QA Manager:

Determ Ltr already issued prior to QA review. Please ensure significant issues documented.

Comment: Agree

The private political actions of an individual are distinct from the organization. A tax law concern would be if the organization was used for the private benefit of the organization. There is no indication in the case file that the organization is being used for the private benefit of the individual. Indeed, the individual stepped back from involvement in the organization. Although there is no tax law issue with this case, the documentation would be enhanced if the specialist noted private benefit was considered and what conclusion was reached.

Recommendation:

For political advocacy case documentation it may be worthwhile for each case to have a comment on considerations of private benefit and whether any private benefit was found.

Case 3: the feedback is as follows:

From Reviewer:

6. You indicated the case was not placed in the appropriate bucket. Please explain what bucket the case was placed in, which bucket it should be placed in, and why.

Case was reconciled to the focused development bucket – should have been general development due to board issues, activity issues, potential benefit issues.

Comment: Disagree

The distinct between buckets 2 and 3 are moot. There is no affect. "Bucketing" is an administrative tool to help assign casework. "Bucketing" does not affect application of the law. (Select of buckets 1 or 4 does affect the case. Bucket 1 is not subject to mandatory review, and bucket 4 will significantly increase the cycle time on the case.)

Recommendation:

Is it worthwhile to continue to have buckets 2 and 3? Should we stop using bucket 2?

If we do rethink the buckets, is it worthwhile to create a sub-bucket to bucket 4 (bucket 4b perhaps)? Such a bucket could note the situation for which an organization does not qualify for

Report Exhibits - Page 000717

(c)(3) but might qualify for (c)(4). Taxpayers in this bucket could be contacted about a possible subsection switch.

8. If you have any comments regarding whether the file was appropriately documented please insert them here.

Agent cited taking the risk for allowing a two person related board, when the Bylaws state there would be at least three members, and when the initial and only board member had resigned without any indication what his future role would be. Overall the case does not have sufficient documentation for determining primary social welfare activities. Only vague and general descriptions have been provided. See further attachment.

There is a general lack of details regarding the activities and operations of this organization. Their response to the 1312 deals mainly with their board – no questions were asked of their activities.

They indicate they will educate on topics including private economic development. There is no description as to what private economic development may be, who this could be directed towards, who might benefit. The activities of economic development can qualify under multiple Code sections, and can also be adverse to exemption. We have no specifics on what economic development they are covering. Given their percentages, if they are 100% educational they could meet C3. They did not distinguish the difference between what was public economic development versus private economic development. Along with this, they provided no copies or samples of media, educational materials, results of studies, etc. They did not describe who would be producing this media, who they may be contracting with, if there was any relation with board members to these companies, etc. This also applies to the energy activities they have described – no further details were provided or requested on content, ads, media, etc. In all, the org has not fully substantiated that the activities they have proposed are for social welfare. These could be for private purposes, business purposes, or even exclusive educational purposes. Further development should have been done to request more details on how the organization was going to conduct these activities, where their expenses were going, and what they were producing to further their educational purpose.

Comment: Disagree

Organizations are allowed to apply for exemption in advance of operations. When doing so, details on operations may be limited. However, lack of detail does not prohibit a determination. Regarding the board expansion, the organization stated they would be seeking an additional board member. The specialist's risk assessment on this issue is appropriate and documented.

Regarding the economic development concerns, it should be noted the organization plans to teach about economic development and not to conduct economic development. Since the organization is teaching about economic development, concerns of private benefit associated with conducting private benefit are moot.

Regarding the subsection concern, the organization's response to Form 1024, Part II, Question 15 indicates the organization will be conducting indirect legislative activity (even though they responded "no"). They stated they would be "educating the public on... legislation to enhance" economic development. As such, (c)(4) would be more appropriate than (c)(3). For this item, as noted above, some extra effort to document conclusions may be worthwhile

12. If you have any comments regarding the questions asked in the development letter(s) please insert them here.

Report Exhibits - Page 000718

Org did not explain what happened to the founder once he resigned his board position – is he still involved with org? Why wasn't a third board member named? Why did the founder resign his position? Who does the org intend on hiring for consulting/media/ads? What is a govt affairs expense? Has this org created any materials yet they intend on using in their activities? How will a two person related board establish compensation in the future?

Comment: Disagree

Do answers to these questions change (c)(4) exemption? These questions appear to be "want to know" questions versus "need to know." As such, the documentation would appear to be at the discretion of the specialist's professional opinion.

Recommendation.

As noted above, we may want to come to some consensus on what constitutes sufficient documentation for political advocacy cases.

18. If you have any comments regarding whether or not the determinations letter was properly prepared, please insert them here.

A copy of the letter was not prepared for the POA. A copy for the new address of the org was not prepared. The current letter is addressed to the old board member. Also, although correct, the effective date contains a minor typo.

Comment: Agree

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

The meeting started off with an overview of the general format for the discussion as well as some comments and observations from TIGTA and our response to those observations.

- TIGTA pulled some cases that they wanted to discuss with us. They did not think that it would be productive proceed on a case-by-case basis.
- After reviewing our spreadsheet and documents, TIGTA took 13 cases off of their lists (as a note both Judy and Hilary updated the spreadsheets during the meeting to reflect these changes). They cases taken off the list are:
  - Case # 4
  - Case # 14
  - Case # 20
  - Case # 24
  - Case # 31
  - Case # 37
  - Case # 65
  - Case # 72
  - Case # 75
  - Case # 76
  - Case # 82
  - Case # 124
  - Case # 125
- According to TIGTA, their problem is not with the facts of each particular case, but rather the "criteria" used to move the cases in the first place. They are concerned that the criteria was so broad that anything involving advocacy or lobbying could ostensibly be involved
- TIGTA felt that it was odd that there were only two I.R.C. § 501(c)(6) organizations on the list. They thought there would have been more.
- TIGTA noted that the documentation related to the decision on whether to send a case is limited (only check sheet and handwritten notes of "tea party" cases). Without more, it is hard to know whether anything more went into the process, like website reviews, etc.
- In their review, TIGTA stated that they only looked at the initial identification of the case and how it was assigned to the advocacy group. They said that they did not look at the ultimate result or any factors beyond the initial identification (though they often reference the bucket lists in deciding whether the screening process was appropriate).
  - TIGTA stressed that their review was limited to the information that came with the application and anything that the screeners identified in making their determination to send something to the advocacy group.

Report Exhibits - Page 000720

- TIGTA noted that it seemed to them that more cases should have first gone to general development. They felt that some cases should have been sent over to advocacy group at a later time, after more development revealed a problem. As an example of this, they cited TIGTA case 12 (EO case 3).
  - In response, Holly stated that there is some concern that the specialists who work in general development may not understand the specialized issues that are presented with these particular cases and may not develop a case properly or even ask the appropriate questions. For example, if an organization mentions holding rallies, the specialist may not think to ask if whether they are political and how they are being conducted.
  - She added that we initially cast a broad net in order to understand the big picture of what was going on. As we learned more, we were able to narrow it down.
  - She also added that the bucketing decisions were not determinative of any final decisions. We issued a fair number of favorable determinations, and have not yet issued any adverse rulings. The impact was that the cases sat for a little longer.
  - She also noted that we have specialized groups for other types of complex cases including group rulings, supporting orgs, etc. Those cases also end up sitting a little longer. Essentially any coordinated efforts will take longer; this situation doesn't occur just in advocacy cases.
- TIGTA stated that they did not think that these cases were treated consistently with other types of organizations, particularly when looking at the evolution of the criteria.
  - Holly thought it was interesting that their list of cases that should have been treated as advocacy cases, but instead were not, was a very small number. She would have thought that if the accusations made against us were true and we were only looking at one side or the other that TIGTA's list of "should have been included" would have been longer and skewed accordingly towards other groups.
  - While she agrees that the screeners used terminology that was not always ideal, she also understood that they operated under several constraints: they only spend 15 minutes per case; they lack the luxury of time to include a lot of documentation/research, etc.
- TIGTA thought that although it was plausible that nothing negative occurred during the identification process, outside people could look at the combination of our initial criteria and the supplemental criteria to make a negative conclusion.
  - Holly agreed again that the language in the BOLO was incorrect, but adds that it was corrected. She has no problem with TIGTA saying that the language was incorrect on the BOLO, but she doesn't think that they can say that the logical extension of the language is that we had a concerted effort to target one group of organizations.
- TIGTA believes that there is documentation saying that these groups were targeted. They base this on the BOLO list, and the fact that the only rationale noted on the screening form is a "✓ tea party" notation. This is problematic for them.

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- Holly informed them that when we have similar cases and issues, the screeners often times call them by a shorthand name, such as what is in their names. She used the newspaper cases as an example. She also added that for many when you say "party" in your name, that is a term of art and it means a § 527 organization.
- Although TIGTA plans to put in their report that a lot of these cases ultimately did have political intervention in them, they have a problem with how the cases were identified.
  - Holly wanted to know if they would acknowledge that we did not target one side or the other.
  - TIGTA responded that they did not look at it in a "right vs. left way." But they will include their results of what "should have gone."

The discussion then turned to comments on the specific cases listed on the case spreadsheet.

- Judy disagreed with the [REDACTED] 6103 organization. She also disagreed with the medical marijuana case because it was more marijuana than anything.
- Holly agreed to send Judy and Hilary's comments on those cases to TIGTA. She said the real concern was on campaign advocacy but it was hard to make sure it was focused correctly on items such as rallies, etc.
- TIGTA said that one issue we discussed previously was when an organization stated "in the future we might, but it won't be primary . . . ." They wanted to understand how we handle developing a case when something is mentioned in that way.
  - Holly said this situation comes up regularly in a variety of area, such as international grant-making, scholarships, etc. During the development process we have to flesh all of their activities that they have brought up to us. If they mentioned that they might do an activity, then it is more of a solid idea than the things they didn't mention to us. It is important that we develop these areas because of the role it could play during the revocation process. It may make the difference between retroactive and prospective revocation. Even if the organization has no additional details, we still have to ask the follow up questions or else we are limited with regards to the revocation process under § 7805(b).
- The IRC § 501(c)(3) cases: Holly mentioned cases # 2 and # 26, and said that there were other similar cases that she did not have the numbers for. In those cases she thought it was important to note that they are § 501(c)(3) organizations, not § 501(c)(4) organizations. As such the rules are harsher/more clear cut. She felt that if there was an indication on the face of the application that there may be some political activity on the part of a (c)(3) applicant, then that should be enough to take it off of the TIGTA list.
  - TIGTA agreed to go back and look at this. They didn't make this distinction when they were looking at the cases.

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- Case # 26: When TIGTA looked at the bucketing list, they didn't see any problem activities found during bucketing. The only non-exempt purpose listed on the bucketing sheet was publishing and no other non-exempt activities were observed at that time. If there was nothing found in bucketing, they wonder why this case was picked in screening.
  - Holly replied that bucketing is different than screening and the purposes/questions behind them are different. In screening, the questions being asked are can we get to a yes answer now and if we cannot, what needs to be done with the application.
  - There was a discussion on organizations making a § 501(h) election. TIGTA admitted that they didn't look at the election in the decision making.
  - TIGTA stated that when they see "no nonexempt activities observed" on the bucketing sheet then they have to question how it was pulled from screening.
  - Holly stated that people, even those who are experts, can disagree. She doesn't know that she would look to the ultimate bucketing outcome to determine whether we were right in pulling it from screening. When we get additional information we can narrow down the criteria. She gave an example of the newspaper cases and how we started out more broadly. She also discussed the evolution of the criteria used for the advocacy cases. In May 2012 the criteria was indicators of potential political activity. By that point we have now seen enough to know that in some of these, the issues ended up not ultimately being political activity but instead inurement and private benefit.
  - TIGTA stated again that they have a problem with the perception of the criteria and the evolution of the criteria. For example, the fact that it switched back to more objectionable language at some point is troubling.
  - Holly noted that what is being alleged to have occurred is much more serious than the classification of the cases. It is also the outcome of the cases. There are still cases coming in and the people who are working them are those who went through the specialized bucketing training. There are two people bucketing and they write up a work sheet and then when that is done it goes to Ron to be documented.
  - She agreed to follow up with Ron on the timing of when a case gets added to the spreadsheet by him.
- Case #2: § 501(c)(3) with an affiliated § 501(c)(4)
  - TIGTA thinks that this is another one where the issue was the criteria itself and not the facts of the case. They said that advocacy could lead to political intervention but that they didn't see an intervention here from a screening perspective.

Report Exhibits - Page 000723

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- o Holly noted that when there is a related § 501(c)(4) that can raise a red flag. For example, we must ask whether the § 501(c)(3) subsidizing the (c)(4) activity of intervention/lobbying. Additionally, the (c)(3) is giving money to the (c)(4) then it cannot be used for political intervention. Judy added that if the funds are used for lobbying then it counts towards the limit as well.
  - o Judy stressed that even for organizations who know these rules or should know them, that we still see a lot of issues in Exams where there is not a clear separation (e.g. shared web sites).
  - o TIGTA agreed to look at the (c)(3) with affiliated (c)(4) again to see if they see any of the issues we raised.
- Holly mentioned that they should also look at the cases involving leadership training (e.g. 23, 85, etc.). There they train local leaders, elected officials, etc. It could be training of candidates for one political party. Noted that #85, our quality people bucketed differently.
  - o Case #23
    - TIGTA said that in bucketing, there weren't concerns of political activity but of private benefit. They thought this case should have gone to general development rather than the advocacy group.
    - Holly discussed examples of political officials on boards and how we need to ask questions about that.
    - Judy reiterated the earlier concerns about general development and explained how it can be problematic later during an examination.
  - o TIGTA inquired into the training prior to the May 2012 training. They also wanted additional information about the change in the criteria.
    - Holly mentioned that Judy and Justin did training in 2011. She said they did a CPE CENTRA session in the summer/early fall 2012. She also thinks there may have even been an earlier session with Justin and Siri teaching it. This was training for everyone.
    - As for the criteria, the criteria were broadened again because agents were raising so many cases. Many of which had detailed apps with organizations who were just doing legislative activities.
  - o TIGTA wanted to know if the screeners were part of the training in May 2012.
    - Holly responded that she believes it was just the agents. The screeners have new BOLD language, but she doesn't think they had a training session on this.
- Case #5 (6103) – brought up by Hilary)
  - o TIGTA said they didn't see the language in the original application that we said was there.
  - o Judy went into TEDS to pull up the application. There are 2 files and one is 908 pages so she couldn't open it. She didn't find the language in the smaller file, but saw that the participants were encouraged to be involved in local, state and federal government by communicating with elected officials.

Report Exhibits - Page 000724

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- Hilary agreed to go back through the file to locate the language. TIGTA admitted that it didn't read all 908 pages to see what was in the application.
  - Hilary sent an email on 2/1 with the language attached. It was on page 3 of their Form 1024, page 3, under their "Community Involvement Program, Ongoing" heading, bullets (1) and (2).
- Case # 7 [REDACTED] 6103
  - Holly stated that low voter participation was listed as a reason. Anytime someone talks about raising voter participation it can raise a red flag because there is a right way and a wrong way to do voter participation activities.
- Case # 8 – [REDACTED] 6103
  - Holly said that the organization talks about organizing around Congressional districts.
  - TIGTA says they couldn't find that language.
  - Judy pulled up the application on TEDS. She informed them that it was in their attachment to the Form 1023, organizational structure. There it says they are organized by Congressional District.
  - TIGTA agreed to go back and look at this.
- Case # 10 – [REDACTED] 6103
  - TIGTA said that in their narrative that they hold forums for people of both parties so they aren't sure why we would flag it.
  - Judy said that we have to look into how they are doing it. Inviting both sides isn't enough. They have to ask non-biased questions. It is incumbent upon us to explore how they are conducting the activity.
- Case # 11 [REDACTED] 6103
  - Holly says that they discuss voter education on a particular political platform. Again this could be one where they are talking about a lot more than just advocacy.
  - Judy said there has to be a weighing where we look and see how much is (c)(4) and how much is other. Sometimes it went to ROO later.
  - Holly added that if you are a screener you are asking if this case is ok now or whether it needs another look. She said that you can't compare that to the bucketing. The bucketing was done by the best of Cincinnati and the best of DC who really looked at it and weighed out everything. That is a very different analysis than the up-front screening.
  - TIGTA wanted to know if we are saying that the criteria are any indicators of advocacy or only significant indicators of advocacy.
    - Holly responded that the criteria mentions significant. But if someone says they are going to do rallies, the question is how much are they really doing. You can't always tell if it is going to be significant at the beginning. If it is a recurring activity, it is impossible for the screeners to make that judgment. If it was a one off event, then no it probably should be sent. But that is different than a recurring activity.

Report Exhibits - Page 000725

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- Case # 21 6103
  - Holly said there was a line in the app at that needed an additional look. They talk about responsive government, accountability, urging leaders to be responsive, educating citizens about where officials stood on the issues. Maybe this is lobbying but it seems like a lot of direct leaning on the legislators.
  - TIGTA noted that this was one where someone wrote tea party even though that terms wasn't in its name or contained elsewhere.
- Case # 49 6103
  - Holly said they mentioned billboards in their application
  - TIGTA thought that it was only a small percentage of what they were doing.
  - Holly informed them that there isn't an exact percentage that tips it over.
  - Judy added that when you are engaged in other types of advocacy you have to add it all up. People think that if they don't say to vote for or against something that it isn't advocacy but that isn't true for us.
  - Holly added in that there is vague information on the billboards, like the expenses they list for it that makes it seem like they may be spending more around the election on billboards for candidates.
- Case # 55 6103
  - Holly mentioned that they are affiliated with a PAC
  - TIGTA said that they looked at the file and they didn't see this relationship identified until after screening. They don't think it came up until bucketing.
  - Judy pulled up the application on TEDS and showed them where the PAC information was contained on the application.
  - TIGTA agreed to go back and reread the application.

Once cases were discussed, more general issues were discussed again such as the timeline for the report.

- TIGTA added that we are probably going to have to agree to disagree on many of these. Not on the actual facts of the cases, but on the framework used in screening.
- Holly said that to the extent possible, it would be helpful if they could acknowledge our perspective.
- TIGTA wanted to know if we had gotten through the timeliness list and the list of inappropriate questions.
- Holly wanted to know how much time we have to look at it. If we have until March, then we will get through as much as we can.
- TIGTA said in theory they hope to have a discussion draft by the beginning of March. But that if we have concerns about the other spreadsheets to give them a call.
- TIGTA asked about the inappropriate questions list.
  - Holly said that Judy made that original list herself and it was not vetted. We can potentially see how/why some of them were asked, so we may have questions for TIGTA on that list or one items we no longer agree with.

Report Exhibits - Page 000726

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- TIGTA discussed the 270 day issue and how many organizations could have filed in court because of the delays.

We then took a break so that Lois could speak with TIGTA

- Lois stated that she was frustrated over what appears to be confusion about the purpose of the audit.
- TIGTA said that the purpose was whether there was any targeting of organizations and of so, what were the consequences.
- Lois felt that the purposes were similar to what TIGTA said, but slightly different in important regards. She phrased the purpose as whether there was a political bias shown in our actions. In her mind, with all that has gone on, where the allegations have come from, and the allegations of political bias for one side or the other, that she thought that is what TIGTA was looking at.
- Lois agreed that the initial articulation on the Cincinnati BOLO list was bad, but said the real question was whether then made us act badly. And it did not. She also added that we have fixed the BOLO list issue. That is a very different problem than one where we say that the list created a problem that couldn't be fixed.
- Lois also felt that TIGTA did not understand the difference between screening and bucketing. She pointed out that these are different processes with different intentions.
- Lois noted that it is difficult for non-lawyers (like our exams and determines agents) who are looking for clear rules to operate in areas where there are no clear rules. In this situation you can't apply black and white rules. So, in screening, if they thought someone else should look at it, the agents erred on the side of caution. She is not unhappy with our screeners for being cautious because after looking at them, many were moved out.
- Lois felt that there is a disconnect between our thinking and TIGTA's, and would like a meeting with them, Terry, and her people to explain the process.
- She noted that our regulated community looks at the approvals to see what we are allowing organizations to do and the redacted denials to see what we denied. It is incumbent on us to err on the side of caution because of the potential impact of being wrong.
- She also discussed the bucketing process saying that in when it appeared that people were struggling, we sent down our people to help talk them through it and to give them training. We are seeing that the process put in place there really did work.
- TIGTA discussed that the period they look at was before May 2012. They looked to see three things:
  - Was there targeting?
  - Were there delays?
  - Were there unnecessary questions?
    - Noted that the delay in getting guidance from DC was 13 months. That wasn't biased, but it was delayed.

Report Exhibits - Page 000727

Notes from meeting with TIGTA on January 31, 2013

- Lois noted that it was important to distinguish between the actions and the motivations between the actions. There is a big difference between bad judgment and bias. She asked if they had any examples of anyone acting with bias.
  - TIGTA responded that at the beginning there was one person who pulled out information on TEDS just based upon the names of the organizations (e.g. tea party, liberty, patriot, etc.). That individual received advice to conduct the search in that manner. They think that searching for names or beliefs is targeting.
  - Lois said that may have been one individual but there was never institutional IRS bias. There was never direction from anyone in management to target anyone. She said it was less targeting than not providing them with the tools needed early on.
  - Holly added that if you look at the list of organizations, not all have those terms in their names. That was not the sole basis for an organization to be included in a list of advocacy organizations.
  - Lois asked whether the whole process was bad if it flowed from one poor choice.
- Lois thinks both sides should ask:
  - What are the things left unanswered or not explained if the IRS was indeed targeting organizations?
  - Where are the places that EO hasn't explained the process/law well enough for TIGTA to understand what we are saying?

To Do List:

1. Send Judy and Hilary's comments to TIGTA on the cases that TIGTA thought should go.
2. Send an updated list to TIGTA with the cases, buckets, statuses, etc.
3. Forward TIGTA the information Hilary and Judy found on the [REDACTED] 6103, [REDACTED] 6103, and the [REDACTED] 6103 cases.
4. Check on how the person managing the status updates on the list checks/verifies the status.
5. Hilary will go back through the language in the [REDACTED] 6103 case
6. Look at the lists sent to us by TIGTA on unnecessary questions and submit comments.
7. Look at the list sent to us by TIGTA on the timeliness issue and submit comments.

I am planning to leave for the airport around 8:30. That way, I hope to be through security and able to join the 11 by phone until I have to board. You asked me to shoot you an email reminding you of the two major points you wanted to make with TIGTA:

1. The report lacks any reference to or information regarding the broader context (such as how difficult it is to determine what constitutes political activity and whether political activity is a c4's primary activity). Without this broader context, the report could appear slanted in one direction.
2. The report contains several instances of speculation lacking any support (i.e. speculation that the wait for a determination adversely impacted org's fundraising, speculation that orgs did not file required 990s while awaiting a determination because they had not engaged in any activity).

Holly

Not political - advocacy 3 types advocacy

you say we intentionally only pulled orgs w/ specific names

*Decisions re: what had indicators of pol interventions & what didn't - RA admitted they had not read completely

Vicki, sharing this with you so you know what I explained to Lois since she is still pushing back. I didn't think a phone call today with her would be productive (although more information on what they are doing would be helpful overall and would have been helpful to understand earlier than these last few days). I think she needs to see the document first as she may be more satisfied than she thinks (other than the lack of categorizing factors).

I thought about copying you but instead just sprinkled your name throughout to indicate you are fully engaged with this.

Susan filled me in on all the helpful info from Joe on both past and pending congressional. What also is coming into clearer focus for us based on emails and conversations these past few days is that there are different "buckets" (for lack of a better term) of work--

- (1) apps that are on hold (all 3/4s to my knowledge)
- (2) prospective exam activity on any kind of c.org doing political activity, for which there is training on 2/23, and as well as (1). It would help me to have a better feel for what projects (and their scope) are on your plan (written or otherwise) so I can better understand your needs, priorities, challenges, etc. If there is a way I should've had that information earlier that I missed--I looked at strategic plan but its light on details (smile)--please let me know so I can do a better job being aware of overall plans and thus be all the more ready to support you.
- (3) Prospective (?) exam activity on 4/5/6s that haven't applied.

I'm not sure about the intended scope of either (2) or (3). And I appreciate that I may still not be describing them correctly. We didn't have an initial understanding of these latter 2 or how you wanted the guidesheet to be useful for (2) as well as (1). It would help me to have a better feel for what projects (and their scope) are on your plan (written or otherwise) so I can better understand your needs, priorities, challenges, etc. If there is a way I should've had that information earlier that I missed--I looked at strategic plan but its light on details (smile)--please let me know so I can do a better job being aware of overall plans and thus be all the more ready to support you.

Having said all that, Vicki and I do have a sense of the challenges you are under here and that frankly you're being caught between a rock and a hard place. We appreciate that the IRS can make decisions to do things without our advice and in disagreement with our advice. We expect that Nikole/Steve will weigh all the pieces here--admin needs and sensitivities--and make an informed decision. Our role here is to advise you and thus them on what we think is the appropriate document to put out for agent use. While much of what you do everyday falls into the highly sensitive category, I venture to say that this has got to be one of the top at this time. Accordingly, our legal advice is to follow as closely to the guidance line as possible in what is disseminated and thus publicly available--formal or not, we all know it will be scrutinized. Again, I appreciate (at least somewhat) the difficult position you are in, but Vicki's and my advice remains the same, pending a different instruction from either our bosses or if Nikole/Steve want to move a different direction. Vicki and I have discussed this very briefly with Bill Wilkins and Erik Corwin at our biweekly and they indicated agreement with our view.

As I indicated, we will be getting you the doc by COB today. The work on hold that understandably has to move forward are the apps in (1) above. (Whether there is any flexibility on timing of (2) is clearly an IRS call.) What we are sending back is a document--following the structure your team put together-- that will clearly help agents gather facts needed to move the applications forward. A "fact-gathering document" as you mention below. There will be a brief mention of application to 5/6s and we can also provide some additional foundational text on 5/6s that could be included.

The key difference is that we are ensuring everything is traceable to legal standards or positions in guidance. The main consequences are cutting back on what is said about 5/6s and not categorizing factors. If you look at it and want to put those things back in, that will be the place where IRS can decide to do more than counsel advises. Since we've not been able to discuss this together with Nikole, we are providing the doc we can support. If Steve/Nikole decide to do more, we'll scramble to provide any final assistance you need from us.

While I'd very much appreciate more information on these matters, I'm bouncing between a number of meetings today. How about we see where we stand after you get our draft later today?

Subject: Follow up

I just talked to Joe Urban who had come back from 1111 after bringing Susan up to speed on where we are on the Congressional. I'm thinking perhaps it would be useful for me and Joe Urban to sit down and explain to you the practical realities of Counsel's position that you don't want to include anything regarding c5s and 6s in the guide sheet and don't like the idea of a check sheet.

Based on what Joe tells me about his conversation with Susan, I think there may be a big disconnect between how Counsel sees our job as tax administrators and your job as advisors to the administrators. I know everyone is trying to provide us with the best advice, and I whole heartedly appreciate that. But, at the end of the day, my job is to deliver the work. I have to do that with or without your comfort and blessing. I can't send applications back or hold on to them because the IRS/Treasury have not put out formal guidance on a particular set of facts and circumstances.

Perhaps if you have a better understanding of what is on my plate and the resources and timeframes in which I have to complete the work, you will be able to get to the place we previously discussed. We are not asking you to "create" new guidance, rather in the context of the guidance we have, to help us give staff a way to think about the issues in their cases. The guide sheet is not an official IRS interpretation of the Internal Revenue Code. It does not reach a conclusion on how the IRS applies the law to a specific set of facts. Instead, it is a fact-gathering tool to assist agents in gathering facts in a consistent fashion.

I know you suggested just including c3 and c4 information in the guide sheet--that just won't work. So, if--as we initially agreed--you can tell me specifically what parts of the draft we sent give you heartburn and why, we will try to lessen the heartburn. Ignoring pieces or not speaking to them because Counsel is not comfortable is NOT an option for me. The work is here, my folks need to do it, and they will regardless of what we give them. Our job is to provide them with the best tool we can.

As we are already way behind on getting this out to staff, I'd appreciate getting your comments on the draft by Friday. Thanks

Below is some background on what we are seeing:

Background:

- o EOD Screening has identified an increase in the number of (c)(3) and (c)(4) applications where organizations are advocating on issues related to government spending, taxes and similar matters. Often there is possible political intervention or excessive lobbying.
- o Over 100 cases have been identified so far, a mix of (c)(3)s and (c)(4)s. Before this was identified as an emerging issue, two (c)(4) applications were approved.

Report Exhibits - Page 000732

- Two sample cases were transferred to EOT, a (c)(3) and a (c)(4).
- The (c)(4) stated it will conduct advocacy and political intervention, but political intervention will be 20% or less of activities. A proposed favorable letter has been sent to Counsel for review.

1 The (c)(3) stated it will conduct "insubstantial" political intervention and it has ties to politically active (c)(4)s and 527s. A proposed denial is being revised by TLS to incorporate the org.'s response to the most recent development letter.

Lois would like to discuss our planned approach for dealing with these cases. We suspect we will have to approve the majority of the c4 applications. Given the volume of applications and the fact that this is not a new issue (just an increase in frequency of the issue), we plan to EO Determinations work the cases. However, we plan to have EO Technical compose some informal guidance re: development of these cases (e.g., review websites, check to see whether org is registered with FEC, get representations re: the amount of political activity, etc.). EO Technical will also designate point people for Detenns to consult with questions. We will also refer these organizations to the Review of operations for follow-up in a later year.

In their discussion, Treasury has been focusing on items that are published in the I.R.B., so this is not what they have been talking about. However, my guess is that they would also want to be seeing items like this one. We will fill you in more during our bi-weekly. The problem here is that we did not see it till very late in the game and, I have heard third hand, there were communications problems on the Commissioner side as well.

Bill and Erik

Just an awareness item for you on something that Steve Miller is talking about with EO on Friday. As you may be aware, over the past year EO has received an uptick in applications for c3 or c4 status from entities that will advocating for positions/issues and in some cases candidates. General issue advocacy may be fine, but depending on which status is at issue, lobbying may need to be limited and intervention in political campaigns may be forbidden altogether or limited.

EO prepared a guide sheet that it had provided to its Determinations function for use in processing the applications, principally those requesting c4 status but also c5 (labor orgs) and c6 (business leagues) status. Last week, EO Director Lois Lerner was in a meeting on the Hill and is talking again with folks from SFC this Thursday. As I understand it, they are asking questions about how the IRS is processing these applications because the IRS folks involved are asking a lot of detailed questions, taking too long, etc. The Hill wanted to see the guide sheet that is in use and also wants it released publicly.

EO shared it with us last week to see if it was ready then to share with the Hill and our reaction was no (a good start, but it needed corrections, additions, deletions change in structure, etc). Our folks worked quickly in the limited time given to restructure it a bit, taking out a few questions that weren't supported by guidance already, adding legal authorities, etc. EO is looking at the revised version and I believe will share with Nikole and Steve to get their take. We'll be talking with them again in the next few days to further improve the document.

We'll keep you posted on general developments, but in the meantime, we've attached the latest draft in case you wanted to glance through it. But in any event, wanted you to be aware of this sensitive matter and how the IRS is approaching it. Will provide any update at our biweekly on Friday.

David Marshall and Amy Franklin, who are working on the advocacy organization cases in Chief Counsel, suggested that we meet so that they can gain a better understanding of the big picture surrounding these cases and so that we can discuss some of the broad legal issues together. This sounds like a good idea to me as the issue is a tricky one and the more collaboration we have, the better.

From looking at people's outlook calendars, it appears Tuesday, July 26th, is mostly open on the EO:R&A side, so I picked a time when 355 was available. David M., if this time works for you guys, great! If not, just let me know what would work better.

Thanks,

With her upcoming vacation the week after next and other pressing projects, I expect that will be the most assistance she will be able to provide to us prior to the 19th. I (and hopefully David Marshall) will be sure to give this paper a close read and get back with you before the 19th with at least some conceptual comments so that we can keep this moving.

Any questions or concerns in the meantime, please let me know.

Thank you.

Hi Amy, attached is a draft of the paper on the (c)(4) primarily standard. The case law section needs some cleanup/tightening, but I wanted to get this over to you for your take. I'll be out next week, but back on the 25th.

Could you please take a look at the reg files for (c)(4) (and perhaps (c)(3)) to search for any clues about why (c)(3) got the insubstantial language and (c)(4) didn't? Attached is an article by Miram Galston that discusses the issue and references an internal memo from Jerome Sebastian, director, Interpretive Division. If we can track that down it could provide some interesting insights.

I've also attached the powerpoint referred to in the draft paper as an "internal training document" that cites 49/51% as the threshold.

Attachments: IRM 7.20.5.doc

Hi Holly,
Attached is the section of IRM 7.20.5 that I referenced in my voice mail. Paragraph "d" includes "Impact" cases and paragraph "x" includes "sensitive political issues" including activities that appear to support or oppose candidates. In the "Emerge" cases both paragraphs support designating the cases for mandatory review.

Even though the IRM indicates these types of cases are subject to mandatory review - the actual process of getting the case to QA is mostly a manual process. The specialist and manager must first be knowledgeable of the IRM requirements, then must prepare a special handling form designating the case for QA Review, enter in the EDS closing screen an "X" to update the case to QA, and then send the case to the QA group instead of to the Records Unit.

I'm also concerned with the cases approved in screening. The screening checklist does include "Political Activities - Sensitive Issues" among the types of cases "not" suitable for screening. Despite this, the cases were closed on merit with no contact. It might be helpful to pull the admin file to see if the applicant fully disclosed their operations - or - if the screeners/specialists need a reminder regarding political/sensitive cases.

On the positive - our research did not reveal any other cases. There's was only one in [REDACTED] that might be indirectly connected. [REDACTED] It appears to have a broader focus - engaging young professionals in the community. The [REDACTED] organization was approved on merit June 2009 as a 501(c)(6).

Please let me know if I can help further.
Thanks,
Donna

- (3) Mandatory review is a review of open (or "unclosed") cases that are required to be reviewed by Quality Assurance. Redacted by the

- Voter registration
- Inaugural and convention host committees

Post-election transition teams to assist the elected official who is officially assuming the elected position.
• Voter education
• Voter mobilizing
• Voter registration
• Voter identification
• Other activities that may appear to support or oppose candidates for public office

Redacted By

z. Other cases selected for review by the Manager, EO Quality Assurance.

- (4) Manager's discretion cases are subject to mandatory review based on a referral by a group manager who believes that a case may have a significant impact. The manager routes the case (still open at the group level) to mandatory review with an explanation as to why the case needs to be reviewed. Quality Assurance should provide an advisory memorandum (Form 5456) on their analysis to the group manager.

Justin,

During a discussion with Holly and Lois a couple of weeks ago, they indicated that you or Judy Kindell would be giving a 1 hour CENTRA session for EO Determinations employees on sensitive political issues and that the session would most likely take place in early September.

We need to send out information regarding our 4th quarter CPE sessions and would like to have the date you plan to conduct the session. Also, if you want to give the presentation only one time, it'll need to take place during the afternoon to allow for the time difference for our California employees. If you're indifferent, we would prefer to schedule two sessions (one in the morning for half of the employees and one in the afternoon for the other half of the employees).

If you could let me know in the next couple of days so we can get the agenda out to employees, that would be great. Thanks.

Discussion probably won't be about specific cases but more of a general discussion about criteria for determining the cases that are in this group, figuring out if there are like kinds that can be grouped into buckets, changing the label we have assigned to these cases, i.e., tea party cases, to something that is more descriptive for the wide net we are using to capture these cases (all cases included in the net are not tea party cases), etc.

Subject: Advocacy discussion

Hi Troy—

Hope you had an enjoyable holiday. I wanted to touch base with you regarding our preliminary take on your staff's position on the application files they reviewed. I know they have asked for a meeting on the shorter list (cases that were not treated as advocacy cases but your team believes should have been) very soon and have given us a bit more time to look at the longer list (cases that were treated as advocacy cases but your team believes they should not have been). All in all, I believe they are preparing for a meeting with Congressman Issa, where they may be opining on their preliminary take on the review.

Before my staff meets with yours, I thought I'd give you a heads up on what we're seeing in the event you prefer a "smaller" meeting with Holly and me before the staff talk. In any event, I would request you be on the meeting with the staff, as I intend to attend from our end. As you know, the issues here are very sensitive and I know we both recognize that they are not as black and white as some of the issues we deal with, so I think it is important that higher levels on both sides hear the discussion to ensure the best result.

So, to give you a preview, we generally agree with your findings on the shorter list—that the cases should have been included in the group of advocacy cases. We had not yet had time to do this look, which we did have planned, so thank you for providing the information. We still plan to look to see if there are any root causes that might have led to them not being included, so we can better address the issue, and will keep your staff posted on what we find.

As to the larger list, we have not completed our review, but, we are not in agreement with your staff's findings that the cases we have looked at thus far should not have been included as advocacy cases. We think the "disconnect" may come from a misunderstanding about why cases were added to the advocacy group. Your staff's analysis seems to focus on whether the application explicitly stated that the organization participated or intervened in a political campaign. Because the legal analysis of whether specific advocacy is political intervention requires analyzing all the facts and circumstances surrounding that advocacy in light of the formal guidance provided in this area, we included all organizations indicating they were engaged in potentially problematic advocacy, so that they would be worked by specialists who have a better understanding of the facts and circumstances to be considered, and who would be able to analyze the cases in a consistent manner.

Having said that, we are concerned that your staff's analysis to come up with the two lists is not consistent. Let me cite a couple examples for you to think about. The list your staff provided indicates that "given the lack of specifics in the application about the types of activities the organization has/will conduct to establish its goals," [REDACTED] should have been included as an advocacy case. On the other hand, after noting that the [REDACTED] "had not begun activities at the time of the application, and there is not enough information about the type of activities planned, staff concluded that the organization should not have been included as an Advocacy case, but sent for general development instead. Both organizations included a general statement that their activities may involve advocacy. [REDACTED] 6103 stated that its purpose is "to promote social and economic justice by, among other things, eliminating racial and economic discrimination in the provision of public and private services, advocating for affordable housing, and increasing the participation of [REDACTED] 6103 in the political and civic life of their communities." [REDACTED] 6103

██████████ stated that they "expect to carry out a program of local 'forums' that will help sensitize the public to the need for greater involvement in public activities."

Another set of cases that puzzles us are ██████████, which your list says should have been included as an advocacy case because it did not respond to question 15 of Form 1024 (Has the organization spent or does it plan to spend any money attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any person to any Federal, state, or local public office or to an office in a political organization?) and ██████████, which your list says should not have been considered an advocacy case even though the application responded yes to question 15.

While at the end of the day, there may very well continue to be disagreement on some cases, I think it would be constructive for us to discuss the apparent differences before we put further pen to paper in a more formal way. Let me know your thoughts. I am out of the office Wednesday and Thursday, but can set something up Tuesday or Friday if you'd like.

Cindy,

Information would be the number of cases and the code sections in which they filed under. Also, if there is anything that makes one stand out over the other, like a high profile Board member, etc., then that would be helpful. Really thinking about possible media attention on a particular case. Just want to make sure that Lois and Rob are aware that there are other cases out there, etc.....

Report Exhibits - Page 000751

I think once the cases are assigned here in EOT and we have drafted a development letter, we should coordinate with you guys so that you can at least start developing them. However, we would still need to let Rob know before we resolve any of these cases as this is a potential high media area and we are including them on an SCR.

Ron-- once you assign the cases and we have drafted a development letter, please let me know so that we can coordinate with Cindy's folks.

Thanks.

Steve

6103 and 6102

Cases are applying for exemption under section 501(c)(4).

Holly accepted the cases for EO Technical. Copies of email exchanges between Cindy Thomas and Holly in case files.

The concern is potential for media attention.

They will be assigned to Group 2.

Could you help to find out where this case is and what is going on with it? We owe Legislative Affairs a response. According to EDS, the case is sitting in the EO Determinations full development unassigned inventory. However, according to the email below from Sharon, QA sent it to D.C. and Liz Ardoin got this case. Does she still have it? If not, where is it: what is being done with it; what are next steps; and, what is the expected completion date?

Gloria Sutton and Eric Hall weren't satisfied with the response provided by Dave Rifkin and reached out to me. Personally, I think it would be best for one of you to respond, especially because of the sensitivity of the case. However, if you prefer that I respond, I have no problem doing that --- just need information. Thanks in advance for your help with this.

Sharon - Could you find out what is going on with this case. Legislative Affairs is asking about it and it is my understanding that a copy was sent to D.C. on 9/11/2012. Apparently Liz Ardoin is preparing a letter.

Supposedly, it is a bucket 3 case which confuses me because I thought D.C. was only working bucket 4 cases.

I replied to Gloria and Eric and let them know that I'm checking into this.

David - I think Dave Rifkin's deck guide needs to be tweaked. I'm starting to get complaints because Legislative Affairs isn't getting enough information regarding their requests.

Good afternoon Cindy,

I was my hope to not approach you again for assistance on an EO Congressional inquiry. However, I have another sensitive case where a congressional office, this time Congressman Grayson, continues to do follow-up with me, due to what the taxpayer describes as a long overdue response from IRS.

The organization, [REDACTED] 6102, states they applied for exempt status in October 2011. Other than the CP 5104 received May 15, 2012, they have received no correspondence from IRS. Dave's response below confirms that the case is awaiting assignment. As stated in my original message to Dave, the organization checked our website and they understand that we are working applications from March of 2012. The organization is expressing frustration due to the fact they applied back in 2011.

In the meantime, I just received a call from the congressman's office. He has has taken a personal interest in this application. Apparently, this organization is awaiting funding from significant foundations. That funding will enable this organization to begin hiring individuals in the Congressman's geographic area--economic impact is now a factor.

If necessary and advised, I will provide the organization with information to explain how to make a request for expedite processing. However, if there is any assistance you can provide, I would greatly appreciate it.

Gloria,

The case was unable to be screened out on merit. It appears additional information is needed. It has been forwarded to inventory awaiting assignment. The taxpayer will be contacted when the case is assigned.

For your info (not external to IRS), the cases is in a category labeled "emerging issues." I do not know what that means, but if things have taken time that could be a reason. This cannot be disclosed to the Org or the Congressional office, but at least you know what I know.

Rec'd CP 5104 May 15, 2012 stating case required development. T/P has checked website --we are working March 2012.
T/P states they submitted their application October 2011.

What is the the status of their application? How long before they know if they will be granted exemption status?

Thanks,

Guys -- I agree with you all -- let's prepare a FAQ that can go on the web and be given to the press office. I think we start with the press office and then work the pros/cons of putting on the web.

Here's my concern -- there are those eager to take the test of the tax-exemption issue to the courts and, if I were them, would be even more eager now. In prior meetings, my proposal that we cooperate with that desire (let's get an answer whatever it is) has not been greeted with enthusiasm at any level. I remain interested in that as one of a number of options, but we have not had the right internal conversations.

Even assuming some discussion of that option, Lois et al. are right we need a quick, plain vanilla, no-news, kinda blurb.

Lois -- I assume these guys will hit us up first thing Monday morning at coffee and in the hallways and not wait for the general session Tuesday. Can you tread water Monday and I'll be firm Tuesday at the 8:30 general session?

Thanks Nan--Cathy is a good one to have involved. Unfortunately, Judy Kindell is at the ABA so she and I haven't had any chance to talk. What you described in the first paragraph is exactly what I had in mind, but understand that the sensitivity surrounding this issue may mean we just have that piece available in our back pockets so we wouldn't have to scramble later, but initially put the softer item on the web or to our media folks. Sarah--your thoughts?

I'm putting Cathy into this (thanks for being mindful of her unavailability! Lois but she has a bit of a window right now and was brainstorming this issue herself). Are you thinking of something like--we've had some inquiries about whether the Supreme Court decision in ... applies to the laws governing political activity by charities followed by a fairly short plain english no which briefly summarizes the constraints (to remind people) distinguishes the opinion and maybe cites to the authority for concluding that these constraints do not violate first amendment rights.

I guess, and this is an issue for Steve and Sarah which I know you've served up to them, the question is whether we take it head on with a general statement or whether we come in softer maybe putting a Q&A on the web site and equipping public affairs with the same Q&A. I might be inclined to the softer approach because so far the public debate does not seem to be running too far off the mark. That is more of a PR call which I happily leave in your hands. (your section of the ACT stampeding--not a pretty thought)

Thanks Lois I was wondering along the same lines--thought a few plain english Q&A's might be helpful. I gave Bill Wilkins a bit of background and also my read that this didn't change our position on the exempts in case he got the question at the EO lunch at the ABA

I'm sure you've heard about the S Ct's decision in Citizen's United that corporations have first amendment rights and the prohibitions on corporate spending in elections are unconstitutional. While I don't think that changes our legal position--that tax-exemption is a privilege and if you want the privilege you have to play by the rules, I do think we need to be prepared to respond to inquiries about c3 and c4 spending in elections. Last November when the opinion was expected, EO practitioners asked if the IRS would put out a press release reminding folks of the c3 prohibition on campaign spending. They weren't arguing about whether the prohibition was legal--instead they were trying to stave off confusion in the event the court struck down the corporate prohibition. I'm sure they will be back asking soon. This also coming on the eve of our hearing on 7611 seems like much fodder for the press. I've asked Steve Pyrek to see if there have been press inquiries, but I am more concerned about folks getting questions on this at speaking opportunities. I know I have a few coming up and it is likely I'll be asked. I know this is a very sensitive issue, so thought it best to raise it with all of you to get high level direction as soon as possible. Thanks

TIGTA is going to look at how we deal with the applications from (c)(4)s. Among other things they will look at our consistency, and whether we had a reasonable basis for asking for information from the applicants. The engagement letter bears a close reading. To my mind, it has a more skeptical tone than usual.

Among the documents they want to look at are the following:

- All documents and correspondence (including e-mail) concerning the Exempt Organizations function's response to and decision-making process for addressing the increase in applications for tax-exempt status from organizations involving potential political advocacy issues.

TIGTA expects to issue its report in the spring.

MEMORANDUM FOR ACTING COMMISSIONER, TAX EXEMPT AND GOVERNMENT ENTITIES DIVISION

Michael E. McKenney

FROM: Michael E. McKenney
Acting Deputy Inspector General for Audit

SUBJECT: Consistency in Identifying and Reviewing Applications for Tax-Exempt Status Involving Political Advocacy Issues
(Audit # 201210022)

The Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration is initiating a review to assess the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Exempt Organizations function's consistency in the identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues. We will be contacting the liaison for Tax Exempt and Government Entities Division to schedule an entrance conference with the appropriate IRS managers.

During the 2012 election cycle, the campaign activities of Internal Revenue Code (IRC) Section (§) 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations have been highlighted in many news articles. According to various reports, the IRS is requesting extensive amounts of additional information from organizations applying for IRC § 501(c)(4) tax-exempt status, including donor information, prior to approving their applications. Several accusations of inconsistent treatment towards conservative groups have been made.

The tax laws do not prohibit IRC § 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations from engaging in campaign activity. However, Treasury Regulations require IRC § 501(c)(4) organizations to operate exclusively for the promotion of social welfare. An organization is considered to be operating this way if it is primarily engaged in promoting the common good and general welfare of the people of the community and not making political activities their primary purpose.

Overall Objective and Subobjectives

Our overall objective is to assess the consistency of the Exempt Organizations function's identification and review of applications for tax-exempt status involving political advocacy issues. To accomplish our objective, we will:

- Assess the actions taken by the Exempt Organizations function in response to the increase in applications for tax-exempt status from organizations involved in political advocacy activities.
- Determine whether changes to procedures and controls since May 2010 affected the timeliness of reviewing applications involving political advocacy issues.
- Determine whether the actions taken by the Exempt Organizations function to identify applications for tax-exempt status of organizations with political advocacy issues were consistent.
- Determine whether the Exempt Organizations function had a reasonable basis for requesting information from organizations seeking tax-exempt status involved in political advocacy.

Offices Subject to Review

We will perform audit work at the Determinations Office in Cincinnati, Ohio. We may also visit Exempt Organizations function's offices in Washington, D.C.; Baltimore, Maryland; and other offices to obtain case files.

Deliverables and Estimated Completion Dates

We will be issuing an interim report after we complete our initial review of the application process. In addition, we will issue the draft report by March 2013 and the final report by April 2013.

Information Needed From Auditee

To accomplish the audit objectives, we require the following information no later than July 6, 2012:

- All documents and correspondence (including e-mail) concerning the Exempt Organizations function's response to and decision-making process for addressing the increase in applications for tax-exempt status from organizations involving potential political advocacy issues.
- Access to case files (open, closed, paper, and electronic) from the Determinations Office. After we select our sample, we will work with Determinations Office officials to obtain the cases we need.

During the course of fieldwork, additional information may be needed and we will request employees to provide responses and documentation as soon as it is practical, but not to exceed 2 weeks from the date of the request.

Special Considerations

During our on-site visits, we will need work space for three auditors, access to a telephone, a photocopier, and supplies.

NOTE: Please ask to see the composed letter before it is issued to make sure it is accurate and professional. Also, someone will need to review the Rev Proc sections referenced. Holly provided them in her email below and

To clarify -- are you saying that we are "holding" the case until EO Exam is finished with the audit?

a) if so:

- 1) Is Exam notifying us when they are finished, and
- 2) can we place the case in suspense status

b) if not, are you suggesting that we close the case and with a no rule type letter? NOTE: I'm not aware of any procedures that indicate we will not rule on a request from an organization under exam. In your email below, you stated "we will tell the org that we cannot rule pursuant to our rev proc that provides we will generally not work applications or similar requests when an exam is pending." Is this Rev Proc. 2013-4 or another one? -- not sure where to start looking.

Thanks.

Nan,

It appears this org is currently under exam. We recently received a request for public charity status determination from this org. We do not want to take any action that would interfere with the exam. Could you please confirm that this org is under exam and has been notified that it is under exam? If both of those facts are true, we will tell the org that we cannot rule pursuant to our rev proc that provides we will generally not work applications or similar requests when an exam is pending.

Cindy

I'm elevating a case identified in Vicki's group related to the political advocacy area. While the development issues within Vicki's group are straightforward, any type of ruling on this case could be impactful. Below is the background on the Acorn-related cases:

1. [REDACTED] related cases were previously reflected on the BOLD and subsequently folded into the political advocacy category over a year ago.
2. Currently, we have two proposed denials under review in D.C. involving [REDACTED] related cases. One is assigned to Ed Pomerantz and the other to April Garrett.
3. These cases contain the same characteristics as other identified political advocacy cases as the applications contain instances of partisan political activity and excessive legislative and mobilization activities precluding approval under c(3).

Note: In reviewing this case with Vicki, the officers and addresses were similar to other [REDACTED] applications I've seen in the past. The officer in this application was one of the original founders of [REDACTED]. Lastly, per Vicki's research, the organization that submitted the Form 2940 also appears to be under audit which adds to the potential sensitivity. I've instructed Vicki to hold off on any further action on the case.

Thanks

| CASE OR ISSUE SUMMARY:Several organizations that have historically been tax-exempt as social welfare organizations under Code section 501(c)(4), because they engage primarily in the promotion of social welfare, have submitted requests to be reclassified under section 501(c)(3), because they are claiming that they now are organized and operated exclusively for a charitable purpose as described in section 501(c)(3). One organization that is tax-exempt under section 501(c)(6), because it primarily engages in the promotion of a common business interest, has submitted a request to be reclassified under section 501(c)(3), because it is claiming that it is now organized and operated exclusively for a charitable purpose as described in section 501(c)(3). The requests for exemption under section 501(c)(3) include either the central organization and/or the group exemption for the subordinate organizations.                |  |                                                                                                                                          |  |
